The 22-year-old Chatham, Ont., native stopped 32 shots as the Voyageurs downed Richmond Robins 5-3.

The fourth-place Voyageurs now have 72 points, four behind New Haven Nighthawks. The Nighthawks have seven games remaining in the regular-season schedule and the Voyageurs eight.

Rochester Americans lead the North with 88 points, four more than Providence Reds and 10 ahead of New Haven. Preston is fifth with 32 points, two ahead of Springfield.

Hershey Bears top the South with 94 points followed by Baltimore Clippers with 80 and Cincinnati with 79. Virginia and Jacksonville Barons each has 53 points, four more than Richmond.

BIRTHS

REID — Dennis and Sue are pleased to announce the birth of a daughter, Sherri Lynn, March 10th, 1974, weight 8 lbs. 7½ ozs. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ken Reid.

ROSEBERRY — Brenda and Donald Roseberry announce the birth of their son, Neil Kathleen, on March 11, 1974. A sister for Andrew Brent. Mother and daughter home and doing well. Dad is pretty happy too.

IN MEMORIAM

BLAIR — In loving memory of Margaret Ellen Blair who passed away March 16, 1970.
Life will only work one way — the way the days are brought to you. Some days as best you can — in spite of pain, in spite of tears. You'll find that everything will work out for your good.
Then, after many happiness if family condemned.
Life will yield its best if lived according to God's plan.
The law of love has never changed and will not change for you.
In yourself you have the power to make life beautiful.
You can make the pattern — you can work the miracle.
You have the power freedom to create or to destroy.
His blessings to reject or to accept.
The choice is yours.
—Loved by wife Rose, daughter Doreen and family.

JORDAN, William J. — In loving memory of Dad who passed away March 21, 1973.
When I would give if I could say, "Hello Dad" in this world of clay. To hear your voice, to see your face.
To shake your hand with a warm embrace.
—Lovingly remembered by his daughter Shirley and family at Big Island.

A million times I've cried.
A million times I've cried.
A million times I've cried.
Since you left me, dear Dad.
But not one single time.
Will you ever know.
How much I love you.
—Sadly missed by daughter Enid and Neil.

WETHERALL — In loving memory of a dear husband, Walter Harold Wetherall who passed away two years ago, March 17th, 1972.
It is sad to watch the road alone.
Where we walked hand in hand.
But to see you in memories.
When the ways of life divide.
You gave me peace and happiness.
Then came sorrow and tears.
But you left me with memories.
Dear.
I will treasure through the years.
The memories you left behind.
Your memory will be kept.
You faced your task with courage.
Until the very end.
God was very gentle mercy.
When He took you home.
His garden must be beautiful.
He always picks the best.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Maud and family.

FOREST — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Leona Forrest who passed away March 16 1969.
God has called our mother.
Away from a world of strife.
To shine among the angels.
And lead a better life.
Safe in the arms of Jesus.
Safe from all grief and sin.
Forever and sorrow.
Where all is pure within.
We miss her smile and sorrow.
And many hearts are sore.
But we shall meet her once again.
On the happy golden shore.

Old Quebec Enchants Man in Role of Guide

QUEBEC, (CP) — A cloud of pipe smoke enveloped Claude as he guided his horse-drawn calèche deer the cobblestoned Quebec City street.

"The municipal government has done a superb job on the Old Town through restoration projects," he said, puffing importum to his horse's gait. "Many old buildings inside the walls were neglected and falling into ruin. All that's changed now; it's a beautiful job."

A third-year art student, Claude defrays part of his tuition and living expenses by working as a guide for visitors who want to tour the narrow, winding streets of the city, frequently referred to as the birthplace of North America.

The first settlement in North America was founded here by Champlain in 1608. It was from here that French explorers set out to discover other parts of what were to become Canada and the United States.

The calèche bounced under the wide arches of the famed Chateau Frontenac hotel to the Jardins des Gouverneurs park commanding a view of the St. Lawrence River, 360 feet below the summit of Cap Diamant (Cape Diamond).

"I find this the most beautiful place in the country," said Claude, gesturing towards the jumble of copper roofs huddled along the shore of the mile-wide waterway. "I've been guiding for a long time and I never get tired of seeing that river."

Claude confessed Quebec has a special significance for him.

"For just can't beat this city for historical and architectural beauty," he said. "These old homes surrounding the park were made to last for centuries. Some are probably 300 years old and they look as if they were built last week."

The horse heaved against the incline of a hill as the carriage passed the fringes of the Citadel, a five-acre fortress built by the British after the battle of the Plains of Abraham, and on to a broad thoroughfare known as La Grande Allee.

Fashionable mansions once most had tree-covered sidewalks, but they were leveled during the last 10 years to make room for modern government offices.

Passing under one of the gates encircling the flanks of the Citadel, Claude turned off to the rolling 236-acre Plains of Abraham, where more than 200 years ago a short-lived skirmish shaped the destiny of North America.

Under a starless night on Sept. 13, 1759, aided by sharp-eyed Highlanders, British General Wolfe stole up the shale slopes of Cap Diamant in a final desperate effort to wrest control of the summit from General Montcalm.

As dawn broke, a reassembled force rushed to Montcalm with the news that British troops had climbed the cliff and were forming on a series of small hills to the west of the fort.

Marshalling his forces, Montcalm left the safety of the stockade to engage the enemy.

The British held their fire to point-blank range. When it was over less than a half-hour later, both generals lay dying but the English had won Canada from France for all time.

Perched at the very summit of Cap Diamant, the Citadel affords a spectacular view of the St. Lawrence River and the surrounding countryside.

From a walkway built into the cliff, the visitor can gaze at the wakes of ferries transporting commuters to Levis, on the opposite shore, or the steady traffic of ocean-going ships steaming toward Montreal, 180 miles upstream.

Turning back onto Grande Allee, Claude urged the horse into a canter as he headed for Lower Town and the heart of the Old City.

En route, he passed a sagging corner house, now a historic site, where Montcalm planned his strategy and built his defence of the city.

It has been converted into a restaurant specializing in French cuisine with tourtieres, or meat pies, having to be sampled to be believed.

The horse plodded into Place Royale, which has been restored to its appearance in Champlain's day.

Inside the church are paintings by Rubens and a scale model of a flimsy barque which ferried French pilgrims to alien shores.

In the middle of the square stands a bust of King Louis same name which in years past was a gathering point for merchant seamen attracted to the hotel's strip shows.

Destroyed by fire in 1964, the building has been restored and its mortar-caulked walls today make up the dominant feature of the square.

Claude urged the horse towards Upper Town and passed in front of the Renaissance-style legislative assembly. The grounds in front of the building are strewn in winter as Place Carnaval, capicius of a two-week period of collective abandon famous as the Quebec Winter Carnival.

"I'm not too crazy about being a guide during that time," said Claude. "The people seem to go crazy. Last year some guy tried to give my horse a drink out of a cane."

Claude ended the tour on a nostalgic note.

"I hope I didn't talk too much," he said. "Every time I do the tour is like a new experience for me. I always find something that I overlooked before. I guess I always will.

"I love it here."

Conviction Quashed

LONDON (CP) — Appeal judges have quashed a lower court conviction of Brian MacDonagh, accused of driving his car while disqualified. MacDonagh was asked by a policeman to move the parked car. He pushed the vehicle and leaned through the door to steer it. But since he kept both feet on the ground while doing so, he wasn't driving, the appeal court ruled.

Ship Is Attraction

LONDON (AP) — The 46-gun frigate Unicorn, launched 180 years ago but never used in battle, is to become a tourist attraction at Dundee, Scotland. The ship was designed to fight in the Napoleonic wars but was not completed in time. Most of its life has been spent as a Royal Navy station at Dundee.

Record Sales

LONDON (CP) — The Society for British Aerospace Companies announced the total value of exports for the first 11 months of 1973 were $1 billion—$120 million more than 1972's total figure. Companies involved manufacture aircraft, parts and engines. The United States continues to be the best customer, spending more than $300 million during the period under review.

Change Recommended In Hydro Corridor

TORONTO (CP) — A route described as just as costly but shorter and with less environmental impact than one approved by Ontario Hydro has been proposed for the controversial power corridor between Lake Erie and a point near Toronto.

The route was selected from among four alternatives by the Solandt commission after 20 months of public hearings. Hydro's route would have passed well north of the one proposed by Dr. Omond Solandt in his report tabled Friday in the legislature.

Dr. Solandt's route for the 500,000-volt transmission line would generally follow the line of the Parkway belt, cost about $309 million, and stretch 97.3 miles. Hydro's route would have been 144 miles through prime agricultural land north of Hamilton.

Dr. Solandt proposed that expropriation hearings be waived and changes made in official planning acts, if necessary, so that a quick start can be made on constructing the line to link generating stations at Nanticoke and Pickering.

Hydro sought government permission two years ago for the project, but was blocked by environmentalist groups, such as the Sierra Club of Toronto, who said studies of the proposal had been inadequate and that many have to take steps to preclude some, part-time real estate salesmen from coming into the industry.

The minister was replying to opposition questions on the subject.

On the matter of housing warranties, Mr. Clement said the wanted to wait and see what the federal government's position will be at a meeting scheduled about two weeks from now.

"It may well be that this province is going to embark on warranty legislation relating to housing later on this year," Mr. Clement said.

He said he thought the government is "going to have to initiate housing warranties if the feds don't."

Mr. Clement said on the subject of real estate salesmen that there are some who profess to be full-time and yet spend only a few hours a day at the job.

He said he was bothered by the possibility that "the entire freedom of the individual agent is being watered down and then the consumer suffering."

CP News Roundup

York Teachers Strike Cut Costs $1.24 Million

TORONTO (CP) — The teachers strike in York region has saved taxpayers $1.24 million in teacher salaries, George Ford, superintendent of business for the York school board, said Friday.

He said the savings will be reflected in a reduced education levy on taxpayers and fewer grants by the provincial government to the York school board.

Douglas Spry, director of the ministry of education's school business and finance branch, said 1973 grant regulations require lower expenditure ceilings and proportionately lower provincial grants as a result of salaries not paid.

He said that although 1974 regulations have not been approved, they likely will be the same as last year.

Meanwhile, the Council of Ontario Universities said in a statement that "universities have agreed to accept whatever marks are available for York County students for admission purposes."

Seek Evictions

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Etobicoke College charged Friday that the Clarkson Co. Ltd., appointed by the courts as receiver for the downtown college, has done such a poor job of management that it is seeking legal steps to have everyone evicted from the place.

J. L. Biddell, president of Clarkson, acknowledged that the firm will seek Supreme Court action next Wednesday to evict the tenants, but declined further comment.

Gets 6 Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — Donald George Kisloch, a retired RCMP drug squad sergeant, was sentenced Friday to six years in prison for possession and trafficking in 16 pounds of hashish, stolen from an exhibit locker at RCMP headquarters.

His lawyer, J. J. Reynolds, immediately filed notice of appeal against conviction.

Woman Hired

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A national conference on women and the law was told Friday that one woman graduate of the University of British Columbia law school was told by a Vancouver law firm: "I'm sorry we have already hired our woman."

Louise Mandall of the UBC law school said she received the reported comment during a check of women graduates.

Plant to Close

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. will close its huge automobile plant here for two weeks in April because of lagging sales in the United States, it was announced Friday.

The plant will be closed for the weeks of April 1 and April 15, affecting 3,500 workers and cutting production by 4,300 units a week.

Discussion Rights Issue At U. of T.

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. John Evans, president of the University of Toronto, was asked Friday by the faculty association to issue a statement on the right to free discussion on campus and his intentions on discipline for anyone interfering with it.

The association request was in response to an incident in which a visiting American professor was prevented from speaking by a group of students.

Prof. Edward Banfield of the University of Pennsylvania returned to the United States Thursday.

He was heckled Tuesday by members of the Students for a Democratic Society, Wednesday they prevented him from reaching a platform to deliver a lecture.

The university's governing council executive committee meanwhile has turned the case over to the school's discipline committee which has the power of expulsion.

Guns Come In

TORONTO (CP) — Cheap, mass-produced handguns are finding their way into Canada from the United States and prison terms should be mandatory for illegal possession of a handgun, a York County grand jury said Friday.

The jury said the guns called "Saturday night specials" are becoming popular in the U.S. for "home protection."

The seven-man jury said "we strongly recommend a better search of visitors from the U.S. for weapons."

Agent Fired

TORONTO (CP) — Treasurer John White said in the legislature Friday he fired Allan Rowan-Legg as agent general of Ontario House in London in 1972 because he was more of a diplomat than a salesman for the province.

"I was personally responsible for relieving Mr. Rowan-Legg of his duties in London, England...because I didn't think he was suitable for the kind of job I wanted done," Mr. White told Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

Blunt Talk

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Alastair Gillespie, federal minister of industry, trade and commerce, abruptly left a meeting with Collingwood, Shipyard Ltd. executives during a tour of the area Friday, saying he was not interested in listening to sob stories.

"We (the government) won't support crises," said Mr. Gillespie, as he left a shocked group of executives, cutting short his scheduled visit by 45 minutes.

Rebuild Hall

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Victoria Hall, the 134-year-old town hall of this community 20 miles south of Peterborough, received a new lease on life Friday with the announcement of a $150,000 grant to continue rebuilding it.

Impeachment Study Helped

Sirica Sends Secret Report to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States District Judge John Sirica ruled today that a secret grand jury report on President Nixon's role in the Watergate political espionage scandal should be delivered to the House of Representatives judiciary committee for its inquiry into the president's possible impeachment.

Sirica said in his opinion that "the person on whom the report focuses, the president of the United States, has not objected to its release to the committee."

"Other persons are involved only indirectly," Sirica said, .

He also said the report "draws no accusatory conclusions . . . it renders no moral or social judgments. The report is a simple and straightforward compilation of information gathered by the grand jury, and no more."

Sirica delayed implementation of his order for two days to enable interested parties to file appeals with the U.S. Court of Appeals here.

The judge wrote that "although it has not been emphasized in this opinion, it should not be forgotten that we deal in a matter of the most critical moment to the nation, an impeachment investigation involving the president of the United States."

"It would be difficult to conceive of a more compelling need than that of this country for an unswervingly fair inquiry based on all the pertinent information," he said.

Sirica said that the grand jury "strongly recommends" that its report and a sealed filing filled with evidence should go to the impeachment committee because:

"Having carefully examined the contents of the grand jury report, the court is satisfied that there can be no question regarding their materiality to the [House judiciary committee's investigation."

The judge said it would be up to the House judiciary committee "to exercise the significance of the evidence and the court offers no opinion as to relevance."

Sirica also said that the judiciary committee rather than the court should consider a request from White House counsel James St. Clair to see the grand jury evidence.

The grand jury gave the report to Sirica March 1, the same day it indicted seven former Nixon administration and Nixon re-election campaign aides for alleged conspiracy to block the investigation of the 1972 break-in at Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate building here.

Sirica's decision is expected to be his last major act before stepping down as chief judge of the U.S. district court in Washington. Sirica, who must relinquish the post Tuesday when he turns 70, will be succeeded by Judge George Hart.

Sirica plans to remain an active judge after stepping down as chief judge. He already has assigned himself the Watergate cover-up trial, which he has scheduled to be held in September.

Seven Arab Lands Lift Oil Embargo

VIENNA (CP) — Seven Arab countries decided today to lift the oil embargo against the United States, Saudian Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said after a meeting of nine Arab oil ministers here.

Yamani said rejection of a formal announcement will be made shortly.

Syria did not agree with the decision and neither did Libya," Yamani said. He stressed his own country as the biggest Arab oil producer will lift the embargo.

He indicated Kuwait, Egypt, Algeria and smaller Arab oil producers endorsed the decision.

Syria and Libya were the only two countries against the decision to relieve the oil supply situation in the U.S., Yamani said.

The Saudi minister gave no hint whether his country would increase oil production to satisfy growing U.S. needs—an action that might help to shorten lineups for gasoline in the United States and ease fuel costs.

Oil experts said it would take between six and eight weeks for Arab oil to reach the United States from the day the embargo is lifted. Yamani did not say when the decision would become effective.

In disregarding the Syrian and Libyan opposition, the other Arab States displayed their gratitude towards Washington's efforts to work out a political settlement in the Midle East.

However, they left themselves open to further disruptive moves by the Palestinian guerrillas who are bitterly opposed to ending the embargo. Libyan Oil Minister Ezzedin Mahruk and Syrian Oil Minister Jaber El-kairi left the meeting looking calm and relaxed but made no statement.

Labor Wants Productivity And Costs to Fix Payments

OTTAWA (CP) — Minimum wages and social security payments should be tied to both increases in national productivity and rises in the consumer price index, the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) proposed today in a 62-page annual memorandum to the federal cabinet.

The congress predicted hard bargaining by organized labor as cost-of-living increases as part of an effort to keep up with declining purchasing power.

It also forecast an unemployment rate that could go as high as seven per cent this year.

While commending the government for bringing in full cost-of-living indexing for pensions in the last year, the congress said it was no happy with a policy that restricts raises to consumer price rises.

"There is an improvement factor, resulting from rising national productivity, which should be taken into account," the brief said. Inequitable income distribution would be perpetuated without this change.

The congress also suggested a federal minimum wage of $2.50 an hour with indexing to consumer prices and productivity. The federal minimum is to go to $2.20 from $1.90 on April 1.

Basic old age pensions should be increased to $150 monthly, it said further. The basic pension now stands at $108.14 and is to rise to $110.99 next month.

Other proposals by the congress include:

—A review of national transportation policies;

—Taxes on oil exports and excess oil profits, increased processing of petroleum products and research into new energy sources;

—Development of a reversible petroleum pipeline for the domestic market between Montreal and the Maritimes once the Sarnia-Montreal pipeline is in operation.

—Investigation and control of private employment agencies which the congress said are making large profits by exploiting the jobless;

—Repeal of the Corporations and Labor Unions Returns Act which requires union to report certain incomes and expenditures. The act is opposed by international unions primarily.

—Government steps to deal with high mortgage rates and land speculation;

—Measures to remove barriers in the labor code to unorganised workers can join unions more easily;

—Continued aid to developing countries and support for black African groups in South Africa, Rhodesia and Portuguese colonies.

Two Killed in Sherbrooke As Motorcycle Gangs Fight

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Five motorcycle gang members were in police custody, two were dead and five other persons were injured in the wake of a four-hour series of battles and chases overnight Friday that ranged from a parking lot to a hospital corridor to city streets.

The five being detained by police in connection with the outbreak of open warfare between the Gitan and Atome motorcycle clubs were corralled in a home re-tired an evening of skirmishes that began outside a lounge at about 10:30 p.m. Friday.

A fight between members of the rival clubs erupted in a parking lot and, when two men were taken to hospital for treatment of injuries, the fighting reflamed inside the hospital about three hours later.

A car chase followed, and Marc Dufetano, 20, of Sherbrooke and Michel Lamoureux, 18, of nearby Cookshok died of injuries suffered in a battle in the street.

Robert Provencher, 20, of Coaticook, an Atome, and Jacques Filteau, 27, of Sherbrooke, a Gitan, were taken to hospital after the parking lot fighting that included guns, chains and baseball bats.

When further battling erupted inside the hospital, one person was knifed in the stomach and had to undergo emergency surgery.

Police chased the rival gang members from the hospital and they fled in two cars, six members of the Atomes giving chase to five Gitans.

The first car stopped suddenly and the second rammed into it. Seconds later, the five Gitan club members leaped from their car and attacked their rivals with rifles and baseball bats, police said.

D'stefano was shot in the head and Lamoureux died in hospital three hours after being shot in the chest.

Philip Demers and Pierre Morin, 23, both of Sherbrooke, were wounded. Drivers by a shot and Morin by glass.

Police chased several gang members on foot, to the house where five were taken into custody.

Sherbrooke is 90 miles east of Montreal.

Bid to Get Arms Fails

IRA Raids U.S. Navy Post

BELFAST (AP) — St. Patrick's Day in Northern Ireland was marked by sermons, the killing of a British soldier and an unexploded arms raid on a United States navy post.

The soldier was killed in an ambush by Irish Republican Army guerrillas in Londonderry.

He was the 875th confirmed fatality in more than four years of communal warfare, and the eighth person killed in three days.

Other guerrillas were routed by guards at a U.S. Navy communications centre outside Londonderry after they invaded it in a hijacked pickup truck. The post relays messages for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization between Europe and the U.S. and has a garrison of about 150 navy men.

The masked raiders seized one guard and tied up three others. But the captive escaped when the guerrillas abandoned their truck and fled on foot. It was believed the raiders were after arms.

Wilson Expected To Win First Vote

LONDON (AP) Prime Minister Harold Wilson's minority Labor government faced its first voting test in the House of Commons today and was expected to win with the help of abstention by some opposition members.

Wilson's first test in the House of Commons was carried out a Conservative motion attacking the absence from the government's program of a statutory system of wage control. But there was a possibility that the Conservatives will not press their motion to a vote because of the prospect of embarrassing abstentions within their own ranks.

Wilson controls 759 votes in the House of Commons, 18 short of a majority. The Conservatives, with 296, could defeat him only if they got enough support from the other 36 members.

Black Diamond Strike Threatened

Production workers at Black Diamond Cheese voted 109 per cent last night to go on strike a week from today.

The 269 workers involved, members of Local 2988, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of North America, decided on such action at a union meeting last night.

Pending the results of a company meeting on Tuesday, the workers can start their strike on midnight Saturday, March 22, following the end of the shift. A union spokesman said pickets could be organized Sunday night with the actual picketing to start Monday morning.

The main issue centres on wage increases and cost of living bonuses. The union is asking an increase of $1.60 an hour over a two-year period.

The last company offer was 45 cents over two years. Base rate of pay at Black Diamond is $3.01, said the spokesman.

Purse Snatcher Assaults Woman

A Belleville woman was treated at Belleville General Hospital for a broken left arm and bruises last night after she was beaten by a purse snatcher on the lot that separates the senior and junior schools of St. Michael's Academy on Church Street.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reports that the woman was walking along the lot that separates the two schools around 7 p.m. yesterday when a youth approached her and made a grab for her purse.

A struggle followed and the woman was knocked to the ground. The youth was last seen fleeing north along Hillcrest Street with the purse.

The purse snatcher has been described as being approximately 18 years old and five feet eight inches to five feet ten inches in height. He was said to have a heavy build and was wearing a bush parka with the hood up.

The purse contained only $5 and some personal papers.

Freed Prisoners Face Problems on Release

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Canada's prisons have walls that extend far beyond the penal institutions scattered about the country.

Only a small percentage of Canadians will ever find themselves inside a penitentiary, but nearly everyone has an opinion, grounded in knowledge or not, as to how lawbreakers should or should not be dealt with.

Prison reform, therefore, is a touchy subject.

With so many people holding beliefs of one sort or another, any discussion of the Canadian penal system is bound to be limited by the knowledge the participants bring with them.

On Saturday, a group of 33 Loyalist College students tried to breach the wall that separates the man in the street from the prison inside.

For more than five hours they discussed prison life and prison reform with a group of inmates and ex-inmates from the Kingston area.

When the discussion started, the students may have been looking for a cause in support, but when the seminar was finished, they had nothing but questions.

In Canada, the number of people going to jail is on the rise. The number of ex-inmates who return to prison is on the increase also.

Some statisticians claim that everyone who leaves a Canadian prison has an 80 per cent chance of returning.

Is the Canadian penal system a failure? What purpose should the penal system serve — punishment, deterrence, rehabilitation?

Recidivism is a desirable objective — most prison inmates will be back out on the street some time — what types of programs should be instituted.

No one had the answers to those questions.

One man who is trying to make the Canadian penal system more effective is Tom Vale, an ex-inmate who runs an employment agency in Kingston for other ex-inmates.

Vale's organization, Stabilize, is relatively new, having been set up last fall. It supplements Local initiatives Programs. Stabilize is designed to help ex-inmates over the hurdles they encounter when they find themselves on the street after "serving time" in one of the Kingston area's correctional institutions.

"Stabilize is simply an employment agency for ex-inmates who want a job in the Kingston area," Mr. Vale explains. "That's the main concern — finding jobs for inmates when they are first released. We spend a lot of time helping to straighten them out when they first come back out.

"We run a house for ex-inmates, but we do it on our own. The boys carry it themselves, paying room and board and doing household chores. Also we go into every institution in the Kingston area to conduct interviews.

"We advise inmates about parole, or help them with personal matters. If a fellow's wife wants to come down and live near the prison, so she can visit more often, we'll try to help, or if an inmate has trouble at home and can't talk to his classification officer, we'll try to help there too. There are a lot of different things we have to do.

"Our work makes it much easier on the individual because he has a lot of other hassles when he first comes out. He has to get back to normal crash and a lot of cases he needs help.

"For example, I had a chap that came out just before Christmas. He was released after serving 2½ years and he had $79.

"When he got out, he had to buy his shaving gear and a change of clothes — that sort of thing. You know, by the time Christmas was over, he had next to no money left. Now, he wasn't able to buy any presents for his family.

"But we got him a job the Thursday after Christmas. He's fine now. But, you have to get them over that hump when they first come out."

Mr. Vale's concern for inmates and prison reform extends far beyond the stage when a prisoner is released back into society. He would like to see some major changes in the organization of the Canadian penal system.

Specifically, he wants the government to cut back on the number of large prisons that it operates. He would rather see inmates segregated by age, type of crime, type of rehabilitation program and number of previous offences. He would like to see the government develop more half-way houses and he would like to see a more extensive use of pre-release programs that place inmates in the kinds of situations they will encounter when they are free — and then have them put out onto the street straight out of the reformatory system.

"Right now, a vast amount of money is being wasted for no constructive reason at all, except to lock a fellow up so to keep him out of circulation for a certain amount of time," Mr. Vale said. "When you read a man to prison you put him in an unnatural situation and tell him to adapt to it. Then when you release him, you ask him to adapt back to something that supposedly is normal. How can you have rehabilitation in an unnatural situation?

"People have been changing in the last couple of years. They are getting a little bit better, but they still have a long way to go. In fact the prison routine trained you for nothing much more than life in a prison. You were placed in exile and were forced to conform to a situation that was like nothing else you'd encounter on the outside. If you changed and rehabilitated yourself, it was simply because you just couldn't serve any more time."

Other inmates who attended Saturday's seminar agreed with Mr. Vale's comments and said that they felt the biggest problem facing prison reform was the gap that existed between the general public and the inmates. Canadians have learned to safely keep men in jail, but they haven't learned how to keep them safely out of jail, they said.

If you solve that problem, you've gone a long way towards improving the penal system, they agreed.

Mattress Fire Overcomes Man

TRENTON — A mattress fire broke out in a third floor room of the Gilbert Hotel Sunday at 8:20 p.m.

Walter Hawrylciw, who lived in the room while working at Bata wa, was overcome by smoke and taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital.

The cause of the fire is under investigation by the Trenton Fire Department.

An estimate of the smoke and water damage to the room has not yet been determined.

Station Wagon Sheers Posts

PICTON — A Brampton motorist escaped injury on Saturday night when his station wagon went out of control striking five fence posts on Highway 62.

Ronald Cowan, 32, was southbound when he lost control of his vehicle allegedly because of a defect in the steering mechanism. The station wagon sheered off the posts and 165 feet of wire fencing valued at $135. Total damage to the Cowan vehicle was estimated at $400.

Livestock Fire Victims

BOPHESBURGH — Twenty-five head of cattle were destroyed early Saturday morning when fire levelled a farm barn owned by Howard Smith of RR 2, Picton.

Also lost in the blaze were two sows, each with a litter of pigs, two chickens, and a dog.

Car Slides Into Ditch

WAUPOOS — A Kingston woman was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital early Sunday morning following a one-car collision on county road eight near Waupoos.

Admitted McMahon, 18, driver of the vehicle, was treated for head cuts and released.

Her car apparently went out control when the car left the road and slid into a ditch. The accident occurred at 1:45 a.m.

Two Cars, House Damaged

PICTON (Staff) — Damage estimated at $1,500 resulted here Saturday evening when a Mississauga motorist collided with a parked car driving it into the doorway of a Picton residence.

Rodney Bullock, Mississauga, was westbound on Bridge Street when he failed to negotiate the turn at the foot of the town hill. His car crossed Union Street and collided with a parked vehicle owned by Robert Matthews, 40 Union Street. The Matthews car was forced into the doorway of the residence of Barton Reid.

Mr. Bullock was unhurt but damage to his car was estimated at $500, to the parked vehicle $300, and to the house, $600.

Powerful Performance

The 60 talented young people of Trenton Sing Out provide lively entertainment with a choreographed musical performance. The vocal harmonies are supported by a back-up band consisting of piano, trumpet, trombone, clarinet, two guitars and two complete sets of drums. The popular group was formed by members of group, now consists of General Director George Panelas, Production Director Chris Dewsbury, Treasurer Carolyn Moles and Secretary Robert Miller. They are part of a larger committee that meets to produce the show formal. The production director, in conjunction with the choreographer and director, sets up the show and determines the content and presentation.

"The sound is hard to classify," said General Director George Panelas, a student at Bayside Secondary School. "We do different songs . . . soft, moody songs, lively ones . . . we try to keep it varied."

"It's not hard rock, or country and western, or classical, or jazz...it's different," said Mr. Panelas. "It doesn't fit into a particular category."

The sound is, however, definitely enjoyable, a well organized mixture of energy and tranquility in solo and group presentations, the coordination of harmony and musical background given these 60 talented individuals a single group presence. Sound mixing and lighting control add atmosphere and professional quality to each performance.

Trenton Sing Out is now at work planning an eighth anniversary show at Bayside Secondary School for April 6 and 7.

Amateurs' Performance Polished

By STEVE CAMPBELL

Love, honesty and unselfishness form the basic dream of many young people but 60 local ones have also incorporated these ideals into a powerful musical performance.

Trenton Sing Out is their name and these ideals are part of the 33-page constitution that governs them. They are a combination of civilian and CFB Trenton service personnel dependents who sing and dance in energetic public performances.

The group was formed eight years ago as an offshoot from Up with People, a national young people's singing group that appeared in Trenton at that time.

Their popularity has led to performances in Lake Germany; Syracuse, New York and across Canada from Summerside, P.E.I. to Cold Lake, Alberta.

Sing Out is sponsored by CFB Trenton, which provides the group with a building for practices and supplies them with transportation. As a non-profit organization, they charge no set fee and operate on donations ranging from $20 to $40 for a performance. The money earned through their engagements enters a general fund and is used for equipment such as microphones, amplifiers, floodlights and theatrical controls for lighting.

In Madoc Township

Community Use of School Studied

MADOC — Brian Taylor of Kitchener, has been making himself known throughout Madoc township the past couple of weeks.

A second-year community college student, Brian has been working out of the township's Central School conducting a survey on community use of schools. Its part of a work-experience program required by the recreation course he is taking at Conestoga College.

Purpose of the survey is to define taxpayers' interests and ideas on community involvement with the school. Questionaires were mailed all residents. Brian also rode school buses to see where the children live. He then attended personal in-depth opinions interviews to gather facts. From these visits, he recorded suggestions and comments received. Some of the research was done by phone, as many people called the school with special queries.

Questionaires have been slow returning. But as they arrive, Brian examines them individually, filing them for an overall summary. A general report will be made at a meeting planned for March 14 when it is hoped a good community representation will exchange ideas.

Some suggestions made during the survey have already been acted upon, says the student.

Township school principal, Richard Mowat, instigated the idea of the survey, and it was through Mr. Mowat and Dave Smith, of the Hastings County board of education, that the project was organized. Mr. Mowat feels that the people of the community are the getting full benefit of the school — the taxpayer's building.

A survey of this type should serve in a two-fold purpose; liaise administration with (1) To let people know that community use. (2) To familiar the school is available for public needs for the facilities.

Brian said a number of people do not know that all the signed documents and other formalities of a few years ago are no longer required to obtain use of the school for a community purpose. Often, a phone call to the school principal the day before the event, is enough to obtain use of the building. A caretaker must be on hand for the duration of the event. This service is provided for all non-profit organizations. However, there is a small charge for the janitorial services to family gatherings, anniversary parties and other similar events.

Brian reports finding general interest in use of school facilities by the people throughout the township because of proximity to their homes. Use of the school is accepted for almost any activity, as long as it is within reason.

Major objective of opening up the building is to create better communication and cooperation between parents and the school. The end result would be a deeper interest in the children's progress and their activities.

Weekend Accident Toll Heavy

TWEED (Special) — Three persons were admitted to hospital and three others suffered cuts and bruises in the result of weekend highway accidents in the area.

Admitted to Belleville General Hospital on Saturday was Mrs. Karen Lawton of Hamilton, who suffered a fractured vertebra when her husband's car went off the road on Highway 7, nine miles east of Actinolite. Mrs. Lawton today was reported in satisfactory condition. The couple's two teenaged daughters were treated and released.

Following another one-vehicle accident on Highway 7, this one six miles west of Kaladar, a westbound car driven by Garry Decarie, 24, of Verner, and a passenger, Gail Robinson, 17, of Navan, were taken to Perth and Perth Memorial Hospital. Provincial police said the car went off the road on a slippery curve and struck a rock face.

Also Saturday morning, a van driven by Gary T. Carr, 20, of Lombardy, went out of control and rolled into the ditch on Highway 7 east of Madoc. The driver was treated at the scene for cuts and bruises by a passing doctor. Damage to the van amounted to about $1,000.

On Sunday, five people escaped injury on Highway 62 when a car driven by Albert D. Crocker, 25, of Scarborough, went out of control on the north of the Bridge Road, resulting in $1,000 damage to the vehicle. The driver was charged by provincial police with careless driving.

The Radicals Again

What is happening on Canadian university campuses. Within a few short weeks radical left-wing students and academics have prevented the taping of the CBC program "Under Attack" (which incidentally used to provide a forum for all shades of opinion) and an address by a conservative U.S. professor at the University of Toronto on the grounds he is "an academic racist."

And Professor Edward Banfield, former chairman of President Nixon's task forces on urban affairs and model cities, was unable to give his Toronto address when members of the so-called Students for a Democratic Society occupied the speakers' podium.

What makes this action even more incredible is that it was done with impunity, even after the speaker was escorted to the place where he was to speak by five university policemen, pleas for a hearing by the head of the political science department, and sales rattling by university president John Evans who said: "We cannot tolerate a small group using force to dent freedom of expression."

In the event, the radicals got their way and a member of the university's history faculty, also a member of the SDS, when asked what his reaction would be if right-wing-ers forcibly barred a left-wing speaker, replied: "We wouldn't let them," adding that the radical right at U of T was not strong enough to try such a thing anyway.

Now who in our society is sufficiently roused over this sort of conduct to take action — at the very least to write to the Prime Minister or to his MP?

Does the business community care, whether in Toronto or Belleville? Do the Chambers of Commerce, and the service club people care sufficiently? Or are they, as we suspect, too politically apathetic, too immersed in the belief that "it can't happen here" to do anything? Similiarly, is the public at large so buried in the sand of smug, easy-going ways to be even aware of the threat to our liberties that this sort of thing represents?

Finally, what about the RCMP? Is this force, with one of its prime responsibilities the security and integrity of the nation, planning any action?

We are not suggesting Canada becomes a police state . . . but the authorities nevertheless should keep tabs on those who would make of this country a police state of another and infinitely more sinister stamp. And if they want to know who some of these radicals are, their pictures appeared in The Globe and Mail the other day.

Youthful Initiative

Science Fairs are a great stimulus for the modern student and we see where a 14-year-old miss, Bonnie Fyzz, came up with what was considered as one of the most ingenious exhibits at the Kinsmen Science Fair in Picton — a pedal-operated record player.

In the 9th grade at Picton Collegiate, Bonnie said: "Well I enjoy bicycling, and I enjoy music, so with the energy crisis I thought of combining the two." The Picton Gazette says she had help in the early stages of the two-month project in order to learn welding techniques, but finished the job herself.

One further thought in this context. Since the Science Fairs are so successful, why not similar competitions in the realm of art, not to mention poetry, short story writing, to mention some possibilities.

UK Minority Government Grapples with Many Problems

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

British fair play which seems to have surfaced after a very bitter election plus the intense dislikeness of the country have been reasons enough to make Prime Minister Wilson started on his way.

Goodness knows his minority government will have a tough enough time as is, given the wild promises which Labor made in opposition about nationalization of basic industries and the equally wild party standings in Parliament.

No British prime minister has been in Mr. Wilson's dilemma since 1929 when his own Labor party was scourging from the kind of role the Liberals have put 1974 to become a major political force.

That's too far back for the living memory of most British voters. So the pressing parliamentary deadline is by all indications and purposes a unique one to them.

Mr. Wilson has received the tacit support of the Conservatives to move the immediate measures. He gave the miners slightly better than they expected, somewhat to Opposition Leader Heath would have had to do in the long run.

Now it remains to be seen if other depressed sectors of the British working force will do what Heath feared and demand equivalent pay hikes. And they would be inside their demands of the party which relies on the British worker for votes and support.

We really will know if and when they come up in Parliament are going to be Wilson's genuine tests of endurance. These include massive industry nationalization, ending once and for all the unpopular Tory-inspired Industrial Relations Act to where it stands now, and irrevocably pledged.

And then there is reconciling the terms of British entry into the European Common Market which will take months and requires no early progress report in the Commons by Mr. Wilson unless under pressure to submit one.

For similarly Prime Minister Wilson has shown much political skill in giving the key cabinet posts to so-called "moderate" Laborites (and among them some "complainers" as well).

These include Callaghan, Healey, Jenkins, Michael Foot (not quite so moderate but a man who really can throw punches).

He has also tread a very soft path where nationalization of the obviously very large North Sea oil and gas deposits are concerned.

Oil spells oil he should since according to London's Financial Times, Britain has two trump cards in the struggle to regain economic equilibrium, the Middle East oil and the high quality British goods from successful pound devaluation and resources.

These could not only make her self-sufficient in fuel for the first time since the earliest years of the industrial revolution in the last century, but a net exporter of fossil fuels.

Finally for Canadians who have seen more than half a dozen minority governments come and go since 1963, one which have introduced much of this country's modern social legislation, the prospects for Mr. Wilson's survival look good.

There were factions and tactful party manoeuvres after the British election results that observer wins with his minority government and considerable political leaders in the same situation.

Not indeed Harold Wilson. If anything brings him down, it could be a whiff of his old arrogance, à la Heath, that he still knows best.

"She's all yours, Harold!"

At Last: A Look at the Legal Side of Marriage

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The legal side of marriage is at last attracting some of the attention that normally goes to what might be called the romantic side.

A number of Provinces are re-examining their laws on property rights in marriage—a question that has captured headlines as a result of a Supreme Court of Canada ruling that an Alberta rancher's wife could not claim an interest in her husband's real property and business.

In Ontario, for example, a commission on law reform has recommended "a radical departure" from existing principles" so that the law would recognize marriage as an economic union of two equal partners.

The law-reform commission's proposals take aim at the problems that arise when a marriage breaks down in separation or divorce.

But a much larger number of marriages end naturally by death—most frequently of the husband—and a much larger number of avoidable problems arise when that happens.

The first and most obvious means of reducing those problems is for both husband and wife to make a will. Yet one out of three Canadian does not have a will.

Some people tell themselves they don't need a will until they have children, or they believe that the law will see that the entire estate passes on to the surviving spouse.

It's true that provincial legislation, such as Ontario's Devolution of Estates Act, lays down rules for the distribution of the assets of those who die without a will.

But it is not a straight-forward matter—legal cases seldom are—and the process takes a good deal of time.

What's worse, the form-filling, the red tape and the delays come just when the widow is under emotional strain.

And any saving in lawyers' fees achieved by not making a will are often more than eaten up by the fees involved in winding up such an estate.

Where there is a will, a widow may obtain up to $2,500 almost immediately from each of her husband's bank accounts, by presenting a notarial copy of the will. A ready source of cash is often a vital necessity at such a time.

But before an emergency arises, husband and wives should have an up-to-date list not only of the family bank accounts but also of assets as well including their location and their approximate value.

The will should be specific about the disposition of those assets, including such important but easily forgotten assets as life insurance. Changing the registration from the husband's name to the widow's name, or retires air-tight legal proof of the marriage, the death, payment of death duties and so on.

Making a will may not be much fun, since it is a reminder of an unpleasant but inevitable fact of life.

But neglecting the task only leads to much more unpleasantness. Any estate, no matter how modest in size, represents the work of a lifetime—and that deserves a will.

MP Wants Senate Abolished

By KEN POLE
OTTAWA (CP) — Abolish the Senate! The merest hint of such talk is enough to anger the honorable members of the upper house yawning with boredom or spluttering with anger.

The old-timers usually yawn. The newcomers usually sputter. That's because Stanley Knowles has wanted to eliminate the Senate almost from the time he first became a member of Parliament, in 1942.

The gaunt New Democrat from Winnipeg North Centre is a fixture on Parliament Hill. Yet he says Parliament is an institution long overdue for change.

His main complaint about the 102-seat Senate is that "once they're there, they're free agents not responsible to anyone, even the prime minister who appoints them."

Hall jokingly, he said in an interview Thursday night that people have been trying to have the upper house done away with "ever since it was formed."

That has been New Democratic Party policy, and that of its fore-runner, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, for many years. Mr. Knowles has been trying to do it through private member's bills for about 10 years. None have gone beyond second reading and a latest one likely will suffer the same fate.

"It just doesn't fit with a democracy to have people in the law-making process who aren't responsible to anyone but themselves," he said.

He has trouble reconciling the Senate's work with its $2.8-million budget in the 1974-75 fiscal year.

"The 96 or so people involved in committees do good work, but we don't need 100 for the work that 25 do."

Why not elect the Senate? he says the usual complaint of the Canadian parliamentary machinery even further.

Rumors that Mr. Knowles, 63, has been offered a Senate seat have been around almost as long as his campaign to abolish the Senate.

"It's been offered in what I took to be jest. I even told one prime minister 'I'd be happy if you'd make the appointment so I could turn it down and prove myself to the press.'"

Final reading of the by-law authorizing the borrowing of $215,000 for the construction of the Sir Winston Churchill Public School was given by city council, Monday. Inflation Out of Hand As Price Index Soars

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

With the latest jump in the consumer price index, inflation in Canada appears to be getting out of hand.

The cost of living rose by one full percentage point in February, compared with four-fifths of a point in January.

But the average price of food—that most essential of the necessities of life—advanced 2.8 per cent, or more than twice the January increase of 1.2 per cent.

The sharp rises in prices of gasoline and other petroleum products, that are just around the corner, will boost transportation costs and thus have an impact on almost every component of the cost of living.

But does anybody care enough to take a stand against the rapidly increasing erosion of Canadians' purchasing power?

The federal government believes it has done its duty by introducing the principle of "indexing" wherever possible—and the like in line with the rise in the cost of living. Beginning this year, personal income tax exemptions for all taxpayers are being increased annually on a similar scale.

Indexing offers relief of one sort, but it is no cure. Instead, it promotes still more inflation.

The government has also issued ferocious denunciations of profiteering by corporations, but with no action to curb the worst excesses.

Have profits been abnormally high?

You bet they have. Over the past year or two, the quarterly figures show some relatively bigger gains being chalked up.

Business offers these defences of its profit record:

—Big profits in good years are needed to offset small profits in bad years.

—Over the long term, profits have risen less than wages or government revenues.

The president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, Keith H. Rapsey, says clear figures be had gathered on increases since 1968.

In those years—nearly a quarter-century—Canada's population has grown by 42 per cent and gross national product by 226 per cent.

Consumer prices have risen 70 per cent, while hourly wages in manufacturing 276 per cent, after-tax corporate profits 230 per cent, and government spending (all three levels) 190 per cent.

Statistics can always be interpreted in a variety of ways (and it has year other than 1959 might change the picture).

But it is clear that government spending of tax revenues has grown far out of proportion to the capacity of the economy.

The very process of inflation has increased tax collections to the point of embarrassment—and Ottawa must unload its riches with an array of hare-brained, unproductive spending projects ranging from unneeded insurance benefits for the voluntarily unemployed to outright unnecessary airports.

Kissinger's Foot in Mouth With Attack on Allies

By CY FOX
BRUSSELS (CP) — Having helped bungle relations with Africa Secretary Henry Kissinger seems to have some cause for concern that his efforts to forge alliances are unlikely to remove what appears to be a widening split in transatlantic relations.

The gravity of the situation is regarded here in the wake of Kissinger, a skilled diplomat, publicly criticized allies of the kind of co-operation and for striving for self-assertiveness that, he claims, has already been costly to both sides of the Atlantic.

Kissinger's appearance to have pulled back a bit with his acknowledgment that he had been "somewhat overbearing in the Atlantic dialogue" through his statement questioning the legitimacy of European governments.

It is true that Europe has suffered through two world wars and that historical memory question whether some of the countries involved have fully recovered from the trauma, but argument over legitimacy of governments is based on the view that when wars bring great devastation there inevitably is revolution and the defeated become meaningless. The shock of defeat and occupation is not the only country entering such a war ever recovers.

While Kissinger claims that is what he meant, it is not exactly the way it was publicly taken with other statements he made in Europe, such as the bigger foreign policy problem for the U.S. than its enemies—it is Europe's problem—and the inevitably unhappy shock that is felt by a country that has been finally drove himself to the point of voicing his bitter criticism in public.

One aspect of that unhappiness obviously relates to difficulties Kissinger has had in trying to get unified support for his policy in dealing with the Arab countries on the sensitive oil issue. Europe, particularly France, appears determined to follow its own separate course while some member countries continue to pay lip service to Kissinger's efforts.

Undoubtedly, the Arab oil embargo played a role with American foreign policy. Not only Western Europe but also Japan immediately slipped out of the American shadow to plead their own cases for a better Arab oil deal, even to the point of changing their basic approach to the Middle East conflict.

But whether Kissinger gained anything by his public criticism of Western Europe appears doubtful. His grand design of a new Atlantic Charter, strengthening relations between Europe and the U.S. and Canada, seems to have turned to dust. The grand tour President Nixon had planned through Europe has postponed and perhaps even pigeonholed forever.

Kissinger may have been bitter about the general lack of response to his proposals, but it undoubtedly he is aware of the basic reasons behind disquiet, a shadow of scandal settling over the White House. The growing suspicion of what lies behind every American foreign policy move.

A Hearing?

Editor,

The Intelligencer

I recently contacted Ald. Jack Ireland to express my concern that the city's move concerning the bylaw was aimed at stifling those who wish to appear before council with matters of merit to them. I was amazed when this gentleman flatly stated as far as he was concerned, the object was to make the process as difficult as possible.

As the present bylaw provides no right as such for citizens to be heard I feel the priority should be aimed at correcting this deficiency rather than worsening it.

It now appears that what the exercise is all about is for citizens to be like the three monkeys. To see nothing, hear nothing and say nothing.

If this council passes any form of bylaw that in any way obstructs any citizen, taxpayer or not, from presenting his elected representatives without being bothered by restrictions that only allow him to say those things that they want to hear, they should be booted out of office.

Hamilton Man Found Guilty

A Hamilton man Gordon Allan Miller has been found guilty in provincial court, of three charges of fraud, possession of stolen goods and failing to appear in court for a trial in 1972.

The fraud charges stemmed from an incident in 1972 in which Miller sold a used 1964 tandem truck that he did not own to a Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., farmer for $2800.

The possession charge arose from a case in Oct. 1972 in which Miller was found by Belleville police, to have a variety of goods in his possession, including a rifle, some ammunition, tires, and some camping gear, that had been stolen from Maislin Transport Ltd.

The fail-to-appear charge arose from Miller's failure to show up in court for a Nov. 22 trial on the possession charge.

Judge J. L. Clendenning remanded Miller in custody, until April 22 pending the preparation of a pre-sentence report.

Consumer Buy-Line

Ontario

Ontario law says You're an adult at age 18

As a teenager, your 18th birthday is pretty important. This is the age when Ontario law considers you old enough to make decisions for yourself. You are able to vote. You no longer have to have parental consent to enter into legally binding auto contracts. You are on your own. You are responsible for your debts. You are an adult.

How you handle your new responsibilities is up to you. The consumer marketplace can be very seductive. Knowing your way around is essential. You must become familiar with laws designed to protect you. You must know how to avoid various consumer pitfalls. Common sense is your best defence.

Buying pitfalls

- Free gifts are rarely free. The costs are hidden in the inflated price of the main purchase. Always shop around and compare prices for the best buy.
- Be suspicious of any goods, services or offers that sound too good to be true. Watch out for hidden gimmicks.
- Check out the local reputation and the financial standing of all businesses especially those with unfamiliar names which use a box mailing address and have no listed telephone number.
- If an advertising message is difficult to follow or understand, chances are there is an attempt to bamboozle you.
- Be suspicious of phrases such as "factory to you", "farm to you", because shoppers rarely have access to the source of supply.
- Be careful when you see comparisons which are not substantiated, for example, "Our stereo is the best", "Our prices are the lowest". Compare, check and shop around before buying.
- Before buying anything, check and substantiate all unrealistic claims such as "Our stereo tapes will last a lifetime".
- Watch out for beautiful photographs: the super size Roman bath salon may be merely an illustration and not part of the facilities at a health or beauty club.
- Don't buy unlicensed cars sold without fitness certificates. The $250 you pay for the car can grow quickly to $500 by the time a mechanic makes it roadworthy and you have obtained insurance.
- Be aware, when you and a friend sign a lease for an apartment, you will be responsible for the terms of the lease if your friend departs.
- When you reach 18 you might have trouble proving your age. The Age of Majority card has your photograph on it and is one of the best methods of proving your age and identification. You can obtain an application from any Ontario liquor store. Above all, remember that your signature on a contract is binding.

Avoid these pitfalls

Fitness Centres

Avoid paying advance membership fees in a so-called health spa that has yet to open. Wait until it is a reality before joining. Sometimes "promised" spas fail to open and the owners disappear with your money. You may sign up for "low introductory prices" only to find that in a month or two you have lost your interest in the health program, but you are committed to a long-term contract.

Mail Order Sales

It is never wise to pay in advance for anything, especially from an unknown company.

Once a mail order company has your money, you are in a waiting position. Always order C.O.D. (cash on delivery). Then, if the order is delayed or lost, you have protected your money.

Correspondence Courses

Beware of correspondence courses guaranteeing you a job after you have received your "diploma". These courses are usually advertised in foreign magazines and on television. Besides costing you a lot of money, the diploma you receive may be useless to you for your chosen career.

Investigate the requirements for trade recognition with qualified professional bodies and associations and inquire about night school and community college courses.

Buying on Credit

Buying credit is no different from buying consumer goods. The shopper has to know when, what, where and how much to buy, depending on needs, values, goals and income. If repayments are not carefully budgeted, future income will be strained and necessities such as foods, rent and clothing will have to be cut back.

It's actually quite simple.

All you do is accumulate fifteen demerit points and lose your licence for thirty days. Do it again and lose your licence for six months.

In this province, it definitely pays a driver to score a big fat zero. Ontario's demerit point system is designed to convince the poor driver to drive properly. Drivers who do not improve are then taken from the road because they're a menace to pedestrians and to other drivers.

But the system is not at all unjust. It's aimed at telling the driver where he's gone wrong and giving him plenty of time to correct his faults.

For instance. When you've accumulated six points, you'll be notified and urged to improve your driving.

When you've got nine, you'll probably be asked to attend a private interview and re-do your driving test.

At fifteen points, you'll lose your licence for thirty days and drop back to seven points. Get fifteen again and you won't drive for six months.

However, your record won't be indelibly marked. If you drive for two years without a traffic conviction your points are erased and your slate is clean.

How Demerit Points Accumulate:

7 points	Failing to remain at scene of an accident (Highway Traffic Act).
6 points	Careless driving. Racing.	Exceeding speed limit by 30 m.p.h. or more.
5 points	Driver of bus failing to stop at unprotected railway crossings.
4 points	Exceeding the speed limit by 20 to 29 m.p.h. Failing to stop for school bus. Following too closely.
3 points	Exceeding speed limit by 11 to 19 m.p.h. Driving through, around or under railway crossing barrier. Failing to yield right of way. Failing to obey a stop sign, signal light or railway crossing signal.	Failing to obey directions of police officer. Failing to report an accident to a police officer. Improper passing. Crowding driver's seat. Wrong way on one-way street or highway.

The whole point is to score nothing, keep your record clean and drive happily ever after.

Brothers Die in Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Two brothers from Nova Scotia were killed early Saturday and a third seriously burned in a fire in a rooming house in the city's north end.

In critical condition in hospital is Gerard Degruchy, 19.

Another woman was injured when she jumped from a second-floor window of the two-storey building.

Firemen said the blaze apparently started in the basement and quickly spread. The cause has not been determined.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lovenseed, first-floor residents, discovered the fire. They escaped through the front door.

Damage has been estimated at $5,000 to the rooming house, and about $150 to the house next door.

Mother, Son Die in Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Two persons were killed early today when fire swept through their two-storey semi-detached house in the city's east end.

James Campbell Wood, 19, the woman's husband, was treated for shock and lacerations.

Cause of the fire and estimate of damage were unavailable immediately.

Body Found

PETROLIA, Ont. (CP) —The body of a girl found Saturday in a ditch in Enniskillen Township has been identified as Karen Leeann Caughlin, 16, of Sarnia, provincial police said Sunday.

The cause of death was established following an autopsy Saturday but police would not release details.

Multiple bruises and abrasions were found over most of the body, police said.

Petrolia is 25 miles southeast of Sarnia.

Under Pressure

WATERDOWN, Ont. (CP) — The owner of an 11-year-old ambulance service in this town eight miles north of Hamilton has been told she does not have the qualifications for the job.

Verna Patton, owner of Patton's Ambulance Service, has resisted joining the integrated ambulance service system established in Ontario in 1968 and says the province is another in a series of attempts by the province to put her out of business.

Mrs. Patton received the news in a letter from Charles Brubacher, director of the ambulances-services branch of the Ontario health ministry.

OUT OUR WAY

by Hoy Cochrun

Whelan, Marchand, Gray Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) — If heat were the only reason for a fast exit, several cabinet ministers couldn't be blamed if they were looking for a way out of the political kitchen.

Opposition fire early in the new session has roasted the government front benches, but so far the chief targets show few signs of being singed.

Critics have been grilling Energy Affairs Minister Herb Gray, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and Transport Minister Jean Marchand regularly since the new session began Feb. 27. The heat was turned up last week when the Commons shifted from the throne speech debate to normal business.

However, the attack on the minority Liberals has been diversified as far compared with the onslaught Energy Minister Donald Macdonald faced in the last few months of the previous session.

The energy minister, fresh from bearing the brunt of the energy criticism, has not been overlooked entirely, but even his near namesake, Veterans Affairs Minister Jack MacDonald, has been thrust closer to the front burner.

Normally a quiet figure in the most remote of the Commons cabinet seats, Mr. MacDonald found himself in a tight spot last week when the Conservatives almost won New Democrat support on a non-confidence motion.

But his carefully-worded speech was over the NDP for the non-confidence vote in which, in theory at least, hung the fate of the government.

His speech was the culmination of persistent questioning on the Veterans' Land Act, due to expire March 31 but which the two major opposition parties both wanted extended.

Mr. Gray's consumer portfolio has placed him squarely in the path of daily opposition attacks on the government's price policies, particularly as they relate to food.

He gained short breathing room with the recent announcement that bakeries have agreed to trim planned bread price increases, but critics lost little time in calling for long-term solutions covering a wide range of products.

The food issue also has embroiled Mr. Whelan and Mr. Marchand.

The agriculture minister has been called on almost daily to control feed grain prices which some critics say are so high that cattlemen have been turning away from needed beef production to grow grain.

Mr. Marchand also faces a daily barrage of questions related to grain, with the opposition charging he is not doing enough to provide boxcars to carry prairie wheat to ports for export.

His position has not been made any easier by his admission during the throne speech debate that federal transport policy is no longer adequate and needs revamping.

When the New Democrats introduced a motion Friday calling for consideration of price controls on some essential commodities and rollback powers on unjustified price increases, Mr. Turner was not in the House.

His place in the debate was filled by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, whose lead in the Commons has appeared to be relatively light this session.

It is not likely Mr. Turner will be away from centre stage much longer. A budget is expected this spring and the opposition may be biding its time, hoping to hammer him on the government's latest economic plans.

Whatever awaits Mr. Turner, the government is in for a heavier than usual dose of criticism this week and next.

Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, as well as the following Monday and Tuesday, have been set aside as opposition days during which the other parties choose the topic of debate.

It was such an opposition day debate that cornered the government on the Veterans' Land Act and provided the opportunity for the non-confidence motion.

Commercial Buildings Banned Near A-plant

UNDERWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Possible escape of toxic hydrogen sulphide gas, described by Ontario Hydro officials as more of a nuisance than a danger, has prompted the Atomic Energy Control Board of Canada to ban commercial buildings in a five-mile zone around the Bruce nuclear power plant.

The gas, used in the production of heavy water at Douglas Point, has an odor like that of rotten eggs.

If the restricted-development policy was explained to Bruce Township residents at a meeting Saturday.

Sam Horton, Bruce project manager, told the 125 residents in attendance that the plant originally had no intention of interfering beyond the 2,300-acre site, but had to follow restrictions imposed by the board.

Hydro purchased Inverhuron, a provincial park near the nuclear development, last summer as a safety measure, and allows only day use of the park.

Underwood is 25 miles southwest of Owen Sound.

And you're overlooking the one food that could help you most.

Most Canadian women stop drinking milk regularly. Yet milk is Nature's most nearly perfect food. More than any other, it can help give you the strength and stamina you need for every demanding day.

Milk.
No other single food can match its nutritional value.

It is such an important food, in fact, that without its help it would be difficult to be properly nourished at all!

Here are seven nutrients, all basic factors in the maintenance of health, and all of which milk provides.

Calcium. Yes, you need it. Although you've stopped growing, your bones are constantly being rebuilt and repaired. Calcium is hard at work here. And milk is an excellent dietary source of it.

Riboflavin. Milk is a very practical way to get your supply of this B-Vitamin, which is a factor in keeping you healthy and feeling well.

Protein. Everybody knows how important protein is. Not everybody knows that milk is an excellent, and economical, source of protein!

Vitamin A. This Vitamin is found in whole milk (which is, in fact, an excellent source of it). It is lacking in skim milk, so if you use only skim, be sure to get Vitamin A from another food source.

Phosphorus. Another mineral of which milk is an excellent source...and which is required by adults as well as by children.

Vitamin D, sometimes called "the sunshine vitamin," is usually added to milk in Ontario. If it is added, the carton will say so.

Thiamine, another factor in the maintenance of your good health. Milk is a good dietary source of this vitamin.

No less than seven basic nutrients are yours in every glass of milk you drink! And by the way, drinking milk by the glass is the easiest and best way to take out milk "health insurance." Every day, day, we don't practice what we preach.

Many of us, hurrying to get other things done, eat meals that do not give us adequate iron, calcium, and vitamins.

And milk, which could supply so many of the nutrients we lack? Well, somewhere along the road to growing up, we stopped drinking it regularly, too.

The result just has to be that we are functioning at less than peak level. Lacking the stamina and vitality to get through the day with bounce to spare. Getting tired too easily. Not enjoying our lives as much as we might.

Because, no matter how careful we are to get proper rest and exercise, we cannot hope to have good health without good nutrition.

And milk is one of the great cornerstones of good nutrition. It is more complete nutritionally than any other single food (in fact, the only two major nutrients not well supplied by milk are iron and vitamin C).

This is why milk can be so important to you as an adult and a woman. And why you should get back into the habit of drinking milk every day. Just the way you did when you were a child.

Is milk too fattening for an adult?

If you are trying to control your weight, you may think it best not to drink milk.

And that's just where you're wrong. In a weight-control programme, it is vital to know, not just how many calories you consume, but how much nutrition you get for those calories.

Here's where milk comes into its own. It is an outstanding example of a food that delivers a high nutrient content for its calorie quotient.

And milk is probably much lower in fat content than you realize. For instance, whole milk has a fat content of only about 3½%. And skim milk has virtually none at all.

So, whether you are dieting or not, be sure to make a place in your day's food for milk.

It is a food that is just too valuable to pass up.

Milk and vitality: they go together.

Milk is indeed unique as a balanced source of many of our dietary needs. So much so, that there is really no adequate food-substitute for it.

Yet, for all its great nutritional value, it is readily available, relatively cheap, and so easy to use.

The habit of drinking milk daily, continued throughout adult life, is one that can pay off—in increased stamina and the lovely feeling that can come with being in good health.

Now you know why nobody ever outgrows the need for milk.

And that, most definitely, includes you.

Good nutrition. It's as easy as 1, 2, 3, 4.

The groups are listed below. Include foods from each of them in your daily meal-plan and you're pretty sure to get well-rounded nutrition.

1. The Meat Group, which includes eggs, fish or poultry. You should include a food from this group at least once a day.

2. The Cereals Group, which in addition to cereals includes bread and other products made with flour.

3. The Fruit and Vegetables Group. Try to include two servings of fruit (one a citrus type such as orange) plus a green and a yellow vegetable each day.

4. The Milk Group, which includes cheese and other dairy products. Milk is such an important food element that it gets a whole group to itself!

Eat from these four food groups every day, get enough sleep, work in some fresh air and exercise every chance you get.

And you'll be on your way to the beautiful feeling of being at your very best.

Fact: Canadian women don't eat properly.

A recently completed survey of our national eating habits has identified women and teenaged girls as the worst-fed people in Canada.

The mother of three, Rosemary, 14; Leslie, 13 and Hilary, 10, Mrs. Farmer loves baking more than cooking and leaves the weekly family soup pot to her husband while she bakes one of her yeast specialties like Orange Cream Coffee Cake. Lost Bargain

VICKSBURG, Mich. (AP) — Police say they have arrested a man who apparently hates to lose out on a great bargain. The 20-year-old man was arrested on breaking and entering charges after police spotted him carrying clothes from a local department store. Officers said the clothes were the same ones he returned to the store from a previous burglary in which the same man was charged.

Shortages Affect Fashion

By JEAN SHARP
The Canadian Press

Prices and shortages seem to figure as largely in fashion news for spring as color and line.

Almost every fashion expert consulted in a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press commented on price rises already in effect or to come.

In St. John's, Nfld., a buyer said prices have gone up $3 or $4 on major items, such as dresses. She said because synthetic fabrics are based on petrochemicals, prices may go up again as a result of rising oil prices.

A Vancouver department store spokesman said the price increase on ready-to-wear has been about 10 per cent in the last year. The price of natural fibre fabrics has gone up 16 to 40 per cent. He said "real fabrics" are out for spring because of high prices for wool, cotton and linen. He predicted a cotton shortage this year because of a problem in Mississippi.

A merchandise manager in Regina said prices go up with every shipment. He was concerned that the threatened strike of clothing workers in Montreal would add to the rise.

Whatever they cost, women's fashions for spring are taking on a soft, natural look. Dresses and suits alike are reappearing. A fashion co-ordinator in Winnipeg says a shirt look will be strong in dresses and suits. Suits will be worn with fancy dress blouses or A-line skirts.

Denim is probably the biggest single fabric everywhere but it is not always what it seems. An Edmonton buyer said it can easily be imitated, especially in navy-care polyester. A Winnipeg co-ordinator said denim-look fabrics such as chambray or brushed cotton are often substituted.

But whatever it is it is being used in everything from children's wear to dress clothes for women.

Another element is quality. A Toronto boutique owner said women are buying a few elegant items, rather than a number of lesser articles.

He also commented on the return of the dress, with easy-fitted, natural waists and full skirts.

Ivory and whites, blues and greens are the most important colors, in soft shades, said an Ottawa expert.

A Montreal spokesman said coats are the leading general trend. In comfortable, belted, soft tweeds, they will be worn with high heels.

She said the trend is elegance with exaggerated sleeves and backs have shoulders and back.

Pants will still be fashionable, with loose, straight legs and high waists. They will be worn with light, T-shirt tops and cardigans.

Shoes, to go with the softer look, will have lighter platforms, higher heels. A Vancouver buyer said the platforms are no thicker than half an inch.

A Halifax department store spokeswoman said the hat business has been booming for two seasons, and the large profile brim is popular this season. She said she expects business to continue to be good.

Soft, Natural

Weddings, China Style

TOKYO (AP) — When Chang Hsiu-jung was about to get married, friends in her factory near Peking collected money to buy gifts. But other fellow-workers asked why.

Good question, said Communist party officials. They organized a discussion and in the end there were no presents for Miss Chang.

In response to those who argued that there was nothing wrong with giving gifts, especially since this was a big event in Miss Chang's life, the prevailing view was that it was a bad habit from the old days when poor Chinese ruined their homes by borrowing money from the capitalists to celebrate weddings.

The best course, the meeting decided, was to display the working class's "excellent tradition of frugality, hard toil and plain living." Miss Chang was delighted with the decision, a recent issue of the Peking People's Daily reported.

In one of a series of reports on abolishing old customs, the paper added that in Miss Chang's wedding ceremony party officials made speeches in praise of late marriages and encouraged the newlyweds to continue

Successful Living

Worried About Sloppy Daughter

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: How can I tactfully tell my married daughter that she should be a bit more fussy about how she keeps house and also be less fussier about her two little girls, aged five and two? She does not take the time she should with little things, like changing the baby's diapers often enough and washing them and combing their hair.

She is quite a good cook but a slap-dash and I think her husband would like her to be a bit different too. We just came back from a two-week visit to her and enjoyed it so much. I helped all I could, but somehow could not bring myself to tell her things which she could do to improve.

She is the best-hearted person; would do anything for anyone and is very well liked in her community, so maybe this is more important. — What Matters Most?

Dear What Matters: There are as many answers to this question as there are home makers. We all have our own standards of perfection or slapdash-idness.

If a public health nurse were to visit and actually get a threat in the children's health, this would be one thing. But I gather the whole atmosphere is healthy and happy — just a little messed up looking. I can't see you dictating a new score, tactfully or otherwise. If there is love in that home and your daughter's community benefits by her open-heartedness, keep your doubts to yourself. Enjoy her.

I know one home where a grandmother, when she visits, describes it as a place where, "You could just take a pitcher of milk and throw it around and nobody would see the difference." Yet the place fairly radiates with joy, along with all seven members of it.

So much for immaculate housekeeping!

Dear Doris: I read the letter in your column signed "Alone". I would like to answer this gentleman as I am also in my 50's. I have nothing against these beer pubs, but myself would not go in there looking for a companion.

But you do have to get to know one another and it really gives you a lift to have someone to talk to. Companionship is a great thing if a person meets the right one. — Alone Too.

Dear Too: You are right. And the way to meet up with a companion is to be where people are. This does not have to be in a beer joint or night club.

To join the ranks of flee middle-aged people who are helping out in a hospital or recreation centre is a first-class way to meet a kindred spirit.

Many, many people need what you have to give: and, in the giving, one is likely to be on the receiving end too — receiving friendship and a new approach to life.

Ann Landers

Couple Finds Unique 'Solution'

Dear Ann Landers: After several years of a childless marriage I finally presented my husband with a healthy, beautiful baby boy who looks like his daddy. We had tried all the home remedies to get me pregnant but nothing worked. Finally we both went to a clinic and got ourselves checked. We discovered that my husband is sterile.

The father of our baby is actually my sister-in-law. She is only 22 years older than his son.) My husband and I talked it over and decided that since the child is a thousand years. I am willing to urge other childless couples to consider this solution. It makes a lot more sense to have a child that carries the male genes of the husband's family than to be artificially inseminated by a medical student about whom you know very little.

Will you please encourage this approach for childless couples? We are so happy and plan to have two or three more children.—In Heaven

Dear In: Here's your letter, and that "approach" gets no encouragement from me. I see too many possibilities for real trouble later on—unless, of course, the entire clan is completely bananas and devoid of all the normal sensitivities.

Dear Ann Landers: I promised myself that if last night's date turned out like all the others, I'd write to Ann Landers. Well, here I am.

I'm an attorney, 26 years old who has always tried to be considerate of the young ladies I take out. I ask them where they want to have dinner, which movie or play they prefer, etc. And I don't try to wrestle them into bed. I keep hoping the next girl will be different, but she never is.

After two dates, I am told, "I am interested in someone else." Or, "You aren't good looking enough," or "You don't wear the proper clothes," or, "Your eyeglasses make you look like a square." Tonight I was informed that I am "too serious, too sensitive and too insecure."

Other young men have written to say they can't find a girl who wants a respectable date, but you don't believe them. Well, I am telling you that's the way it is. Don't you understand that some people, both male and female, seem to have a lifelong spell of bad luck?—Rebuffed Concerned In Chicago

Dear Re: I concede that luck is a vital component in the lives of all of us, but I don't believe in "life-long bad luck."

Something is wrong with your selections, Buddy. Where do you find these harridans? You need to revise your criteria and fish in new waters.

Conservatives Back Stanfield

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield got a massive vote of support from his party Sunday night after delegates to the party's convention pushed his idea of a leadership review a step further than he proposed.

Mr. Stanfield proposed that a secret ballot vote on whether to hold a leadership convention be taken at each party convention. The proposal would have come into effect at the next convention.

But when the constitutional amendment came before the convention's general meeting it was amended to provide for an immediate vote.

The outcome was 800 against a leadership convention—a show of satisfaction with the present leadership—and 37 in favor.

Marcel Lambert, MP for Edmonton West, said the vote was necessary "to get rid of this tendency" of having the Conservative Party question leadership.

"We'll put it to rest once and for all," he said. "There will be a resounding vote of confidence in Bob Stanfield."

The three-day convention is to choose a new president and consider policy orientations for the party.

About 1,900 delegates were expected, but many were held up by a storm that dropped 11 inches of snow on Ottawa in a 36-hour period ending Sunday evening.

Many were still registering as wrangling over the constitution led up to the crying 85-percent support to Mr. Stanfield's leadership.

The constitution previously said that when the party is in opposition a leadership review is possible only when it has failed to increase its parliamentary seats by 20 per cent in the preceding general election.

Jack Horner, MP for Crowfoot and one of the sponsors of amendments that led to the previous constitution, opposed a regular leadership review.

But he said that if there were to be automatic reviews, they should begin immediately.

"Certainly I support Mr. Stanfield, but, I am getting tired of fighting the Conservative Party on this leadership thing."

Mr. Horner's sub-amendment making the Stanfield amendment take effect immediately passed by a vote of 136 to 49. Mr. Stanfield's amendment then carried, overwhelmingly, without a count.

A motion from Mr. Horner

eliminated an amendment which would have permitted the executive to name 50 delegates-at-large.

Mr. Stanfield went into the session called hearsay Sunday evening but found it was a friendly meeting.

The questions ranged over housing, inflation, unemployment insurance, welfare, taxes and small business and Mr. Stanfield's answers were greeted each time by rousing applause by delegates.

When a woman asked him if he thought he would one day be prime minister, Mr. Stanfield said he sometimes wakes up at night with the thought that he will be.

The remote vot hearty laughter from the approximately 1,000 delegates who attended the hearsay session. It was the opposition leader's way of emphasizing the heavy responsibility that goes with being prime minister.

PC Youth Set Aside Motion Backing French

OTTAWA (CP)—The Progressive Conservative Youth Federation set aside a motion Saturday that backed the Quebec government's position to make French the official working language in the province.

The resolution had been adopted in a committee but after a heated debate in a full session of the 1,500 delegates the motion was tabled without a vote.

Main speakers on both sides of the issue came from Montreal Westmount riding—the traditional stronghold of English-speaking Quebecers.

But after an address in French by Roch LaSalle (PC—Joliette), who urged them to abstain from a vote, the resolution was set aside.

Geoff Hale of Westmount, speaking in favor of the motion, said the Quebec Liberal govern-

Argos Help Cuna Indians

TORONTO (CP) — Cuna Indians on a tiny island on the north coast of Panama have medical supplies because of two modern argonauts.

Kicker Zenon Andruszyshyn and defensive end Bruce Bergey, both of the Toronto Argonauts football club travelled by plane and dugout canoe to reach the island of San Agustin de Tupile.

With them they took medical supplies bought with $1,000 raised in donations from the Canadian Football League club and a number of individuals and companies.

Bergey and his wife spent a week on the island two years ago as guests of the nuns, who refused payment but said they did need medical supplies.

ment's proposal to make French the official working language was more than the majority the opportunity to work in their own language.

He said it was a myth that English rights would be affected.

"The English have nothing to fear from this," he told the meeting which was held at the University of Ottawa.

Plea Made For Stolen Vermeer

LONDON (Reuter) — The Greater London Council, owner of a stolen Vermeer masterpiece, made a last-minute appeal to the thieves Sunday night not to carry out their threat to destroy the priceless painting.

The robbers said they planned to burn the 17th-century painting, The Guitar Player, Sunday night to show their disgust at the "innate attitude" capitalist societies show towards their treasures.

Ellis Hillman, chairman of the council's art committee appealed to the thieves on behalf of "Londoners, art lovers and anyone who treasures artistic beauties" not to destroy the "priceless painting," stolen from a London gallery nearly three weeks ago.

Ten ransom demands sent to The Times have been rejected.

First was an order to distribute $1.3-million worth of food to the poor of the West Indian island of Grenada, followed by a demand for the transfer from English jails of two Northern Ireland guerrilla bombers, Dolores and Marian Price.

Detroit Car Firms Seek Light Materials

DETROIT (AP) — With the price of gasoline going up and its supply uncertain, U.S. automakers are taking a closer look at lightweight building materials to reduce the gasoline bill their cars.

At least one official in the aluminum industry predicts auto-makers will nearly triple the amount of aluminum used in cars by 1980.

"Engineers at the Big Three are less optimistic about aluminum's potential as a partial substitute for steel, at least in the times as heavy.

They say any major use of aluminum to produce significant fuel economy is still far down the road.

The auto-makers have been using aluminum in limited applications for engine accessories, transmission housings and trim for more than a decade. The industry average is about 80 pounds per unit, or two per cent of a car's total weight.

General Motors has applied new uses of aluminum to its 1974 cars in the form of front rear bumpers on Chevrolet's compact Camaro and subcompact Vega. The weight reduction ranges from 50 pounds on the Vega to 80 pounds for a Camaro.

That saving hardly makes a dent in a car's fuel economy. GM estimates 400 pounds have to be taken out of a car to get an additional mile on a gallon of gas.

Weight reductions achieved through the use of aluminum over the last decade have been offset by increasing over-all car weights. Since 1965, the average car has put on more than 300 pounds.

William Flaherty of Reynolds Metals Co. in Southfield, Mich., predicts the average car will contain 200 pounds of aluminum by 1980.

The biggest increases will be in bumpers, body sheeting and engine castings," he said."

Flaherty acknowledges that processed aluminum costs more per pound but uses as much as steel and requires five times the energy to produce into its basic form. "But in the long run," he adds, "aluminum is more economical for the consumer and the auto-maker."

Two Killed

SPENCES BRIDGE, B.C. (CP) — Two men were killed Sunday when a train derailed after a landslide left large boulders on the track.

Engineer Frances Buttiel, 53, both of Kamloops, B.C., died when the two engines pulling an empty 88-car CP Rail coal train plunged about 100 feet down an embankment on to the Trans-Canada Highway near here.

Ontario Law on Marital Property Planned

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Margaret Birch, minister for social development, said Saturday temporary legislation will be introduced in the current session of the legislature to prevent a case in Ontario, similar to the Murdoch judgment by the Supreme Court of Canada.

She was referring to a judgment in which Irene Murdoch of Nanton, Alta., was denied an interest in her former husband's ranch because she had not made a direct financial contribution.

She told a conference on women and the law the government will also drop regulations that require employers to provide free transportation to women employees between midnight and 6 a.m. and removes restrictions on over-time and night work for women employees under the age of 18.

Logic makes it clear that equal rights for women "cuts both ways," she said.

"Just because we are making changes in the two areas where our current laws could be said to accommodate women rather than men."

In reference to the Murdoch case, the minister said:

"I can promise you that we will be introducing a bill at the current session of our legislature here which will have the specific purpose of making it impossible for a Murdoch case to happen here.

Wives 'Shortchanged' In Property Division

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Wives are "shortchanged" by current property division laws relating to marriage disputes, Terrance Wuester, a professor of law at the University of Saskatchewan, said at a conference on women and the law this weekend.

"The wife who remains in the home to rear her children or to maintain the home often has little or no opportunity to earn outside income which might be used to purchase separate property," he said.

"Under the present law, she is not entitled to any shares of the property held by her husband in his name if she has paid for it with his own money."

Last week, the Ontario Law Reform Commission released its recommendations on marital property and said that marriage should be regarded as a form of economic partnership.

Under its proposed changes, husbands and wives would be entitled to equal shares in the assets of the marriage if it were ended.

Changes to current legislation also would mean that courts would have less concern with making maintenance orders at the end of a marriage, he said.

Prof. Wuester added that a wife who received, for example, half the assets of the marriage upon divorce, would require less in the way of a lump-sum payment or a monthly allowance to support her and any children.

The professor's paper will be completed for distribution and discussion within two months and will form the basis for final recommendations by the law reform group.

Sydney Robins, treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada, told the conference the society has taken a stand against discrimination in the hiring of women articling law students.

However, women attending said they were unimpressed and one by one, told of difficulties they or friends had encountered as law students.

Vicki Schmolka, in law at McGill University, Montreal, told of one woman who was asked about her marital status when she applied to enter law school.

Complaints were made to discourage the woman when it was learned she was divorced, with two children and working as a waitress, Miss Schmolka said.

Jennifer Bankier, a student at Osgoode Hall, York University, Toronto, said at one law office, a woman was told "the only reservation we have about hiring a woman is that we're a very small firm and we can't risk antagonizing our clients by hiring a woman."

Stratford Director Bides Time

OTTAWA (CP) — Can a young white-hot English theatre director make something more distinctively Canadian out of the Stratford Festival, whose forte has always been Shakespeare and the European classics?

Though he says "My tongue is tied," that apparently is what Robin Phillips hopes to do, starting this fall when he succeeds Jean Gascon as artistic director of the festival company at Stratford, Ont.

Phillips, whose appointment created a furore because the job should go to a Canadian, was here this week to talk to the Canada Council and others about the future of the Stratford Festival after it concludes its 32nd season late in October.

He drove back to Stratford, preparing for his first meeting later this week with the festival's planning committee, when a 1976-78 winter tour in Canada will be discussed.

During the past two winters, the Stratford players have toured—and won enthusiastic audiences in—Europe and Australia. The next 3 winters will be spent touring Canada, east and west.

At the moment, Phillips said in an interview, he doesn't want to stir up any more controversy about his appointment, or talk about specific plans for the company.

He is spending from now until October feeling his way about Canada, not on a talent search, but getting to know more about Canadian theatre, its people, and the people of the country generally.

"I'm really just meeting people," he said.

"This is such a vast country, you have to stretch out, from whatever organization you are in and grip very firmly the hands of people in other places.

"Otherwise, each place can become introverted and cut off. It's really that, that is important. I need to know what is going on, and why it is going on."

Is this a prelude to more cross-country travel by the Stratford theatre? At least it indicates Phillips wants to be in tune with the country.

"Certainly in the next two years there will be touring Canada," he said. "They won't be permanently shelved."

Stratford is a big operation. It has a lot to live up to, and back to Canada's only truly large, generous position put behind it. They don't, they are not going to get anything like it."

The country has put a lot into Stratford: Almost $2 million in federal tax money through the Canada Council alone in the last four years. Second only to the National Ballet, Stratford is the biggest recipient of arts subsidies from the council.

Phillips tends to speak of the Stratford company as "they, rather than "we." Because Gascon is still in charge, Phillips won't begin to direct until after the coming summer festival closes, though he is making plans for the future.

Phillips learned the intricacies of directing and theatre administration in the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, the Bristol Old Vic, the Chichester Festival and the Greenwich Theatre, as well as in experience on Broadway and in London's West End.

Stratford's program this summer includes three plays by Shakespeare and one by Molière, a new play by Canadian playwright David Fennario, and will present an opera by Offenbach in the Avon Theatre. There are four works scheduled for the Third Stage, however, will be Canadian.

Phillips said it is vital to the life-blood of any theatre organization the size of Stratford that it keep in touch with what is going on in the theatre outside its own bailiwick. It is particularly true of Stratford, Ont., "set down in that bit of Canada that pokes down into the United States."

"It gets geographically cut off, and the season there is very long—much longer than in most places. That means that the actors are cut off for a longer period than most, and they very quickly get caught up in factional problems.

"They need the stimulation of what is going on in New Brunswick, or wherever."

Stratford's long season, running from mid-May to late October with performances for school audiences before and after the main summer festival, is a mixed blessing, Phillips said.

It means that actors do not see anything beyond their own horizons for at least six months of the year, but on the other hand, anything is desirable that keeps actors employed and "not just sitting around, wasting away."

Phillips, still in his early 30s, says his mandate as artistic director seems to be as broad as he wants it to be, but the first test will come when he goes before the Stratford Festival board with his 1976-78 plans.

Stratford's main emphasis on the repertoire of Shakespeare, and plays of that period, "can be re-appraised," he said. Canadian and other contemporary works have been played in Stratford's Avon Theatre and on its Third Stage, but not so far in the main festival theatre.

Mr. Allen has some fresh thoughts about the manner in which Shakespeare might be presented to school audiences.

Can a heavy Shakespeare play, like Othello or Hamlet, no matter how well and professionally done—hold and be instructive to an audience of young teen-agers?

At England, Phillips developed a new technique for school audiences, bringing a few students onto the stage to work with actors in dramatizing how a Shakespeare play is analyzed and staged.

He's not saying yet that he will do that at Stratford, but his enthusiasm for interesting students in the theatre is infectious.

Phillips' appointment drew howls from nitro-nationalists in Canadian theatre circles, to the point that one challenged him through the press—in a duel, and another demanded his immediate withdrawal from the job.

Phillips' rejoinder is mainly to turn his other cheek and get quietly about his job, leaving it to others to judge what he does when he has settled into it.

40 Rock Music Tunes in Film

A fast-paced rhythm is set by music for the Universal picture, American Graffiti, currently playing at Cinema II in the Quinte Mall. Showings are at 7 and 9:10 p.m.

The comedy, set in a northern California town in the early 1960s, is a nostalgic look back ten or so years. Illustrated through the cars, the music and the atmosphere of the .IFK New Frontiers.

Directed by George Lucas, who won critical acclaim for his visually stunning 1GX 1138, it stars Richard Dreyfuss, Ronny Howard, Paul Le Mat and Charlie Martin Smith as the graduates. Candy Clark, Mackenzie Phillips and Cindy Williams are their girl friends. Wolfman Jack, as the disc-jockey, is a secret friend to them all.

More than 40 rock-and-roll tunes are heard throughout the picture as we follow the last 24 hours of a night for the four high-school graduates before they go on to new pursuits. The songs, representing all the hopes, dreams and absurd comedies of that time have been put into a soundtrack album by MCA Records.

American Graffiti was filmed in and around the towns of Petaluma and Petaluma, California. For the picture 300 pre-1963 automobiles had to be located to create the auto-street ballet that Director Lucas wanted.

The film was produced for Lucasfilm Ltd. Coppola Co. by Francis Ford Coppola, who won an Oscar for directing The Godfather Every Parts co-produced.

American Graffiti has been rated PG-Parental Guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for pre-teenagers.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter)—A citizens' arrest warrant was sworn out Wednesday against former Beatle John Lennon by a woman free-lance photographer after the guitarist reportedly had struck her in a nightclub.

Police said Lennon was ejected from a nightclub in West Hollywood, allegedly for shouting obscenities during a show by the Smothers Brothers comedy team.

Police said the woman, Brenda Mary Perkins, 30, who attempted to photograph Lennon as he was being escorted from the club, claimed she was slapped over the right eye and needed treatment.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Ryan O'Neal and Leigh Taylor-Young, who met as co-stars in the television series Peyton Place, were divorced Wednesday in Santa Monica Superior Court.

Judge Pearce Young granted the divorce on the grounds of "irreconcilable differences" and kept secret the couple's property agreement.

O'Neal, 33, and Miss Taylor-Young were married in 1967 and separated four years later. Miss Taylor-Young retains custody of their six-year-old child, Patrick.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pat Nixon apparently became ill after a hectic day of public appearances, marked by jet-lag symptoms and a fever Sunday after a six-day trip to South America.

Press secretary Ronald Ziegler said President Nixon's wife was reported ill at the new $15-million home of the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn.

Ziegler said Mrs. Nixon probably became ill because of the change in temperature from warm Brazil to the 48-degree temperature in Nashville, where she wore only a light national over her dress.

In Nashville Saturday night, Mrs. Nixon escorted his wife on to the stage of the new hall before 4,400 country-music fans as he played. Happy Birthday on the piano while the audience sang. It was Mrs. Nixon's 62nd birthday.

The president also played Mrs. Nixon's favorite, Wild Irish Rose, and plunked out God Bless America.

Country music star Roy Acuff hailed Nixon as a real trouper on stage, as one of the finest presidents, and then offered him lessons on the yodel, a type Acuff uses as a trademark.

U.S. Seamen Strike Against TV Dinners

ROGERS CITY, Mich. (AP) — Great Lakes ore boat crews take billiards, golf and fishing, but one thing they apparently can't do with the president in command.

Crew members from six U.S. Steel Corp. ore carriers went on strike in Rogers City Saturday after learning they were going to be served TV dinners.

A U.S. Steel spokesman said the company plans to introduce pre-prepared food on the entire 46-vessel fleet after a trial run last year on three ships resulted in "overwhelming acceptance" for the frozen food.

The seamen, outlined by members of United Steel Workers local 1981, is so far confined to crew members of the six U.S. Steel ships based at Rogers City.

One wildcatter, Chuck Trafelet, says that in the past each ship had two cooks, and now the vessels are being cut to one cook each, with frozen food taking up the slack.

Blues Rebound To Trip Bobcats

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

BRAMALEA — It was a night of gunnery practice at the Victoria Park shooting range here Sunday as the Blues evened their Metro Junior B final with the Bellleville Bobcats at 1-1.

Brandes goalie Barrie Oakes, and Belleville goalie, Bruce Clark, were the targets on which the shooters drilled on netminders.

Oakes came under a barrage of 61 Bobcat shots while Clark had 31 shots fired his way in the 6-3 Bramalea victory.

Belleville's defence and backchecking, which had been nothing less than great in the semi-final against Pickering, was nothing less than horrible throughout the first and third periods of Sunday's game.

"It's going to be tough to come back against them Wednesday," said Cats coach, Moe Hunter. They have to be really fired up after this game."

The Bobcats held a 5-3 lead going into the third period and sat back and watched the game go by until the score read 5-5. By that time it was too late to even try to come back.

"We go a little bit cocky after the second," said Belleville's Mike Watt. "We had them down three goals and figured it was all over right there. You've got to play three periods of a hockey game or you might as well not play at all. Tonight we didn't play three periods and we lost. So we might as well have not played at all."

Belleville did play one period of hockey — the second. In it they made Bramalea look like a bunch of five-year-old has-beens. The locals scored four unanswered goals in the second period and coasted the Blues 21-4.

Where Bramalea didn't play 60 minutes of hockey like the middle 20 is a good question. They have better goaltenders, they have a better defence and they have better goalscoring than Bramalea.

What they might be lacking is a good boot in the laurels because after all they were where they were for most of the game — on their haunches.

The Cats proved in the second period that they didn't have to rely on backchecking at all to win. All they have to do is forecheck and the Bramalea can't do anything except throw the puck away.

Belleville forechecked for 20 solid minutes in the second period and all Bramalea could do was make bad passes when they got the puck deep.

The locals didn't forecheck throughout the entire game though, and on top of that, they didn't, even backcheck very much.

Time and time again, Bruce Clark stopped second and scrambles around his net, but somehow he managed to stop most of the resulting Bramalea shots.

Scrum in the Bramalea zone as Blues' Ron Clark and Mark Coates (right) battle for puck in front of Bobcats' goal during Sunday's Metro Junior B final game at Victoria Park Arena in Bramalea. Blues won 6-3 to even the best-of-three series at 1-1. Belleville Bobcats' Barrie Oakes (31) looks on. Top-scoring Mark Coates had a lot of trouble putting the puck in the net Sunday in Bramalea. It wasn't because Coates was cooling off from his hot scoring streak, but because wherever he went he ran into close checking from one or two Blues' defenders. On this occasion though, Coates broke away from the tight coverage the Blues wrapped around him and backhanded a rebound into the net behind Bramalea goalie, Barrie Oakes. Mark also added two assists to the Cats' scoring effort, but the Blues still upended Belleville 6-5 to even the Metro Junior B finals at 1-1.

Saturday, the two Loyalist rinks travelled to Peterborough for the Eastern Regional Curling Playdowns and captured second place in both events.

Denis Lehrun skipped the local college rink to the second place finish. Members of the rink are Steve Zubyck, vice, Brad Mitchell, second, and Ray Cormier, lead.

In the Kingston-Loyalist game the two rinks were tied after seven, but the Limestone City crew went ahead 5-4 in the eighth. They blanked the seventh and in the 9th Loyalist just missed an opportunity to even the score when an attempted draw ne last rock fell short of the house.

The Loyalist-Peterborough match was close until the eighth when Loyalist took three to put them in front 9-4.

In the Mixed event, Loyalist lost to Peterborough 13-3, but bounced back to take their second game from Kingston 9-8 in an extra-end.

The Loyalist crew was behind 4-1 going into the fourth, but Peterborough came up with five in that end to take a commanding lead.

In the Kingston-Loyalist contest, the locals were ahead 8-6 after three but Kingston came back to within one point following the sixth. The Loyalist rink hung on to their lead and won 9-8.

Raiders Get By Cobourg

TRENTON — A goaltender, defenceman with an accurate shot, and a goaltender story for Trenton Raiders as they advanced to the Ontario Minor Hockey Association Peewee Major AA semi-finals here Sunday.

David Campbell, a solid performer on defence, had the blueline all season long, fired three goals.

Mike Thomas, a goaltender by trade when he made the Trenton club this season, was pressed into service at defenceman and he responded with the other two goals for Raiders.

Cobourg had forced the fifth game with a Friday night home tie win by a 5-3 score.

Team captain Gordie Sharpe led Cobourg's attack with four gals. Chris Rowden had the other counter.

Replying for Trenton were Campbell and Tom Koppmann.

Thornhill Tops Birt's Juveniles

THORNHILL (Special) — According to an official of the Trenton Ice Hawks Bantam Juveniles, the club had it too easy on its climb to the Ontario Hockey Association AA semi-finals.

His first goal came early in the first period and it wasn't until 2:30 in the third that Trenton added a tie. Jon Armstrong's counter.

The home team regained the lead two minutes later and again Armstrong came through for the visitors to put the squads on even terms.

Roger Macklin's unassisted goal at 5:30 was the winner and Matheson added the insurance marker with a little more than three minutes to play.

Games 2 and 3 in the series are scheduled for Trenton's Community Gardens March 25 and 27. No game times have been announced.

Thornhill scored two without a reply to pull it out.

Thornhill team captain Dave Matheson opened and closed the scoring in the close, well played contest.

Golden Hawk Tournament

Belleville Edged In Overtime 4-3

Belleville Lions and Trenton Quinte Ice Products put on an excellent hockey show in front of the fans they were playing to an almost empty house.

Trenton pulled out a 4-3 win in sudden death overtime. Richard Mannaway finished the three-way move with Bruce Leeuhan and Bob Mumford to make it a dismal start for a Belleville club which had battled from behind a three-goal deficiet to force the game into overtime.

Two first period goals by Tom Manley and one by Richard Crawford appeared to be a comfortable lead for Trenton.

It wasn't until the period was more than half over that Lions began to get untracked. Rick Culkin put Belleville on the scoreboard with the help of Ross Laverrenon and in the second, Mike Crawford kept the Lions' rally going with the only counter of the middle 20 minutes. Goalie Jeff Merrill drew the assist on the play.

Defenceman Pete McBride capped the Belleville comeback halfway through the third period, teaming up with Culkin and Gord Male. But Trenton's Monana provided Lions' chances of pulling off a storybook finish.

Lions make their next tournament start Tuesday morning at 8:30 when they meet the loser of a Kingston Township-Cobourg match played today.

Belleville's minor midgets, the Yeomen, are also entered in the tourney. They make their first start Monday morning against Gatineau-Wood, Nova Scotia, too late for the result to be carried in today's Intelligencer,

During a pause in the action, Belleville Lions' major midget coach Bobb Burrowes discusses strategy with team captain Gary Thompson. Lions lost their first start in the Trenton Golden Hawk Tournament, Sunday, 4-3 in overtime. Trenton Quinte Ice Products got the nod in a well played contest. Tournament action continues all week at Trenton's Community Gardens.

Espo's Formula Works For Habs' Defenceman

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

Boston Bruins centre Phil Esposito gained the unique distinction of leading National Hockey League goals by parking in the slot and fitting a pass from a team-mate past the opposition's defenders.

Esposito's winning formula gave him four more goals during the weekend—two in Boston's 5-3 win over New York Rangers Sunday and two in the Bruins' 5-2 win over Toronto Maple Leafs Saturday.

In other Sunday games Toronto and Philadelphia Flyers tied 3-3, Atlanta Flames and Chicago Black Hawks tied 3-3, and Buffalo Sabres defeated Minnesota North Stars 8-4.

Chicago downed Montreal 3-1 Saturday, Buffalo tied St. Louis Blues 2-2, Pittsburgh Penguins outscored Vancouver Canucks 8-7, Philadelphia defeated Minnesota 5-2, the Rangers won 3-1 over the Islanders, and Los Angeles Kings blanked Detroit Red Wings 3-0.

Sabres 8 North Stars 4

Robinson's second goal of the game at 1:33 of the third period broke a 2-2 tie and the Canadiens went on to their fourth win over New York this season.

Robinson scored, as did goals from Yvan Cournoyer, from the slot between Esposito's goals for his goals. It just happened that there was an opening there and I just speared it."

BRUINS 5 RANGERS 3

A First for Warriors

TORONTO (CP) — There was an eerie hush in the dressing room of the Sir George Williams University Georgians. They'd never beaten 65 in overtime Saturday by University of Waterloo Warriors in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union end-of-ten-death-impending game.

It was the sixth straight win for a team from Ontario in the final, but only the first for Waterloo, making its initial appearance in the event.

"We finally met a team with as many guts as we've had," Wayne Hallwell, an assistant coach with the Georgians, told reporters.

Hallwell was referring to the fact that defencemen Ron Lapointe and Ken Brown, both playing with broken hands, were seen as much as 55 minutes of the time each in the 70-minute affair.

Brown had a bronchial ailment which hampered his breathing and Lapointe, the Georgians' team captain, had a broken thumb.

"We held their big line in check pretty well until the end when they wore us down," said Lapointe who was named the game's No. 1 star.

Waterloo Warriors had a 4-2 lead early in the final period but goals by Rob Madeley and Russ Elliott knotted the score with 6:39 gone.

Elliott gave the Warriors a 5-4 lead with 21 seconds gone in the overtime when he flipped a shot past Georgians' defender Brenda Wolfe's arm and body and Mike Hogarth got what proved to be the game winner at 2:27. It was the second goal of the game for the Waterloo team captain.

Bears Are Champions

PEMBROKE (CP) — Smiths Falls Bears defeated Ottawa to control Junior Hockey League playoff championship by handing Pembroke Lumber Kings 4-2. The win gave the Bears, league champions, the best-of-seven final series 4-0.

They now take on the role Pembroke had last year, representing the Ontario Provincial Hockey Association in Centennial Cup playoffs.

The first game of the best-of-seven eastern quarter-final opens in Smiths Falls March 25 against the Nepean Canadiens. Dates and places for the rest of Smiths Falls are March 26 and 28 with the next four games, if necessary, in the home of Quebec champions.

Whalers Clubbed By Surging Jets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

New England Whalers, staggering from the vagaries of the World Hockey Association schedule which required them to play 15 of their last 17 games on the road, suffered their fifteenth defeat over Sunday night.

The WHA defending champions were drubbed 10-1 by Winnipeg Jets who, in turn, found themselves of a playoff berth in the West Division and established a club record scoring output.

The victory was the second in a row for the Jets since Bobby Hull, who scored his 48th goal, turned the coseching over to his assistant, Nick Mloodzik.

In other games, Toronto Toros lost 4-2 to Chicago Cougars, Houston Aeros edged Cleveland Crusaders 4-3, Edmonton Oilers topped Vancouver Blazers 5-3 and Minnesota Fighting Saints downed Quebec Nordiques 5-4.

Moments to Remember For Kuntz and West

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For Murray Kuntz of Rochester Americans and Steve West of New Haven Nighthawks, it was a memorable weekend in the American Hockey League.

Kuntz scored his 49th goal of the season, breaking a Rochester record of 48 set by Dick Gamble in 1964-65, to help the Americans tie Boston Braves 2-2 Sunday night.

West got a goal, his 46th, and an assist—giving him 100 points for the season and making him the 23rd AHL player to reach triple figures in the circuit's history—as the Nighthawks downed Virginia Red Wings 4-1.

In other Sunday games, Springfield Kings beat Cincinnati Swords 3-1, Providence Reds tied Nova Scotia Voyageurs 3-3 and Baltimore Clippers defeated Jacksonville Barons 7-3.

Richmond Robins whipped Virginia 12-3 and Cincinnati and Hershey Bears tied 3-3 in Saturday's action.

Americans 2 Braves 2

Kuntz, six short of tying the AHL goal-scoring record of 54 shared by three players—gave Rochester a 2-1 lead in the second period. Neil Murphy tied the score before the period ended. Boston's Danny Byrnes and Rochester's Larry McKillop got the other goals.

Nighthawks 4 Wings 1

Kings 3 Swords 1

Voyageurs 3 Reds 3

Despite a 33-16 advantage in shots, the Reds needed a goal by Don Borgesson at 15:30 of the third period to gain the deadlock.

Yvan Rolando scored two goals eight seconds apart to break a 2-2 second period tie. Rick Foley, Barry Salovaara, Jerry Kemp, Dave Gilmour and Bob Rivard shared the other Baltimore goals. Dick Sarrazin scored twice for Jacksonville and Kevin Ahearn once.

Season Hasn't Started But Feelings Run High

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The bad feelings between former team-mates Reggie Smith and Carlton Fisk surfaced again Monday in a major league exhibition baseball game.

Before the game Smith called Fisk, the Boston catcher, a "cripple" and "back-stabber." Then Smith tagged pitcher Bill Stoneman first pitch in the ninth inning for a homer, helping the Cards to a 4-3 victory over the Red Sox.

In the fifth inning, a foul tip off the bat of Joe Torre caught Fisk on the groin and the all-star catcher probably will be sidelined for two or three days.

Smith's homer tied the game at 3-3, and then Ken Reitz singled in the winning score with two out.

In other exhibition games, the other half of the Boston club beat Pittsburgh Pirates 10-7, Los Angeles Dodgers squashed New York Mets 9-2, Minnesota Twins beat Houston Astros 9-5, Cincinnati Reds blanked Atlanta Braves 7-0, Baltimore Orioles defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 7-2, Chicago White Sox got by Kansas City Royals 8-5, Chicago Cubs beat Oakland Athletics 6-1, San Francisco Giants defeated California Angels 8-2, Montreal Expos blasted Texas Rangers 7-1, Cleveland Indians downed Milwaukee Brewers 9-5, and the Yankees pummeled Detroit Tigers 8-1.

Steve Carlton was tagged for six runs in three innings, and outfielder Bernie Carbo hit four singles and drove in three runs to lead the other half of the Boston contingent.

Ron Cey had a homer and a single in Los Angeles' defeat of New York Mets.

Bob Darwin bonnered for two runs, and Steve Braun's circuit blow drove in another three, pacing Minnesota to its first victory of the exhibition season.

Cincinnati had 17 hits and pitchers Pat Osburn, Steve Kraisey and Pat Zachery held the Braves scoreless in the Reds' victory.

Pittsburgh committed four costly errors, and the Orioles jumped to a 5-3 lead in the fourth inning of the game off Pirate starter Bruce Kison.

Jorge Orta had two singles and a homer and drove in four for Chicago over Kansas City.

The Cubs got homers from Vic Harris and Jerry Morales, and Bill Madlock added three hits to pace Chicago's past the world champion As.

Bob Bailey doubled twice, scored two runs and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly for Montreal. The Expos touched Texas relief pitcher Tom Broberg for three runs in the fifth inning.

Charlie Spikes doubled in Cleveland's winning rally, and shortstop Frank Duffy, who had homered in the Indians' first at-bat, drove in two runs in the third inning, scored an insurance run in the Indians' victory over Milwaukee.

Bobby Murcer accounted for three Yankee runs batted in as the New York club past Detroit. Murcer doubled home two runs in the first inning, a two-run single in the fifth and scored on Graig Nettles' single in the seventh.

Curling Upsets

The Nova Scotia rink was leading 4-3 going into the fifth end, but four points was all British Columbia.

B.C. used the game in the fifth and then stole 10 points on the next four ends.

In other action, Dagny Kravdovil of Weyburn, Sask., came back from an early 5-2 deficit to steal singles on the last two ends and edge Jeanette Blair of St. John's, Nfld., 8-5.

Joyce Black of Oshawa, Ont., picked up three points on each of two big ends along with a double and a pair of singles to thump Rita Fleming of Moncton, City 10-4.

The second and third rounds of the nine-round bonspiel were scheduled for 1:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. EST today.

Lupenette Scores Three As Cornwall Wins 5-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trois-Rivieres Draveurs kept their hopes of finishing in first place in the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League's East Division alive Sunday by defeating Chicoutimi Sagueneens 2-1 in one of five games.

In other action, Montreal Juniors defeated Quebec Remparts 4-3, Sherbrooke Beavers scored a 5-3 win over Laval Nationals, Sherbrooke Dynamos outscored Hull Festivals 7-5 and Cornwall Royals downed Drummondville Rangers 5-2.

The Draveurs now have 41 points, one less than the Sagueneens, who occupy the fourth and final playoff spot in the East. But the Draveurs have three games left to play while Chicoutimi only has two.

The game-winning goal was scored by Francois Vachon at 1:32 of the sudden-death overtime. Bernard Plante and Jean Beaulieu got the other Trois-Rivieres goals with Yvon Vezeau and Daniel Lecours registering for the Sagueneens.

Dorvino Byers scored three goals and Marcel Dionais and Fernand Leblanc added a pair each as Sherbrooke bombed Laval. Peter Marek, Sid Veysey, Michel Brisebois, Denis Martel, Bob Simpson and Kurt Walker got the other Sherbrooke goals with Jean Trottier scoring twice for Laval and Jean-Pierre Vezina adding the other.

Bob Bailey - Powers Expos Lyttle Battling For Position

Like Boots Day, Mike Jorgensen, Ron Woods and others, Lyttle finds himself in a battle for a position with Montreal Expos as the club prepares for the 1974 National League baseball season.

Lyttle, a soft spoken 27-year-old native of Brampton, Ont., was acquired by Montreal from the Kansas City Royals' organization last July 19 to plug a gap in centre field. This year or course, Willie Davis has been brought in from Los Angeles as great regulars to the management—pitcher Mike Marshall—to perform in centre field as Lyttle, one of the Expos' better defensive outfielders, finds himself in the thick of the battle for left.

"I think I have a good shot at it," said Lyttle. "I think I came through last year. I hit .250 and drove in 19 runs and got some clutch hits."

While Lyttle's statistics do not appear that impressive, it must be remembered that he appeared in only 49 games with the Expos and was slowed down by a sprained ligament in his right ankle.

This year's spring training competition is nothing new for Lyttle. Last season, he had to battle for a spot with Kansas City and had the club made.

Bruins Take OCAA Title

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Sheridan College Bruins of Oakville dumped St. Clair College Saints of Windsor 6-2 Saturday to win the Ontario College Athletic Association hockey title.

The consolation title was won by Algonquin College Cats of Ottawa who downed Northern College Muskies of Kirkland Lake 11-8.

Flyers and Terriers Post Playoff Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers scored three unanswered goals in the second period Sunday to defeat Brantford Farmers 5-3 and take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Senior A semi-final playoffs.

In another playoff game Saturday, Orillia Terriers downed the Cambridge Hornets 5-3 for their second win in two games in their semi-final series.

At Brantford, Kent Rutsaa, Dean Arcuri, Paul Regan, Jack Smith and Bob Baird scored for the Flyers.

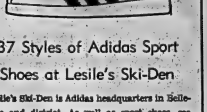
The teams were tied 2-2 going into the final period.

Brantford outshot Barrie 37-36.

Saturday at Cambridge, two goals by Gary O'Brien erased a 3-1 Hornets lead early in the third period.

Gary Marsh scored the winner for Orillia at 17:51.



Doug Fischer added an insurance goal into an empty Cambridge goal in the last minute of play. Grant Moore scored the other Orillia goal.

Gary Brewer, John Brennan and Ron Smith scored for Cambridge.

Orillia outshot Cambridge 35-30.

Few in New Brunswick Now Live by Trapping

FREDERICTON (CP) — Fur trapping in New Brunswick is not what it used to be. As a matter of fact, trapping as a way of life in the province has all but disappeared.

Though there still are about 3,000 men who set their traps each year, most are full-time farmers, guides, boys or businessmen who trap in November, December and January, more for sport than money.

Trappers today represent a cross-section of the population, said David Cartwright, fur biologist for the New Brunswick department of wildlife.

In the 1970 trapping season, about $420,000 worth of furs were brought in by trappers, about $200 a man, but the figures are misleading, said Mr. Cartwright, because 70 or 80 per cent of the furs are caught by 10 to 20 per cent of the trappers.

The most commonly-caught animals are lynx, beaver, muskrat, bobcat, fox and rabbit but up to 15 different species have given their furs to the weekend woodsmen.

Most of the furs are sold locally to dealers who later sell to national and international buyers.

One of the long-time dealers has been Brown Brothers, in business for furs for 50 years.

Sam Brown, one of the brothers, recalled recently how uncertain the early business was.

Mr. Brown said he didn't know too much about furs in the early days and got stuck by one old codger who seemed to offer an irresistible bargain.

The trapper offered Mr. Brown the skin of a fisher, a ferrike marten, for the bargain-basement price of $20 when the going price for such a fur was $250.

A while later, Mr. Brown decided to sell the fur to a Montreal dealer for the going rate and make a 500-per-cent profit.

Nothing doing. The Montreal dealer knew his furs and was not about to spend $250 for the pelt of a common house cat worth 50 cents.

"It didn't take too long to learn which furs were good and which were bad," Mr. Brown said, "especially when I lost money at it when I didn't know."

Dealing in furs is like playing the stock market—you can lose your shirt at it or you can make a nice profit, Mr. Brown said.

"I stay at it because I like it. It's in my blood. I'm semi-retired but I still like to have some fun."

One of the last of the full-time trappers is Gilbert Gibbons. He doesn't make much money at it any more—$133 so far this year—but trapping has been his life and it's the only thing he knows.

"I like trapping; it's a good life," he said during a stop at Browns to peddle a weasel skin.

After looking over the skin, Mr. Brown commented that he used to pay $3 or $4 for weasel "but now all I can offer you is a half-dollar."

After a little haggling, he got the 75 cents.

This year's demand is for pelts with long hair—fox, lynx, bobcat, and Mr. Cartwright.

Even the beaver, the animal that brought the first fur traders to this country, has been dropped as the main quarry of the trappers.

Only 4,000 to 5,000 were brought in this season. At one time, it was not unusual to see a season bring 15,000 beaver pelts.

Computer Aids Library Fill Requests

LONDON (CP) — Clients of the Science Reference Library now can punch out their requests for information on a computer keyboard.

The library says the computer, situated in Slough, several miles away from Britain's capital, responds nearly in human's languages and requires no experience to operate.

Stored in it are 20,000 references to technical papers in computers and control engineering under a system called Response 1.

In response to a query, the computer may reply with a request for further details. Then, within seconds, it provides all the relevant references together with the fee for the search.

The computer also offers a classified list of articles in current issues of scientific journals published all over the world. In 15 seconds it can hunt through 12,000 references and display those of interest, which can be looked up in the library.

The library says it intends to expand the service to other scientific fields.

Gas Now Available On Myrtle Beach Route

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — Ontario residents planning to drive to Myrtle Beach during the upcoming mid-winter school break will find gasoline availability along the major routes significantly improved.

A special on-the-spot route check conducted this week by the Canadian Embassy of the United States Travel Service showed that service station operators in New York State, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the Carolinas report generally improved stores of fuel and predicted even more improvement for the balance of this month.

No line-ups whatsoever were observed anywhere between Toronto and Myrtle Beach during the check of service station operators and police spokesmen indicated that the number of people stranded on major routes had significantly decreased since news of neighbored fuel awareness.

The following is a state-by-state analysis of availability along the route suggested by the Ontario Motor League:

The only station right on this 70-mile stretch is closed only from 9 p.m. Saturday until noon, Sunday. It is open 24 hours a day at all other times. New York State has a mandatory odd and even system from which Canadians will be exempt at this station.

Thermostat Lowering Saved $30,000

OTTAWA- (CP) — Turning down the thermostat in federal government buildings because of the energy shortage apparently saved taxpayers $30,000 in January at one Ottawa heating plant.

Victor Boulanger, chief engineer at the government's Cliff Street heating plant, said the plant produced 36 million pounds of steam less than in January, 1973, despite the fact that January this year was colder.

The Cliff Street operation is one of the largest combined heating and cooling plants in the world. It has a capacity of 600,000 pounds of steam an hour and provides heat for 38 buildings.

Erie, Pa. on Interstate 90 — Almost every station has recently expanded Sunday hours because of increased fuel supplies. Hours vary slightly from station to station, but gasoline is available from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and Saturdays — and from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sundays. Pennsylvania has a voluntary odd and even system from which Canadians are exempt in Erie. By topping up here, they can drive past Pittsburgh and through the Pennsylvania Turnpike (neither area exempts Canadians) without stopping for fuel.

BREEZEWOOD, Pa. — The majority of the 13 gas stations that operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week and all exempt Canadians from the voluntary odd and even system. By refueling in Breezewood, it should not be necessary to obtain gas in Maryland where there is a mandatory odd and even system which exempts Canadians, but limits everyone to an 8-gallon purchase.

WASHINGTON to RICHMOND, Va. —There are fewer stations open on Sundays along Interstate 95 on this section of the route, but there is enough to fill up, and Fredericksburg (halfway between Washington and Richmond) is suggested.

RALEIGH, N.C. area of Interstate 95 — Motorists will arrive in this vicinity on less than half a tank from the Fredericksburg area , and while Canadians are almost universally exempt from the state's voluntary odd and even system, there has been much confusion caused by North Carolina's unique program. All other odd and even systems work on the combination of plate and ste numbers, but North Carolina disregards this and instead considers Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays st odd and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays as even. While few stations are open Sundays, considered a free day, the North Carolina Energy Study Commission suggests that any motorists in need, contact the local police or Highway Patrol for guidance to the closest open station. Of the stations open Sundays, most are on, or near, Interstate 95.

MYRTLE Beach — South Carolina has a standard odd and even system based on calendar dates. Under this plan all Canadians are exempt and no limit is in effect.

Le Havre Only Port For Supertankers

LE HAVRE, France (CP) — Le Havre, the third-largest European port after Rotterdam and Marseilles, will be the only harbor on the northwest Coast of receiving supertankers when its oil terminal starts operation in 1975.

Already the first port for container ships, Le Havre with its 13 miles of wharves along the English Channel will handle 100 million tons of merchandise this year, compared with 89 million last year.

The French government authorized construction of the terminal for supertankers, located at Antifer, 19 miles north of here, in 1971. The construction cost is estimated at $200 million.

Once completed, the terminal should be able to accommodate Europe's increasing energy requirements.

Ice Required To Build Dam

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — Despite ultra-modern techniques being used in the construction of a new Ontario Hydro generating plant here, old-fashioned river ice still is a necessity.

It had been 30 years since icecutting was a business in Arnprior until 15 men went to work recently cutting 500-pound blocks from the Ottawa River for use at the dam site.

A. R. Cox, resident engineer at the project, said the ice is needed for cooling concrete as it is placed in forms. Otherwise the cement would crack.

Big Ships Create Lifeboat Problem

LONDON (CP) — The lifeboat is the sailor's best friend. But the friendship has been strained by technology.

Modern ships weighing a quarter or half a million tons can be an hour to come to a standstill. In an emergency, the crew may want to get off much sooner.

On a stationary ship there is no problem. The boat is lowered from davits on suspension wires, called falls. When it hits the water, the strain comes off the falls and they can be released easily.

Experiments are going on at the laboratory on a one-fifth scale model with a ship speed of about 30 knots in calm water. At first the lifeboat speed and rolled and at about eight knots it floods. The falls stretched taut and the lifeboat was towed along by them, almost completely unstable.

Now some improvement has been achieved. In calm water, the lifeboat will launch at speed if it has been stowed with its bow up at an angle of 10 degrees in the davits. This prevents the bow from burying itself in the water when it hits the sea and flooding the boat.

Waves complicate the issue, and the laboratory is experimenting in rough water. In tankers, the question is complicated by the difference in freeboard—as much as 100 feet—according to whether the tanker is loaded or empty.

Such factors as speeds of descent of the lifeboat, simplicity of lowering tackle and payout of the falls all have an effect. In addition the researchers would like to find a system that would launch a lifeboat with a good clearance from the ship's side, lessening the chances of its being smashed against the hull in rough weather.

World Football Question

Health Minister's Stand Given Silent Treatment

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Health Minister Marc Lalonde's determination to keep the World Football League (WFL) out of Canada received faint support Sunday from two quarters but only silence from the Canadian Football League which his move was designed to protect.

Delegates attending the Sports Federation of Canada annual meeting in Ottawa voted in favor of Lalonde's stand against allowing the WFL to operate in Canada. But the support was not overwhelming from among the 85 leaders representing almost every amateur sport and recreation group in Canada.

An estimated 25 delegates voted in favor, at least nine voted no and the others in attendance abstained.

In Moncton, N.B., the Canadian Amateur Football Association also voted to support the health minister's stand.

Dr. Robert Ripley of Ottawa, new CAFA president, said the objective of his association is to develop, promote and regulate Canadian football.

There was no response from the CFL. Norm Kimball, general manager of Edmonton Eskimos, said in an interview Saturday he expect from the CFL for Lalonde's efforts.

He accused the CFL of leaving the federal health minister "hanging out to dry."

In the last few years the CFL had received assurances of federal sanctions against the National Football League on several occasions. The minister indicated it favored CFL expansion in Canada.

"If the federal government was committed to take action against the NFL, how could it possibly let the World League into the country?" Kimball asked.

He said the CFL did not ask the government to boot the WFL. Toronto Northmen out of the country "but you have to take it in the context of previous government promises."

"Lalonde automatically made good on those promises."

Kimball said the Northmen didn't constitute a threat to the CFL in Toronto "but if there is a franchise in Montreal or in Vancouver it would be a serious danger."

Lalonde told the Sports Federation Saturday he was surprised at the country-wide reaction he got when he stated he would protect theCFL from the WFL.

"I could not have attracted more attention if I had personally chosen to be a streaker through the League of Democracy's annual fund-raising dinner," he said.

Lalonde revealed that the government does not consider that the erosion of the Canadian game by silence of Toronto Northmen to play in the WFL is in the best interests of Canada.

Meanwhile, Northmen president John F. Bassett said in an interview he plans to court, if necessary, to keep his team in Toronto.

Said Bassett:

"The issue is whether. . . a government can act so peremptorily and arrogantly—just walk up to an all-Canadian company and say 'Get lost, fellow.'

"That big brotherism is really a frightening thing. An individual should be able to stand up to that great monolithic structure, this is the real gut issue."

Sport Briefs

SWISS WIN C TITLE

GRINDELSE (Reuter) Switzerland clinched first place in the World Group C hockey championship Sunday with a 6-0 win over France. The Swiss, along with Italy which placed second—now will move to Group B, while Austria and North Korea, who filled the last two places, will be dropped from international competition.

WINS SOUTHEASTERN . .

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S.C., went ahead for good on the 181st lap Sunday and coasted to a one-lap victory over Bobby Isaac of Catawba, N.C. in the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's Southeastern 500 Grand National. Yarborough, driving a IPA Chevrolet, won the Southeastern 500 for the second year in a row.

SPRINTER SIGNED

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Oakland Athletics have signed Herb Washington, indoor sprint record holder to use as a pinch-runner in the coming American League baseball season,owner Charles Finley said Saturday.

BREAKS OWN RECORD . .

PARIS (AP) — Emile Puttemans, Belgium's Olympic gold medallist, broke his own world indoor record for the 5,000-metre run Sunday with a time of 13'52minutes 24.6 seconds and smashed the world three-mile indoor standard en route. His old record, set Feb. 24 in Vitrol, France, was 13:30.8.

Oddsmakers Favor Canada and U.S.

RENO, Switzerland (CP) — Canada will start his bid today to return the world curling championship to Canada playing against a ship who wasn't born until the St. Albert, Alta., farmer had been curling for 16 years.

Sam Lore, skip of the Norwegian rink, is just 15 and has been curling only four years. Gervais had won a world championship—in 1961—when Lore was two.

Gervais' rink of lead Darrell Sutton, second Warren Hansen and third Ron Amies have 76 years curling experience between them, while the combined ages of the Norwegian team is 56. Behind the skip, the rink is made up of lead Hans Oksbrud, 15, second Morten Sogvard, 17, and third Hans Bekkehord, 16.

None of the Norway crew would be eligible to curt in the Canadian championship because of their age, and they are not given any chance of getting the Alberta rink off to a bad start.

The oddsmakers have installed Gervais and Rude Somerville of the United States as co-favorites for the Air Canada Silver Broom, symbol of the world championship.

Gervais of Superior, Wisc., won the championship in 1965, the first time a non-Canadian team had won the six-year history. He also is the only U.S. skip ever to be a world champion.

Sweden knocked off the Regina rink of Harvey Mashio last year, but there is a new foursome representing the defending champion this time.

Jan Ullsten, 19, is the skip. He has Bengt Bredin, 28, at lead, Lars Carlin, 18, as second, and Tom Berggren, 31, at third.

The other rinks in the 10-team, round-robin competition are France, Italy, Germany, Denmark and Switzerland.

The rinks play two games a day through Thursday and one game Friday, unless a tie-breaker is needed, in which case it would be played Friday afternoon.

Following the round-robin, the first-place team plays the fourth-place team and the second-place team plays the third-place team. The winners play Saturday night.

The competition will be played in a rink usually used for hockey. One side of the building is open and frozen warm winds have made the ice extremely slow. One curler described the ice as "the worst I've ever seen."

Gervais says he thinks the ice will be better when the competition gets under way.

"There was a pull of snow following the rocks when we were practising," he said "It's very difficult to make the fine shots on this ice, you just have to lean back and fire them."

Extra Games Issue Bone of Contention

MEADOW LAKE, Sask. (CP) — George Reed, president of the Canadian Football League Players' Association, says he doesn't think Hamilton Tiger-Cat players will take strike action on their own.

Tiger players have threatened a walkout over the addition of two extra games to the season.

Reed said Saturday he has been in touch with Hamilton players and asked for details and suggestions as to what course of action the players' association should take.

"It's not a one-team problem or an Eastern problem, it's an association problem," he said.

The same thing could happen in the West where extra games could be added after players had committed themselves to two-year contracts, he said.

The extra games issue will definitely come up when the association holds negotiation meetings and "it's something that has to be straightened out," Reed said.

The first negotiating meeting will likely be held in Toronto early in April, he said.

The association wants the views of all its Eastern representatives before deciding what kind of compensation would be fair for CFL players, he said.

WIN NCAA TITLE

BOSTON (AP) — Freshman John Sheridan and Joe Paraplo scored early goals and the Minnesota defence in front of goalie Brad Shelstad, stood off Michigan Tech for a 4-3 victory Saturday to win the National Collegiate Athletic Association hockey championship.

We'll find that out this week-

"I suppose the U.S. will be all tough as anyone because they have been in the world championship four times and Somerville knows his way around. Gervais looks quiet but pretty good, too, because they beat don't know how good they are. last year's champion."

Did You Know VALIANT Is King Of The Compacts

If popularity is the measure of success . . . Duster measures up. Perhaps it's due to Duster's sporty good looks or the fact that it seats five adults instead of four. Or that the spare tire is tucked under the trunk floor to provide big luggage space — 19.8 cu. ft. Or maybe it's because it offers features like an Electronic Ignition System as standard, along with Unibody construction and torsion-bar front suspension. High trade-in value.

Tuesday, March 16

Aries (March 21-April 19) You are at your best today with friends who think on their feet and know how to get things done. Mix with sloppokes another time.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) This will be a good day for you concerning attainment. The rewards will be in proportion to your goals.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Others will buy your ideas today, now. Don't be reluctant to let them know what's on your mind. Be positive, assertive.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You will profit in some manner through a close companion who is willing to share something with you. Keep it a secret.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) If you are expecting others to top-perform on something you want done, get their compliments today. Tomorrow they will be less agreeable.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This can be every productive day if you keep your nose to the grindstone. Do all the little tasks that need doing.

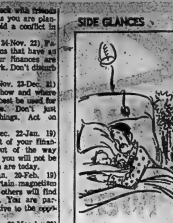
Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A good time to work on plans for future events you are planning. It will avoid a conflict in schedules.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Favorable conditions that have an effect upon your finances are presently at work. Don't disturb matters today.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will know how and where your ideas can best be used for your advantage. Don't just think about things. Act on them!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to get most of your financial dealings out of the way now. Tomorrow you will not be as canny as you are today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You have a certain magnetism about you that others will find very appealing. You are particularly attractive to the opposite sex.



Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) For best results do what needs to be done today without calling attention to yourself. Help others from behind the scenes.

Tubal Ligation Can Follow Baby

By G. C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I would like to have a tubal ligation after I have my second child. Is it possible to have it done after the baby is born while I am still in hospital?

I am only 22. Will a doctor refuse to do this so young?

Will the hospital stay be any longer than the usual 5 days?

How is this surgery done? Does it involve any cutting of the skin at all?—Mrs. A.M.

The tubes can be tied shortly after the baby is born and while you are still in the hospital. It will not prolong your stay at all.

You are pretty young for sterilization, and the doctor will doubtless consider your age. A step such as this should be taken only with the understanding that it is probably permanent, and the doctor will have in mind that you are quite a few years ahead of you in which you might change your mind—when it will be too late.

My guess is that most doctors would tell you to use some other method of birth control, at least for a number of years.

As to cutting the skin—there has to be some cutting somewhere to get at the tubes to tie them. While the uterus is still somewhat enlarged after the baby's birth, the tubes are more accessible, so an incision in the abdomen would be the likely method. It's not very big, however. If your doctor agrees to do it at all, he can tell you what to expect.

There is a technique by which the operation is performed through the vagina, hence leaving no visible scar, but it is doubtful if that would be done right after delivery of a baby.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I am wondering if I have anemia. I freeze if I try out on a cooler day, cold day, say 50 degrees. Would a blood test give the answer.—D.B.

A blood test would show whether you have anemia. Another type of blood test would show whether you have a very rare condition which causes the red blood cells to break, even rather mild chilling, hence retarding circulation.

Of course still other conditions, besides those relating to the blood, can be involved.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I would like to will my body to science to assist institutes doing research and would appreciate it if you would tell me where to write for information.—Mrs. A.

Write to the dean of any medical college of your choice—preferably, of course, one that is reasonably close to where you live. They will tell you just what is required in the way of forms, etc.

Note to Mrs. W.S.L.: I can't recast the article, but in brief I said that 1 tsp. is alcohol is alcohol. Alcohol is a drug.

When anyone becomes dependent on alcohol, he is an alcoholic—and it can happen with beer or wine as well as with any other form of alcohol.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Oswald: "It is always interesting to see experts struggling against one another. The ordinary bridge player would make only nine tricks with hearts as trump because after East won the first two diamond tricks and continued the suit or led a spade or a trump, South would hasten to ruffove, his ace and king of trumps."

Jim: "An expert South would count one high trump take the club finesse; lead dummy's eight of trumps and let it ride. The play could not hurt. I take it that expert South went down anyway."

Oswald: "You take it correctly. Expert East took his ace of diamonds and led back a club. South won in dummy and decided that East had obviously led a singleton. Hence, South played the ace and king of hearts and wound up one trick in the soup."

Jim: "Looks like cruel and inhuman punishment for South's slight overbid of three hearts. Had he just bid two hearts he would have played the hand there and made a profit against any defense."

Gas to Stay Dear

Oil Embargo End Won't Cut Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — High prices at the gasoline pumps and on the utility bill are not likely to come down, and there won't be much more gasoline at United States service stations for about two months.

That is what major oil companies in the U.S. said about Monday's announcement that the Arab oil embargo against the U.S. has been lifted.

Oil companies and industry leaders welcomed the news, and said it will have a positive impact on areas short of energy.

But they also said some shortages and high prices will remain even after oil from the Middle East begins flowing to U.S. consumers for the first time since last fall's Arab-Israeli war. They said it will take two to three months for that to happen.

The oil companies said there will be increased gasoline supplies for the summer months and predicted long gasoline lines should continue to subside both as a result of increased supplies and a hoped-for return of consumer confidence.

Spokesmen for two oil companies warned that energy conservation measures must continue.

"The lifting of the embargo is good news," said the Shell Oil Co. "But it is no sign the nation can revert to historical energy consumption patterns and uses."

"One point should be made very clear to the American public," said Standard Oil of California. "The lifting of the embargo does not mean a return to business as usual. And even if production levels were restored, the U.S. would still be in short supply."

The statements by the oil companies included these points:

-Oil affected by the embargo accounted for between 10 and 14 per cent of U.S. use. It was conceived unlikely that the Arab producers would exceed previous supply levels to the U.S., which was running short of oil even before the embargo.

-The current high prices of gasoline and other petroleum products are the result of a quadrupling in prices charged by other foreign producers, and an increase in domestic oil prices. Since the Arabs charge basically the same price as other foreign producers, there is little evidence that prices will fall. In fact, prices may go up.

-It will take between 60 and 90 days for Arab crude oil to be loaded on tankers, shipped to refineries for processing into gasoline and other products and then moved to U.S. consumers.

Two Teachers' Groups Urged to Defeat PCs

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of about 50,000 Ontario teachers were advised Monday to plan an election war chest to defeat Premier William Davis and the Progressive Conservative party.

The 35,000-member Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA) and the 34,000-member Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation (OSSTF), at their annual meetings during the winter school holiday, heard proposals for the building political action funds.

Robert Mooney, OECTA president, said in his address he will urge members to contribute a day's pay for an election fund that would total as much as $900,000 by next year.

Meanwhile, at the OSSTF meeting, the 10-man provincial executive presented the assembly with a plan to establish "a separate corporation for participation in the provincial election campaign."

The proposal is modelled on the Teachers' Political Action Committee set up by the British Columbia Teachers Federation which campaigned actively to defeat the Social Credit government of former B.C. premier W. A. C Bennett.

OSSTF vice-president James Forster said the proposed corporation would receive voluntary donations from teachers and distribute the proceeds to favorable political candidates.

No specific amount is being proposed as a contribution, he added, but the OSSTF committee is recommending that members be asked to make at least three contributions to the fund in the next year.

OSSTF president Douglas Dinsmore predicted a major confrontation this fall between teachers and the provincial government over 1975 school spending ceilings.

Both Mr. Dinsmore and Mr. Cooney urged their respective members to join political parties "of their choice" and to take an active part in the election.

Mr. Cooney said separate school teachers have an extra reason to oppose the government.

"The Conservative government has never been a friend to Catholic educators . . ." he said. "They have repeatedly said no to our requests for extension (of tax support for Catholic schools to Grade 13).

"Most decisions affecting us and the children we care about and teach are political decisions, whether we like it or not."

Mr. Dinsmore said teachers must decide this week whether they will work together to try to defeat the Davis government "for the next assembly will be too late."

He said the OSSTF has discovered this year "a change in its ability to mount projects against politicians where protest is necessary to forestall the Tory tradition of treating the public schools of Ontario as a political football."

He noted, however, that there are factions of the OSSTF that want it to be politically active and some that don't.

Mr. Cooney told OECTA members to become "card-carrying political activists" and not to hesitate to put our money where our mouths are."

Arabs Will Start Loading Tankers

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Most of the Arab oil producers prepared today to load tankers for the United States following their decision to lift their oil embargo.

Saudi Arabia, Algeria, Abu Dhabi, Bahrain, Egypt, Kuwait and Qatar agreed Monday to lift the ban on shipments to the United States that they imposed during the October Arab-Israeli war.

Their action was taken in recognition of U.S. efforts in getting Israel to withdraw from the Suez canal and in hopes State Secretary Henry Kissinger will secure a similar Israeli withdrawal on the Syrian front.

James Bay Judgment Reserved

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada reserved judgment Monday on whether to grant permission to Quebec native peoples to appeal a decision by the Quebec Court of Appeal on steps to halt the James Bay hydroelectric project.

Mr. Justice Martel Crete's ruling in the appeal court last month denied lawyers for the native peoples leave to proceed on a request for a permanent injunction against the $6-billion project until the question of a temporary injunction is settled.

Pepin Urges Consortia For Exports

TORONTO (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin, former federal minister of trade, industry and commerce, advised Canadian businessmen Monday to develop a new spirit of collectivism for a better export policy.

Speaking to the Canadian Club, he said the "collectivist" or co-operative approach to exports is coming, but slowly.

By forming export consortia modelled on the Japanese trading concerns, Canadian industry would have more strength for entering a foreign market, he said.

An agency similar to the Canada Development Corp. should be formed for the sole purpose of export development, sponsored either by government or the private sector, he added.

30 Dissident Officers Arrested in Portugal

LISBON (Reuter) — Four high-ranking officers have been dismissed and more than 30 other officers arrested in Portugal's crisis over African policy, informed sources said today.

The new chief of the armed forces general staff, Gen. Joaquin da Luz Cunha, is due to fly home from Luanda, capital of Angola, today to take over his key command in Lisbon.

Last week his predecessor, Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes, and his deputy Gen. Antonio de Spinola, Portugal's best-known soldier, lost their jobs because of the furore over a best-selling book in which Spinola advocated a political, rather than a military, solution to the costly war against guerrillas in Portugal's African territories.

The purge in the armed forces follows the bloodless end to an attempted coup in support of Spinola and the lifting of an alert confining all ar part of the Lisbon-based garrison of about 50,000 men to barracks.

Informed sources said Monday night that Gen. Amaro Romao, commandant of Lisbon's military academy, has been relieved of his post. Dissident young officers met in the academy as an abortive march on Lisbon began early last Saturday.

The same sources said Rear-Admiral Tierno Bagulho, naval secretary of the general staff, also has lost his job.

Moving Day!

Monday was moving day for this First Street bungalow which had to be relocated to make room for construction of the proposed Belleville General Hospital parking garage. The house is seen being moved west along Bridge Street on its way to its new site west of Foxboro, near the intersection of Highway 14 and the Wallbridge-Loyalist Road. Picture shows house stopped in front of Hydro Engineer Keith Quinn while workmen remove light arms and heads to allow its passage.

Millhaven Weapons Are Sought

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A search for contraband and hidden weapons will be conducted at Millhaven penitentiary as part of an agreement reached last week between administration officials and prison guards, officials said Monday.

The search was one of several requests made by the guards' representatives to the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) as a condition for an end to labor unrest.

The guards began to book off sick at the penitentiary March 7 to protest working conditions.

Prison officials also agreed to stop issuing metal knives to prisoners with their meals. They will be given plastic knives instead.

In addition new controls are to be introduced, they make include the frisking of men and women visitors.

Canadian Coming Home

MOSCOW (AP) — Eugene Lenko, who finally won a battle to return to his Canadian homeland, left the Soviet Union today and said: "It's the greatest day for me in my life."

Lenko, his Soviet-born wife and their three children left on an Air Canada flight for Montreal.

Lenko came to the Soviet Union from Canada with his Ukrainian parents in 1926 and for the last 3½ years has been trying to leave the country. At one point he joined in a sit-in at the Canadian Embassy in Moscow to dramatize his plight.

Lenko was told by officials in Kiev in February that his visa request had been granted.

At the airport he said: "I feel great. . . . I can hardly believe I am going back to my native country."

Aquatic Acquistion

A hobby can be as expensive as one wants it to be. Coins, stamps, old cars, and golf cost money. But when Jim Malhon of RR 7 in Belleville indulges in his hobby of raising fish, he spares no expense. The most recent acquisition to his collection is a $200 clown knife fish. This fish comes from South America and is 18 inches long and about 8 inches deep. Other members of his aquatic collection include a pair of piranhas in separate tanks of course.

$12,000 Grant Sought For Citizens Bureau

The Quinte District Labor Council, currently sponsoring the citizens' bureau in Trenton with the aid of a LIP grant, is looking to Belleville city council for a $12,000 grant to operate a bureau in this city.

The request was made Monday by labor council representative Gordon Young who told council the bureau was needed in Belleville to help citizens cut through the increasing amount of red tape of bureaucratic government at all levels.

Because of the complexity of life today, citizens need somewhere to go where they can receive advice and assistance without being made to feel inferior or that they are wasting their time, he said.

Assisting people with their problems is what citizens bureaus are all about, said Mr. Young.

Mr. Young said the labor council had closely watched the operations of the citizens bureau when it operated in Belleville and claimed there was definite need for continuance of the service.

During the Belleville operation more than 5,000 requests for assistance were received, while since the Trenton office opened there had been more than 600 requests.

Mr. Young aled his organization would make representation to Trenton for a grant to assist with the operation there and also would request assistance from Hastings county.

Council referred the Belleville request to the city manager for budget recommendations.

Apartment Tenant Must Move Out

A Belleville man living in an illegal basement apartment in the city's R-1 district which allows only single family residences was received official notice to vacate.

The tenant, Les Smith, who did not state the specific area in which he lives, appeared before council Monday asking for rezoning to make his apartment legal.

He told council that the basement apartment had been rented for the past six years and asked why he was being singled out when in his words "there must be other apartments in the area."

Alderman Stu Meeks attempted to bring in a motion which would grant Mr. Smith time to find another apartment but Alderman Ben Corke protested council could not act on a city bylaw with a resolution.

Meeks was substantiated by City Solicitor John C. Miller, who suggested the matter be referred to the city manager.

1977 Phaseout?

Propose Grants Be Abolished

TRENTON — Town Council is taking a hard look at who gets grants from the municipality and whether grants should be phased out altogether.

At last night's committee-of-the-whole session council considered a recommendation from the town administrative board to cease making grants to associations and agencies.

Currently receiving grants are Trenton Memorial Hospital, Victorian Order of Nurses, Canadian National Institute for the Blind, John Howard Society, Association for Retarded Children and Belleville's Cheshire Home.

The administrative report recommends grants be continued in the regular fashion this year, cut 50 per cent in 1975, reduced to 25 per cent the following year and abolished in 1977.

Comments during the session indicating a feeling the number of agencies supported by town grants is getting out of hand. Last year the town spent, more than $11,000 in donations.

Discussion of the recommendation at last night's meeting halted when councillors queried how they could phase out agencies without knowing more information.

"It's going to hurt some of them that's for sure," said Councillor Bob Wannamaker.

The subject has been tabled for two weeks to give councillors time to conduct personal investigations of the agencies and further consider the problem.

When council reconvenes to discuss donations it will be equipped with a complete list of recipients.

Schools Asked For Summer

Bloomfield — The recreation and parks department has requested use of four Prince Edward schools again this summer for a parks program.

It is expected that summer parks will be opened at Pinecrest Memorial elementary school, Bloomfield; North Marysburgh Centennial school, Sophiasburgh Central school and Queen Elizabeth school in Picton.

The parks supervised by employees of the recreation department, will be operated from July 8 to August 23 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Council Ponders Cost Of Marina At Trenton

TRENTON — "More pressing needs" have pushed a full-scale marina back onto the shelf following Trenton town council meeting last night.

The council's report, read in part to the meeting — indicated the project would cost the town about $402,000. Another $300,000 would be picked up by senior governments.

The town's administrative board, in its report to council, recommended shelving the project as too costly in view of other "more pressing needs." There was no specific mention of what these needs were.

Councillors seemed to concur with the report. Mayor Robert Patrick said, "its a pretty ambitious. It would be nice to have, but its way down in the list of priorities."

Council agreed that while Trenton was a key as location for boating traffic the project was out of line in respect to cost.

However, council decided to reopen the question back to specialists who might be able to trim some costs and provide a marina on a lesser scale.

Council recognizes the need for a boating facility and agreed in light of cost increases since the project was first considered in Centennial Year, "its a now-or-never situation."

Building Delays Bring Questions

TRENTON — Municipal office building consultants were on the firing line at town council's committee-of-the-whole session last night.

Council bombarded Lassing and Associates with what it called its deficiency list. At one point Mayor Robert Patrick a little arm twisting sought the solution to holdups in sub-contracted work.

The list included, broken lights, a door, humidifier parts, door closers, front entrance clean up, frozen kitchen drains, heating and electrical wiring.

For the most part David Humm, representing the consultants explained parts were on back order and that nothing could be done until parts arrive.

This led Mayor Robert Partick to suggest; "I think you had better twist their arms."

Mr. Humm was requested to consider decoration of the entrances to the building and to report back on delivery of parts at next Monday's council session.

Family Service Budget OK

TRENTON — Town council last week approved Hastings County Family and Children's Services budget of $45,554.

Eyebrows raised when the budget first appeared at council when it was determined the town's contribution had escalated more than 40 percent.

Council met in caucus to discuss the matter last week and it was not learned until last night's the committee-of-the-whole meeting that council met last Monday to approve the budget. This approval followed a meeting with senior county officials behind closed doors.

It's Automatic

TRENTON — Trenton town council last night approved purchase of an automatic cheque-signing machine.

Town treasurer Brian Fagan said about an hour and one-half is spent each week just signing cheques.

Bill Renoy: Do-it-yourself

They're Homemakers!

By MARGARET HATLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Do-it-yourself homebuilding has meant substantial savings for Picton mathematics teacher William Renoy.

Mr. Renoy estimates that he has saved $13,00-$16,000 by forming a partnership with his wife, Fran, to build an attractive three-bedroom home on Hill St.

Originally, the young couple planned to buy an older home for remodelling. With no previous experience in carpentry, Mr. Renoy felt it would be best to begin with renovations instead of starting from scratch.

It proved difficult to find a suitable home. The ambitious do-it-yourselfers finally decided to buy a lot and build. Mr. Renoy purchased a long, narrow lot and discovered that many home blueprints featured floor plans unsuited to the lay of his land. Other plans, compatible with the size of the lot, did not appeal to the teacher.

Since it was to be his first experience in construction Mr. Renoy decided "to keep it simple". He finally designed-his own plan.

A teacher at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Mr. Renoy received assistance from a co-worker in preparing the blueprints.

Construction began last August. Since that time the Renoys have spent much of their spare time on the house.

Mrs. Renoy, Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital cmrolyree, tackled the project with as much enthusiasm as her husband. She learned how to mix cement and mortar and helped carry blocks.

When the time came she climbed a ladder and helped shingle the cottage roof of the new bungalow.

Her husband notes that although she is normally frightened by heights, Mrs. Renoy became so absorbed in her work that soon she was riding like to the edge of the roof.

Mr. Renoy, now working on the interior, says home-builder has saved $13,000-$16,000 in the beginning.

"You exploit yourself in certain ways through simple little mistakes," he comments.

He says he has made no expensive errors in his work to date but reports that he remains "very apprehensive" about the construction project.

About six teachers in Prince Edward recently have built their own homes and there is a brisk trade in exchanges of problems encountered and of information on bargain buys in building materials.

When it was time for Mr. Renoy to install the roof trusses into place friends offered help and simplified the task. Neighbors frequently stopped by to check progress. The builders says their interest and encouragement increased his confidence.

For intricate jobs like wiring and plumbing Mr. Renoy was aided by the expertise of a commercial electrician from Prescott.

The Renoys have built their dream house with an eye to the future and particular care has been taken to ensure that it will never become an Orphan" on the real estate market.

"You are building the house for yourself and you want something simple but you don't want to get stuck with something," says Mr. Renoy.

He has averted the probability of this by adhering to a few basic building rules. Since the focal point of a house is its front door an attractive entrance has been installed to create a good first impression. A spacious foyer was included in plans to prevent any impression of cramped quarters.

The Renoys have no target date for moving from their Main Street apartment to their first house. Construction work is continuing nonstop and, with the school break this week, the couple will have extra time for their project.

"It's something very worthwhile to do with your spare time," says the energetic high school teacher.

Protest Brings Bata Shoe Walkout

BATAWA — About 200 production workers and machinists at the Bata Shoe engineering department were off their jobs this morning here, protesting a slowdown in clicktrol transfer stations.

The walkout began at 8:30 a.m. when 10 workers walked off the job two hours before finishing their shift finished.

Then about 360 workers arriving for the 4th shift at 7:30 a.m. refused to cross the picket line and stayed off their jobs.

Main disagreement centres around cost-of-living increases, said Al Rolston, vice-president, Local 1791, International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

The company is offering workers a 13-cent-an-hour increase over two years in lieu of a cost of living bonus. The union is asking for an increase of one cent for every 3 per cent on the cost-of-living scale on a one year contract.

The company is offering a 12.5 per cent wage increase over two years for incentive workers and 5.6 per cent over two years for non-incentive workers. Incentive workers are those paid a bonus along with hourly wage.

The union is seeking an increase of 15 per cent over two years for incentive workers and 30 per cent for non-incentive workers, said Mr. Rolston.

Negotiations between the company and the union broke down March 8. The contract expired March 14. Company officials were unavailable for comment this morning.

Three Firms Bid on Arena Roof

TRENTON — Three tenders to bring the Trenton Community Gardens arena roof up to provincial standards were discussed at town council's committee of the whole session last night.

The roof, and its alleged weakness, has been the centre of concern for several months since the province refused its minimal building standards particularly those bearing on the amount of weight the arena roof can support.

While there is a local attitude the roof is sufficient in strength to handle area snowfalls, the provincial government isn't satisfied.

Tenders for the necessary work, as outlined in an engineer's plan, were submitted by Miron-Wiggers ($37,000); J. Cecil Construction ($62,400); and a Toronto firm, Thorpe and Trunks ($77,077).

The Toronto firm, after submitting a tender to engineer's specification, proposed an alternative to the outline which would cut the project's cost to $62,000.

Within the tender it was outlined they would be a $800-a-day penalty for exceeding the June 15 deadline.

Responding to a question from Mayor Robert Patrick, deputy-clerk Arden Royce said there was no allowance or similar bonus for early completion of the project.

All tenders have been turned over to the town's engineering department for detailed analysis.

Need back taxes

DELORO — Deloro village council has decided on action against a few ratepayers who are in arrears.

Council felt the burden of costs was being unfairly borne by the remainder of taxpayers.

On other business:

Residents were reminded that garbage must be in garbage bags or securely tied boxes for pickup.

Tax Break Due.

TRENTON — Due to tangle in legislation, Trenton taxpayers will get a two-week break on the first payment which was originally scheduled for March 21.

Apparently the first billing will be due in mid-April, following a presentation by town Treasurer Brian Fagan at last night's committee of the whole session.

Hot water—
one way to avoid wasting it

But like all water heaters, it uses energy. So it makes good sense not to waste it.

For example, at one drop per second, a dripping hot water tap can waste approximately 175 gallons of hot water a month... waste that a new washer in the faucet will easily stop.

Comeback for Trains

Trains as a means of transportation are making a comeback of sorts. And they are undergoing renewed exposure in the media — on television for instance with the Pierre Berton series, The National Dream, and a documentary on coast-to-coast travel.

Where does the future of train travel lie — if indeed there is a future for it? We know that the passenger-carrying factor is not paying one sin of last cars and planes, not to mention buses, remains the major means of ferrying Canadians from one place to another. And if the trains are not a paying proposition, and require heavy subsidization, how then can there be any notion of extending train service, and especially since the trend in recent years has been to phase out many uneconomic routes?

These are the kind of questions those having the responsibility of railroad economics face on a day-to-day basis.

Nevertheless there is this cautious optimism, brought on in part by the energy crisis, that the railroads could play an important new role in transportation in this country. The existing facilities are reliable enough, if sluggish where timetables (trains seldom run on time) and the strike weapon (something that can and is used on the slightest pretext) are concerned. Our trains are tried and trusty but they have an elderly air about them compared with the slick, sleek, fast-moving and frequent diesel-type powered trains of Europe. There too, they have the population to fill them and make them economically feasible.

If trains are to become a more important factor on the Canadian transportation scene in future, the best place to start is with trying to effect an improvement of existing facilities. A recent Ontario Journal feature by two of its women reporters, was a reminder that service in and out of the capital leaves a lot to be desired, and this despite the fact that passenger travel on CN's Ottawa-Toronto trains rose 20 per cent in January and February.

The report told of unwanted passengers in the form of cockroaches, and it complained of dirty cars, poor lighting so it was impossible to read, lineups for coffee — and prior to the start of the trip, lineups at the station and discovering that seat reservations made in advance would not be honored — all this on a Friday night trip in February from Ottawa to Guildwood outside Toronto.

If Canada plans to continue in the railroad business, at the very least let's have the existing facilities upgraded. If this is found to be beyond the companies' reach, then forget about something better in the future, the economics of which at best are greatly suspect.

Historian Honored

The award of the Canadian Historical Association's certificate of merit to Belleville's Gerald Boyce for "outstanding" contributions to local history in Canada is well deserved. Mr. Boyce's initiatives in focusing public attention on the history of the community and Hastings county are well known. So are his literary efforts, among them Historic Hastings and Hutton of Hastings. Mr. Boyce was the only Ontario resident to receive the award, which is made annually, with the Hastings County Museum (which he was instrumental in establishing in 1961) now enjoying renewed popularity in its new setting at Glanmore House, the value of Mr. Boyce's efforts in this direction come even more into focus.

Question of Privacy

Did we hear it aright, on the radio the other day, something about an Ontario cabinet minister saying streaking might be offensive to some in a public place but on the university campus it was another matter — in effect all right?

Well we did allow recently that streaking, amid today's dismal international situation, could be regarded as comic relief, so let's not find it any further approbation than that or ascribe to it any profound ethical for the life of the world of which already there are more than enough.

As for the political, it should know better. Our best hope for the university students is that they grow up — and swiftly — at which point they likely will look back on their escapade with something less than favor.

The altogether may be all very well, but for most of us it is best displayed in private.

Taiwan, Although Shunned Politically, Enjoys Trade Boom

By JOHN D. HARKINS
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Whatever happened to Nationalist China or Taiwan, as it now is called. In all the hullabaloo about Washington-Peking relations Taiwan is both benefitted by that event but also bypassed with the U.S., Japan and European offshore industries in Taiwan hustling to meet world demand.

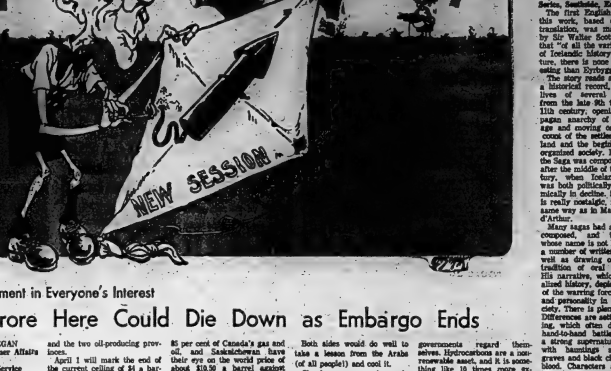
Taiwan, though tossed out of the United Nations in 1971 to be replaced by her mortal enemy the People's Republic of China, was, in 20th place among world trading nations in 1972. Her exports of $2.8 billion, well in excess of Communist Chinese foreign exchange per capita income of the third highest in Asia. Only ahead of her are Japan and Singapore.

Some of the facts about Taiwan industry are hard to believe. Mr. Yen, owner of one of the black and white television sets in the U.S. is no longer a domestic company but Taiwan. Taiwan's shipbuilding capacity which puts to shame even the traditional shipbuilders like Canada, now can build 1.5 million tons each year.

The giant $30-million Kaohsiung shipyard under construction will be added to earlier capacity which built some of the first jumbo ships in excess of 80,000 tons for the U.S. National Bulk Carriers.

Sony, Hitachi, RCA, Zenith and a host of other companies among themselves, also have fabricating outlets in Inverness Taiwan, many of these offshore. All of them operate at salary levels far under what they pay at home in the U.S., but also less than those in Japan, Indian home of cheap skilled labor.

In fact, Taiwan replaced Japan as the leading source of truly inexpensive skilled labor. How protective legislation both here and in the U.S. may soon have to be raised against the Taiwan economy and no longer unfairly the Japanese.



Beneath the bikini, flowered fingers and helmet of Communist China and the new humiliation of the Nixon visit to Peking and world nations from Taipeh to Peking. Since Canada broke diplomatic relations with Nationalist China in recognition for a similar U.S. one in Peking.

In her foreign trade surplus, all new contracts must be signed by representatives of Taiwan, not China, if the island republic is to get the business.

Not currently heard from on the island's prosperity are the Communist guerrillas, still at war with viciously by Chiang's army and secret police—but who can have no lies whatsoever with Peking which claims Taiwan as its unredeemed Chinese province.

Some of the most influential businessmen and industrial leaders are in exile, or in prison at home. The logical development for Taiwan would seem to be independent nationhood in Asia, bolstered by the South Korea and the Philippines as a base for investment and industry.

Unfortunately for Taiwan could not escape a role within a power bloc; if not the benign American one, then the tougher Communist Chinese one which few seem to want.

Oil Furore Here Could Die Down as Embargo Ends

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

With the easing of the Middle East oil embargo, let's hope that there will be an easing in the tensions between Ottawa and the two oil-producing provinces.

April 1 will mark the end of the current ceiling of $4 a barrel that the federal government has imposed on the price of crude oil in Canada.

Alberta, which produces 80 to 85 per cent of Canada's gas and oil, and Saskatchewan have their eye on the world price of about $10.50 a barrel against just under $3 in 1972 and they want some of the action.

Ottawa is resisting, out of fear of economic upheaval.

Both sides would do well to take a lesson from the Arabs (of all people!) and cool it.

Clearly, a case can be made for a province's return to the producers of oil and gas, and to the owners as the provincial governments regard themselves. Hydrocarbons are a non-renewable asset, and it is somewhat like 19 times out of 20 expensive to discover and develop new reserves than to find them.

But the big increases in profits that are being reported by the oil industry every time months suggest that the producers are already getting a reasonable return on their investment plus a comfortable cushion for future exploration and production needs.

Boosting the domestic price of Canadian oil to $10.50 a barrel might not be the bonanza that Alberta and Saskatchewan think.

Seriously, it would be a serious blow to Ontario, which is the province most involved in the development of the western oil and gas industry by buying its products rather than the cheaper Venezuelan oil and U.S. gas.

Today's shortages have a way of becoming tomorrow's surpluses. The history of many commodity markets show. That's because high prices encourage producers to expand their output, and, at the same time, reduces purchasers to curtail their consumption.

There is evidence of buyer resistance even now. According to Ontario Energy Minister Darcy McKeough, plans to build two fertilizer plants in the province at a cost of $100-million are being reconsidered because of the outlook for natural-gas prices.

Alberta might argue that Ontario has brough industry already, and that the West should get more. Fine—if a province that enjoys nearly full employment toward such disorders. Cause breakdown of the old moral virtues — honesty, sobriety, self-restraint, faith in the pledged word, ruggedness. Communist 'Rules of Revolution' Still Valid
Half-a-Century After They were Formulated

As Published in
The Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

Editor's Note: To the best of our knowledge, this article was first printed in Bartleville Examiner-Enterprise in 1919. It was reprinted again in 1965 in The New World News, after the Florida attorney general secured it from a former member of the Communist party, who acknowledged that it was then still a part of the communist program.

In May of 1919, at Dusseldorf, Germany, the Allied forces obtained a copy of some of the "Communist Rules of Revolution." Now, more than 50 years later, we are still being affected by them. A. Corrupt the youth and get them away from religion. Get them interested in sex. Make them superficial; destroy their ruggedness. B. Get control of all means of publicity, thru: 1. Get people's minds off their government by focusing their attention on athletics, sexy movies, plays and immoral movies. 2. Divide the people into hostile groups by constantly harping on controversial matters of no importance. 3. Destroy the people's faith in their natural leaders by holding the latter up to contempt, ridicule and disgrace. 4. Always preach true democracy, but seize power as fast and as ruthlessly as possible. 5. By encouraging government extravagance, destroy its credit, produce years of inflation with rising prices and general discontent. 6. Incite unnecessary strikes in vital industries, encourage civil disorders and foster a lenient and soft attitude on the part of government toward such disorders. 7. Cause breakdown of the old moral virtues — honesty, sobriety, self-restraint, faith in the pledged word, ruggedness. 8. Cause the registration of all firearms on some pretext, with a view to confiscating them and leaving the population helpless. This is quite a list, isn't it? Now, stop to think — how many of these rules are being carried out in this nation today?

Belleville for Shopping

Letter in The Peterborough Examiner

I live in Bancroft and as a rule travel to Belleville for my shopping needs as Peterborough inevitably fails to meet my requirements. However last weekend the advertisements on CKPT-TV enticed me to the "Home and Recreation Show" at the Memorial Centre. May I say that I shall not be so easily fooled in the future. It cost me $4 to enter and if it wasn't robbery it was next to it. Inside there were a few variety walking up and down George Street. Everyone who belongs to peoperate such a boar merely managed to succeed in undermining the integrity of the city of Peterborough as a better camping selection in my basement. I shall continue to do my shopping in Belleville.

PCs Keep Prices Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite an attempt to scuttle the controversial Progressive Conservative income and price control policy, the party's convention kept and stiffened the policy Monday.

Meanwhile, party Leader Robert Stanfield told the convention he has a "tight, overriding purpose, and that is to form the next government of Canada."

In his keynote address to about 1,300 cheering delegates attending the three-day convention, Mr. Stanfield expressed confidence in a Conservative victory in the next election, but cautions the convention is dealing with.

It was a workshop on economic policy that rejected the idea of grandstanding a freeze on wage hoosts to low-income people could receive higher pay increases than those on higher incomes.

James Gillies, MP for Don Valley and party finance critic in the Commons, was surprised by the decision. He said any economics freeze by a Conservative government should include such a provision.

He said, however, he feels the party can live with another policy proposal which would exempt agricultural prices from price controls.

Jack Horner, a rancher and MP for Crowfoot, introduced the motion with the aim of delaying the policy of prices and incomes.

"I'm against wage and price controls," he told a reporter later. "I'm giving a way to get off that fence. I think they'll (convention delegates) accept it."

But the attempt was defused when party policy framers at the workshop heard the floor. They said it was never intended they said it was never intended to freeze farm prices.

Exams Sought

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Nearly 100 high school and university students from across Ontario criticized provincial education system Monday as being "inadequate."

As a solution, the group called for reinstatement of province-wide Grade 13 examinations and a return to compulsory high school courses.

The group, called the Ontario Interdenominational Co-Educational Youth Conference, was ending a three-day conference. It decided at the meeting to adopt a new name—the Ontario Youth Parliament.

Rail Brief

OTTAWA(CP) — The Canadian Railway Labor Association, representing 16 railway unions, has predicted in a brief to cabinet that there will once again play a major role in contract talks for freight haulers this year.

The railway unions, representing more than 100,000 workers, won wage increases of between 25 per cent to 40 per cent in a two-year agreement in January.

Less Flu

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario health ministry released statistics Monday showing the incidence of influenza down sharply in the first two months of the year compared with the same period in 1973.

Cocaine Seized

TORONTO (CP) — A man was arrested after customs officers discovered 19 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $1 million in luggage at Toronto international Airport, RCMP said Monday.

An RCMP spokesman said the drug was found in the lining of a suitcase Sunday night following arrival of a regular flight from Jamaica.

Strike Over

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A three-week strike by coal miners in southern West Virginia ended Monday when miners in the last remaining holdout areas returned to work.

May Take Weeks to Settle Fate of Grand Jury Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may take weeks for the House of Representatives Judiciary committee to learn whether it will receive the secret grand jury report on President Nixon's role in Watergate.

U.S. District Judge John Sirica ruled Monday that the report should go to the committee for its impeachment inquiry, but at least one Watergate defendant said he expects to appeal the ruling.

Sirica delayed implementation of his ruling for two days to permit filing of appeals.

John Wilson, lawyer for former presidential aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, said Monday: "It is our present intention to pursue appellate review."

William Hundley, lawyer for former attorney-general John Mitchell, said he hasn't decided yet whether to appeal the order.

"If we go up, it'll be on the very narrow ground that if there is something in the presentment that reflects on Mitchell we would want that expunged," Hundley said.

Far North Will Get More Say

OTTAWA (CP) — A louder parliamentary voice and more autonomy for the 55,000 people in the two northern territories could be realized readily Monday when the Commons completed second reading of two bills.

One bill would permit appointment of two northerners to the Senate. The other would increase the size of the Yukon territorial council to 15 elected members from seven while the Northwest Territories council would lose its four appointed members but increase its elected representatives to 15 from 10.

Mrs. Pat Firth (NDP—Northwest Territories) and Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) are only two northerners in the 264-seat Commons, generally agreed on the bills affecting the territorial councils, but disagreed on the Senate proposal.

3 Million Tax Returns Processed

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Revenue Department has received 3.1 million individual income tax returns so far, processed about 1.3 million of them and paid out $201.7 million in refunds, a spokesman said Monday.

This year's processing of 1973 federal income tax returns is running faster than last year, when 2.7 million 1972 returns had been received, 577,000 processed and $65 million in refunds paid out by this time, he said.

Almost all of the individuals whose tax returns have been processed so far this year have received refunds, averaging about $183 each to 1.1 million single or married taxpayers. Most early returns are from persons with relatively simple tax situations who expect to get refunds.

At a hearing before Sirica March 6, Wilson argued that the grand jury lacked the authority to issue such a report and that if it were sent to Congress the contents probably would leak out and possibly prejudice his clients rights to a fair trial.

However, Sirica noted that "the person on whom the report focuses, the president of the United States, has not objected to its release to the committee."

Sirica said the report "draws no accusatory conclusions ..."

"The report is a simple and straightforward compilation of information gathered by the grand jury, and no more."

Ontario Requests Details of Bell

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces are again tackling Bell Canada head-on over the issue of getting information out of the telephone utility to fight rate increase applications.

Bell, in fighting back, raised the issue of the provinces' standing to enter into the corporate decision-making process.

And injected into the debate is the exercise of the federal cabinet position over the chairman of the Canadian transport commission as it hears and decides upon the Bell application.

The latest issue involves an Ontario request for details on five Bell projects. Lawyers for the provinces argue that they need details on selected projects to study Bell's approach to establishing revenue requirements, than new rates.

The transport commission's telecommunications committee is hearing an application by Bell for a broad-range of rate increases. These include an additional 10 cents a month for a primary residential telephone, an extra one cent on each minute of overtime telephone calls and 20 cents instead of 10 for local pay phone calls.

Ray Appeals

NASHVILLE (AP) — James Earl Ray, serving a 99-year prison term for the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King, will ask a federal judge Monday to end his solitary confinement. He said one reason he was being held in solitary was fear that he might embarrass the state officials.

He has asked to be allowed to mingle with the general prison population, to go to the library and church and to be given the same food as other prisoners.

Ray has been in solitary continuously since July, 1972.

Conservatives Abstain So Labor Wins Easily

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Employment Secretary Michael Foot have won wide acclaim for a nimble performance in averting a crucial Commons vote that had threatened to topple Britain's new Labor government.

The Tories had vowed to force a vote on what they called the government's failure to commit itself publicly to maintaining statutory controls over incomes.

They had the backing of the 14 Liberal members, and opposed a serious threat to the minority government. But in the last hours before the vote Conservative spokesmen announced they had decided to drop the whole issue.

The government later won a routine vote on the speech from the throne, outlining its legislative program, 294 to 7. An attack by the Liberals and Scottish Nationalists on the speech was won by Labor 285 to 21. The Conservatives abstained in both votes.

Arctic Pipeline Request Is Ready

WASHINGTON (CP) — A 48-pound report—representing an outlay of about $4 million a pound—will be placed on desks here and in Ottawa Thursday when a 27-company consortium sets out plans for a natural gas pipeline south through Canada from Alaska.

The occasion will be the official filing for permission to construct a 2,600-mile line costing an estimated $5.7 billion—sought by the Alaska Arctic Gas Pipeline Co. and its sister firm, Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline, Ltd.

A rival application, calling for construction of a line across Alaska without touching Canadian territory, is expected later this year from El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Bill Thompson, spokesman for Alaskan Arctic, said: "Chances for quick approval are better in Canada than they are down here.

"We're hopeful that there will be quick endorsement from Ottawa."

A Canadian expert said that as far as environmental considerations are concerned, it is possible that Canadian approval might come earlier than would be possible on the U.S. side.

He said, however, there have been no clear answers yet concerning native claims and there might be litigation on that point.

So far, there has been virtually no opposition to the proposed line from environmental groups and other critics who held up the Alyeska oil pipeline across Alaska for three years on the courts and in committee hearings.

The Canadian expert, who asked not to be identified, said such opposition might emerge in the future. Critics may wait to see exactly what is proposed by the Arctic group.

On the Canadian side there had been enough studies done to reduce complaints, he said, but he was unsure there would be complaints.

Won't Intervene

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Monday the government has no immediate plans to intervene in a strike by members of the Steelworkers' International Union (SIU) on the Great Lakes.

Spring Measles Outbreak May Be Epidemic of Past

The traditional biennial measles outbreak may be a thing of the past as the immunization of 13-month-old infants against the disease becomes a matter of course in every local family.

This is the time of year when measle cases reached nearly epidemic proportions particularly in two or three year cycles.

In former years, according to Hastings-Prince Edward Counties Medical Officer of Health, Dr. C.R. Lenk "we knew that everyone had had red measles by the time they were six years old. The rate of incidence was 100 per cent red measles, some among children who were actually vaccinated.

"We no longer use that strain of vaccine," he adds.

"The type we give now is very efficacious.

Whether a vaccination lasts a lifetime isn't established but Dr. Lenk believes they do.

He said that one argument raised against measles vaccination is that in childhood it is a relatively "trifling disease" but it could be more serious in an adult.

"Maybe it could kill you at 40 - we don't know because we've all had the disease."

But, he adds, "at least now we know where we are," and advocates continued vaccination of infants, especially since this prevents the occasional serious side effects of the disease itself.

While the current county health program includes only vaccination for red and "German" measles, mumps vaccine is sometimes included in the immunization administered by family physicians. The provincial program, which is followed by the local health unit, views mumps as a very mild disease which is not strongly infectious.

within a two or three year period."

In 1967, the health unit began immunization by administering a dead vaccine and a live booster. In 1969, Dr. Lenk says, the administration of dead vaccine was ended. In 1970, "German" measles immunization was added and in 1972 a combined vaccine came into use.

"German" measles used to run in cycles of six to nine years, Dr. Lenk says, but like red measles it's impossible to say whether these cycles will totally disappear.

Last year, for example, he said, in the Roslin, Tweed and Madoc area there was a "rather large" outbreak of red measles, some among

At the meeting, Helen McLaren was named delegate to the Women's Institute convention scheduled for early May in Waterloo.

Guest speaker was Lois McMechan, a matron at the Quinte Regional Detention Centre at Napanee, who discussed the centre for girls who are drug users. Ms. McMechan recommended that parents discuss drugs with their children and said she believed more centres should be established and that legalization should prevent the sale of needles to the general public.

Pill Poppers

SIDNEY, B.C. (CP) — Alcoholism authority J. George Strachan says when women become alcoholics they tend to become pill poppers also. Mr. Strachan, former director of the Alcoholism Foundation of Alberta, says as many as 90 per cent of female alcholics in North America are also abusing sleeping pills and tranquillizers. He says the pill habit is more common in female alcoholics.

Fights for Girls

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rowa Dexter, counselor at Eric Hamber secondary school, complains: "As soon as I start to stir things up at school I get notes saying 'cut out that women's lib stuff.'" She says girls are discriminated against in schools. "Women have to develop some sort of 'positive self' concept. But the way things are structured this is difficult to do."

Successful Living

Man 'Mixed Up, Pitiable'

By DORIS CLARE ... loving." — Jean Vanier.

"We live in a world of wounded people, wounded brothers and sisters wounded perhaps by their holiness, in their hearts, psychologically.

"We are called to break dividing wall of hostility ... people are living for riches instead of serving, living instead of loving."

Isn't it the truth? One lady I know makes a practice of giving little things, big things, even just a message on a bank-note if she knows it will give someone joy.

When someone comes to her about the way she lets his money and things get from her so easily, she says, 'Well, I can't take it with me; and

Ann Landers

Shocked at Advice, Reader Criticizes Ann

Dear Ann Landers: I was up into the kidneys and create a shocked at your advice to the mother whose 10-year-old child was still wetting the bed. You said, "take her to a doctor first and find out if there is an organic problem." And don't be surprised if there isn't, because nine out of 10 cases of bed-wetting are due to emotional problems.—Then you went into your old song and dance about the fetal position, blah, blah, blah, blah.

My son is now seven years of age. For years he woke up every morning in a drenched bed.

I was going to take him for counseling when a friend suggested a doctor who had helped very little of her child. He claims almost all cases of bed-wetting are due to small bladders.

This doctor put my son on a medication and took him off all liquids in the late afternoon and evening. Within a few weeks the bed-wetting stopped completely.

Please tell people about this wonderful new drug and stop giving them that nonsense about emotional problems.—Happy Mother

Dear Mother: I did not print the names of the drug because some darned fools would go out and buy it in spite of what I'm going to tell them.

That drug is used to treat people who are mentally ill and in a state of depression. Expanding of the bladder is considered one of the "undesirable side effects."

My consultant on this matter is a professor at Harvard Medical School and one of the world's most distinguished kidney specialists. He had this to say: "I hope that mother will get another medical opinion at once because the course she is following can be extremely dangerous. If the child has a bladder problem and takes a drug that expands his bladder, it could cause the urine to back

I'm having a barrel of fun."

Dear Doris: For two years I have been living with a man I think I love. He is 18 years older than I am. At first it was nothing but a very strong physical attraction. He never got through high school but he is warm and affectionate; that is, when he is not hitting me.

You see, he is practically eaten up with jealousy. We have lived together in a dump apartment for two years, and his jealousy is so strong that he bawls me out if I even suggest going out with him. He thinks I will be looking at the other men, whereas ever we go. Occasionally, I am so brained that the pain does not go away for weeks.

Afterwards, and when he sobers up, he is all apologies and affection. I suppose to you the answer is just leave him. But there are feelings involved here. — It's Heartbreaking.

Dear Heartbreaking: This creature is no man but a miserable, pitiable child. If he wasn't also physically strong, we could just pity him and leave it at that.

You'll have to harden your heart or he can mean disaster for both of you. Break up that union. You can have love and affection without tensions and tantrums and physical abuse.

Soften your spine, girls. If you don't do it now it's bound to happen later on.

Dear Doris: I am the writer who asked for help for a dear friend of mine who is in a terrible condition. I am now resigned to the situation and I do feel better. As I am an totally deaf I have much to be thankful for.

I do have friends and besides and as I look around I find many others with much more to complain about; and so count my blessings.

This time I am enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the Canadian resources for instruction for would-be writers. When I "take Arts my professor suggested I try writing and I found that course needed more work than I had time for.

Maybe — just maybe —I could learn and improve now that I have no family to care for and no occupation — World-be-Writer.

Dear World-be Writer: You have done a big thing in accepting your handicap, one of the most difficult of handicaps. It is no isolating.

If your professor recognized a latent talent for writing, I'm betting on you. Writing is wonderful self-expression, besides the fact that we need people to record our passing show.

Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 25 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you have not received a leaflet requested, it may be that you have neglected to include the necessary eight-cent stamp. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper.)

Books By And About Women

DAUGHTERS OF ERIN

By Elizabeth Cadwell

With St. Patrick's Day just gone by, a book about Ireland seems like just the right choice.

This book is specifically about Irish women, five of the outstanding women during the years in which Ireland won victory and independence.

Although Ireland is depicted in myth and poetry as a woman, it is, in fact, a man's country more than most. The women who have achieved prominence are few, and are splendid as stars in their isolation.

Maud Gonne (1866-1953), the stunning beauty for whom W.B. Yeats wrote so many of his poems, is perhaps the most widely-known of the five women. Miss Cockshutt has chosen to describe Maud Gonne was a fiery revolutionary, an agitator and demonstrations, a social worker who single-handedly carried a disastrous famine.

Countess Constance Markievicz (1868-1927) was the only uniformed woman officer in the Easter Rising of 1916, a passionate champion of Irish freedom.

Sarah Purser, portrait painter, and two of the Abbey Theatre actresses, Sara Allgood and her sister Marie O'Neill, complete the book in the collection as representatives of the many women who dedicated their lives to Irish arts.

Two of the five women inspired Irish writers, and all of them were dedicated politically and artistically, from the strangling ties with England.

This is also a book about women's struggles — never fiercer by Victorian and Edwardian convention, by every sort of difficulty and discouragement - to live the lives of complete human beings in a man's world.

Welfare Squeeze

'I Wish I Could Afford to Die'

ABBOTSFORD, B.C. — (CP) — When you're on welfare, dignity, like everything else, is a scarce and expensive commodity.

"The body can survive on welfare," said Flora Kenyon, 55. "But it does terrible things to the mind. Children are stigmatized."

Mrs. Kenyon, her husband Ken, 60, and their two children have lived on welfare since 1967 when illness forced Mr. Kenyon to close his small trucking business in Vancouver.

They moved to this Fraser Valley community where they rented a small house for $61 a month. That left about $200 a month from the welfare cheque for food, fuel, clothing and other basics.

Since then, their monthly income has nearly doubled: $350 from welfare, $40 family allowance, and $100 Mrs. Kenyon earns in her advocate for welfare applicants in the Abbotsford Community Services office.

However, their rent has increased to $131 a month, the cost of food has doubled, and utilities and fuel cost more.

Recently, Mrs. Kenyon received a questionnaire from Beryl Changere, chief interviewer legal chairman. Mrs. Kenyon was enraged at the questions.

"How in hell can you eat in your busy every day and have the faintest idea of how we the people live on, with or by?" she asked in her reply.

"Yes, I feel squeezed, sometimes to the point where I wish I could afford to die. Yet I can't because a funeral would rob my children of a mother who can, at least, give them a hug and kiss and who still will try to furnish them with a diet that will not breed a generation of welfare brats.

"Forget all favorite recipes or leave out the more expensive ingredients. Instead of twice to three times the time needed to prepare years and, with all the strength you have left, add love and understanding, for this is the only way you can hold a family together when their yearning cry for vitamins, minerals and proteins."

Mrs. Kenyon said she now spends $150 a month to feed the family. Two years and, she paid $100 for more and Cured by Miracle?

Val Silkeseys believes she was cured of cancer by a miracle. The 35-year-old mother of three says she visited a Kathryn Kuhlman service after doctors had told her she had only got long to live. She claims she was cured during the service and there now is no trace of a tumor. (CP Photo)

Feminists Defend Censored Authors

BRANNAN LAKE, B.C. (CP) — Brutal guards, bleak, overcrowded and violent prisoners—these were the tales that made Brannan Lake School for Boys the bogeyman to threaten juvenile offenders.

But although the horror stories still are around, the staff say they never were true.

The Island Youth Centre (IYC), formerly Brannan Lake, is a place where school professionals attempt to help youths 12 to 16 years old, a place where doors are locked from the outside to keep them out of various evils, not in.

"A lot of judges, parents and teachers used to believe the way to make a kid behave was to threaten him, says acting director Bob Cronin. "Like, 'you'll get sent to the lake,' or the bogeyman will get you, or something like that.

"This sort of thing has never worked and never will work," the ex-spoken social worker said in an interview.

Mr. Cronin said things have changed so much at the IYC that the rate of recidivism is only 15 per cent.

He said that when the school was a training school under the Federal Schools Act, there were 65 staff members to look after 220 youths.

"All you could do then was just keep track of the kids," he said.

Now there are 82 staff members and nine teachers to take care of 48 youths.

It's physically easy to run away from The Lake these days. There's no place where a youth can be locked in. no fence, no guards and it's only a few miles from Nanaimo.

The deterrent is a system of "grounding," and the possibility of being raised to adult court if absconded from or committed while the youth is at large.

"Grounding," said Mr. Cronin, "means that for four to six weeks, you stand still in your program.

"It just takes that much longer to get out. Kids don't like it here."

Incentives include privileges and an amount of spending money for times in which youths are allowed to return to their home communities for visits.

A term in the IYC means five to 10 months.

Courts have no power to sentence a juvenile to the IYC. A youth arrives on the recommendations of community agencies.

Several weeks before admittance, the youth and his family are interviewed by the centre and are answered and the stories about Brannan Lake are laid to rest.

"Most of our kids were poor students—they've just bombed out of the regular school system," said Mr. Cronin. Another common behavior pattern is running. They tend to try to escape their emotional pain and hassle by running away.

"There's no place here where a kid can be locked up. If we suspect he's going to run away we try to help him.

Is the Toshiba electronic microwave oven a luxury, a necessity, or somewhere in between?
Answer our question naire and find out for yourself.

☐ Have you ever tried to keep a meal hot for someone who didn't show up at dinner-time?
☐ Ever been stuck when friends or neighbours dropped in unexpectedly, looking hungry?
☐ Ever felt you were cooking the life out of food, especially vegetables?
☐ Ever wished you could cook a roast or a chicken without "roasting" the whole kitchen?
☐ Ever arm-wrestled a frozen lambchop?
☐ Ever wished there really were such a thing as a self-cleaning oven?
☐ Ever wished you could skip scouring pots and pans, at least a few nights a week?
If you answered 'yes' to all or most of the above questions, you might just be in the market for a Toshiba electronic oven. Even though the least expensive model does cost $430.
The Toshiba oven is not necessarily a replacement for your conventional oven. You may still need it. But what the Toshiba oven will do is eliminate those little situations above, which don't do much to bring sunshine into your life.
You can get a hot meal ready, for family or guests, in less time than it would take to heat up a skillet. And if it's leftovers you're heating, they'll taste just as good as they did when they were freshly cooked. You won't be cooking away the flavour, colour or vitamins either. The Toshiba electronic oven is too fast for that.
No, you won't even heat up your kitchen. The oven doesn't get hot, so how could your kitchen? Because the oven stays cool, food spatters don't burn on, and the oven wipes clean with a damp cloth. That's as close to self-cleaning as you can get. Because the oven stays cool, you can cook on serving plates. Eliminate pots and pans.
Toshiba has four models of their electronic oven (they'd like you to see, Model ER 527 BT (suggested retail: $429.95), Model ER 625 BT (suggested retail: $449.95), Model ER 726 BT (suggested retail: $549.95, with a fast defrost feature), Model ER 722 BT (suggested retail: $589.95).
All four are easily installed wherever there's a 110-120 volt grounded outlet, and all are portable enough to go where you go, even up to the cottage or out on the boat.
We can't tell you that the Toshiba electronic oven is one of life's necessities. But it's a lot more fun to live with it than without it. Drop in to any Toshiba dealer, and ask for a demonstration you'll not only enjoy watching, but eating, too.

...In Touch with Tomorrow

Opera Season Opens Sept. 6

TORONTO — Doc Savage, subscription and publicity chairman for the Canadian Opera Company, has announced opening of the subscription campaign for the Canadian Opera's 26th season, Sept. 6 to Oct. 12 at O'Keefe Centre.

The 1974 season includes new productions of Bartok's Bluebeard's Castle and Ravel's L'Heure espagnole (a twin bill opening the season Sept. 6); Wagner's The Flying Dutchman (opening Sept. 7); Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov (opening Sept. 24), Verdi's La Traviata (opening Sept. 13); revivals of Bizet's Carmen (opening Sept. 11) and Gounod's Faust (opening Sept. 27).

The Canadian Opera subscription program, first introduced in 1965, offers subscribers seven different series from which to choose. As in previous years, subscribers have exclusive privileges in ordering their tickets before the box office is open to the general public. In 1973 many who lined up for last-minute tickets in performances were turned away from the box office with not even standing room available. Subscribers not only have first priority on tickets, but can save as much as 20 per cent on tickets for individual performances.

In recent years, arts organizations throughout North America have demonstrated the advantages of subscription programs.

"When an organization grows," says season ticket consultant Danny Newman, "its artistic standards improve. It can afford to bring in top artists and create better productions. And subsidies increase when government agencies realize they're supporting organizations which have proven themselves by successfully giving the people what they want.

"Artistic directors and managers stay awake trying to think of ways and means of improving the quality, because they want to increase their subscription lists. It's a healthy situation all around: the more subscribers, the higher the standards; the higher the standards, the more subscribers."

In 1973, subscription sales for the Canadian Opera totalled $376,549 (the season closed with a record-breaking total box-office sale of $721,000 representing over 10,000 subscribers.

Pacific Coast Spirits

Wood deeson mask (left) and greying bacon pole — "spirits of the forest" made hundreds of years ago by Pacific Coast Indians — are examples of art from a culture engulfed by "whitecomers" to the region. Explorers, exploiters, painters and politicians who followed in the family, signed a four-year contract with the Tropicana in Las Vegas, Viri and Tonn, are deaf and dumb.

Sculpture Show Opens

KLEINBURG, Ont. — The first one-man show of Winnipeg sculptor Leo Mol, RCA, will be on display at The McMichael Canadian Collection here from mid-March until the end of the year.

Although relatively unknown in his adopted country, Mol's sculpture is featured in art centres from the Vatican to Washington, D.C., to Buenos Aires.

Of Ukrainian descent, Leo Mol has attained unquestioned stature in the art world. Among the world leaders he has known and portrayed in bronze are Paul VI and the late U.S. President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Both these international figures are included in the show with this being the first time the official Vatican bust of the pope is on display in Canada. Famous Canadians like John Diefenbaker, Marius Barbeau, Yousuf Karsh and George Seven mark the A. Y. Jackson, A. J. Casson and F. H. Varley trio some of the Canadian figures immortalized in bronze by Leo Mol.

Those interested in gaining an appreciation of the work of this gifted artist and selection of Mol's sculpture at the McMichael Collection here every afternoon except Mondays.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Blind soul music star Stevie Wonder, 24, said Thursday he intends leaving the United States to live in Ghana.

The pop music singer, who won four top awards at the recording industry's recent Grammy ceremony here, said he intended touring the U.S. next year to raise money for underprivileged and sick children in the U.S. and in Africa.

He did not give a date for his departure for Ghana. He said he made made the decision to go when he was injured in an automobile accident last year.

Wonder said he particularly wants to help Africa because he has heard there are areas where 75 per cent of the people are blind because of disease.

Galich said in a letter to the International Pen Club that in his latest film, a blot on the French cinema, both his name and that of his French co-star were removed.

Moscow television showed the film as part of overall pre-exam marking the visit of French President Georges Pompidou.

Galich was expelled from official artistic unions three years ago on charges he incited Jews to emigrate.

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Redd Foxx, the absent star of NBC's top-rated Sanford and Son series, said Thursday he will return for the series if NBC helps correct conditions—including the show's depiction of black life—that he said caused Foxx left the show Jan. 22 and its six remaining episodes have been rerun each week since. He met Wednesday with top NBC officials including the network's president, Herb Schlosser, to seek changes in the show, was asked by reporters if he felt Sanford and Son demeans blacks.

"Well, I don't think it's reached that point yet," he said.

The Ryman Auditorium walls, with its pews and benches since 1942, will bear no more Wabash Cannonballs from Roy Acuff, no more of Minnie Pearl's Howdees.

The new Opry house will increase seating capacity by more than one-third and provide space for recording equipment and dressing rooms for the Opry cast.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Cagney, the ex-hoofer who set the standard for the screen tough guy in the gangster era of the 1930s, emerged from a 13-year retirement Wednesday night to accept the accolades of the film world.

"But it's just for one night," insisted Cagney, who has refused millions of dollars in movie offers since ending his 36-year career in 1961.

Cagney was the second recipient of the Life Achievement Award of the American Film Institute, which last year presented the late director John Ford.

Osmonds Devout Mormons

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — To some people, the lives of the Osmonds—teen idols, night club stars and recording artists—might seem paradoxical.

On the one hand, they are devout Mormons, pledged to abstain from alcohol, tobacco, coffee, gambling and premarital sex.

On the other hand, they live in a world of rock music criticized by some Mormon leaders and they earn much of their wealth performing before the gambling crowds of Las Vegas.

But the 11-member family, which says it begins each day with a family prayer and gives 10 per cent of its income to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, sees no contradictions in lifestyle.

"Jesus ate with the publicans and the sinner," Olive Osmond, the mother, said in an interview.

"People are people whether they're there, in see a show or gamble'di the slot machines," said her husband, George. "We go in the back door and out the back door."

Whatever the religious considerations, the Osmonds have hit it big. Almost continually one or more of the seven singing Osmond children has a record high on the charts. They play in standing-room crowds.

In 1972, the Osmonds produced 11 records, each hitting at least the $1-million mark in sales. No other singer or group—not the Beatles, not Elvis Presley—had so many gold records in one year.

The seven performing Osmonds are Alan, 24; Wayne, 22; Merrill, 20; Jay, 18; Donny, 16; Marie, 14, and Jimmy, 16. Two other children in the family, Virl and Tonn, are deaf and work on Osbro—a name given to their publishing firm.

The group started with barbershop harmonies at church-sponsored events, then went from civic club dates to Disneyland, to the Andy Williams television show for nine seasons and finally to Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas. They recently signed a four-year contract with the Tropicana in Las Vegas.

CAS Budget Stirs Debate

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A new wage agreement resulting in an increase of 8 per cent in pay, along with severance pay for workers leaving the department, contributed toward a 1973 deficit of $36,562 for the county Children's Aid Society.

This was the picture presented to Belleville city council Monday as the 1974 estimates calling for expenditures of $657,113 came up for approval.

Including last year's $36,000 deficit, the requirement of the CAS this year will be $695,681. Of this figure the amount payable by Belleville will be $94,304 an increase of $21,230 or 29 per cent over last year.

The balance would be paid by the town of Trenton; the county of Hastings and by the province.

Council approved the CAS estimates but not before a few questions were asked by aldermen.

Alderman Ben Corke was critical of the CAS being allowed to exceed its 1973 budget to roll up a deficit and asked why this was permitted.

And Alderman George Zegouras took the same view, claiming that since it became a council member he had seen budgets exceeded too many times.

"Is this a common practice?" he asked. "If so I want to put a stop to it."

He was told that in some instances wards with the necessary potential went on to college with the CAS picking up the cost.

But Alderman Roger Porter spoke in support of the CAS estimates and the city's share of the estimated costs. Actually, he said, over the years, Belleville's share had averaged less than that of Trenton and the county.

And Alderman Arthur Keegan also spoke in support of the CAS, asking how it could accurately be determined how many children would be taken in during the year. Cost of the CAS varied accordingly, he said.

Mayor Robbi Jeffrey took the same attitude but agreed that the questions of aldermen should be answered.

She suggested that in the future they submit their questions in writing to city representatives on the CAS board.

Conservatives in Ottawa

Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, discusses the agenda of three day national Progressive Conservative Party conference with Kel Kincaid of Madoc, president of the riding association, William McBride, secretary, Ross Parks, and Harold Thompson, riding delegates from Madoc and Stirling. More than 2,700 delegates and alternates from across Canada attended the conference. Sessions ended Tuesday afternoon.

Property Purchase Approved

Belleville city council Monday agreed to share in the property cost of the 340-acre Potter property west of the city limits for which the Moira River Conservation Authority proposes development as a trailer park.

Total cost of the property is given as $776,000 with payment spread over three years. The proposal is that Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow and the Moira authority share in the purchase price with a major share of the cost to be borne by the province.

Belleville's share over the three-year period would be $161,662 with Thurlow and Sidney paying $19,028 each over the same period and the Moira Authority $16,896. The government grant would be $551,250.

If a 75 per cent government grant was received the amounts to be paid by the local municipalities would be slightly reduced.

Alderman Zegouras led off the discussion in opposition to the purchase claiming that the price was too high, that the property was outside the city limits and that development costs would be too high.

Alderman Cox admitted the trailer park might be desirable but asked if there was anything in writing setting out the grant figure the province was prepared to contribute. Also he said local planners had not been approached for their viewpoint on the feasibility of the park.

He said a trailer park at the Potter site would be of no commercial benefit to downtown merchants and claimed there were other sites available in the east end of the city that would be equally accessible.

Other councillors, however, took a wider viewpoint with Alderman John Stock suggesting the city should not look only to its own little area.

He argued if advantage was not taken of the Potter property, the entire area along the bay front would become solidly built-up.

Alderman Ben Corke was concerned that control of the property would be a Moira authority responsibility, this in spite of the fact the city was by far the largest contributor to the scheme.

He said the province should be asked for the 75 per cent subsidy.

Alderman Jean Smith said society was rapidly coming into an era where open space would be at a premium and now was the time to take action to ensure the area remain a green belt.

Alderman Arthur Keegan said he was concerned about the cost to the people on fixed income in view of a possible millrate increase of six to eight mills this year.

"I will have to oppose the purchase," he said.

Mayor Robbi Jeffrey said that purchase of the Potter property was a "visionary" step.

In effect what was being done was to set up a conservation area.

"It is an important step, and an expensive step but it is the right step," she said.

On a recorded vote Mayor Jeffrey and Aldermen Corke, Ireland, Meeks, Porter, Russell and Smith approved the motion to purchase the property while Aldermen Cox, Keegan and Zegouras were opposed.

Rabbit Raising Restricted

City council will place restrictions on the raising of rabbits within the city limits.

Some months ago council considered a bylaw amendment which would have made rabbit raising illegal, but it was pointed out that in view of the high cost of meat, some people raised rabbits for food.

So council took another look and Monday took action to protect neighbors from the unpleasant odors emanating from a rabbit hutch.

The restriction is that rabbits may not be kept within 50 feet of any residence and if more than five rabbits are kept, they must be at least 100 feet from the nearest residence.

Twirlers' Dance Raises $478 For Retarded

Quinte Twirlers whipped up a storm on the dance floor this weekend and the money raised in the dance 30 Hastings County retarded children planning to attend the special Olympics in Winnipeg in June.

Some 120 couples, donating $3 each, raised $478, a sum that was presented to Graham R. Kirk School for the Trainable Retarded principal Walter Dever. Spectators donated funds.

Approximately 20 children from William R. Kirk will be representing Belleville. Another four children from Actinolite and L'Amable schools will be attending.

Flash Fire Injuries Send Two to Hospital

Belleville firefighters used half a dozen 10-pound fire extinguishers, a booster hose and a one and a half inch hose as well as some smoke ventilating equipment to extinguish the fire that followed the explosion in the Canadian Durabla plant yesterday afternoon. When firefighters arrived at the accident scene, the plants fire emergency sprinkler system was pouring water onto the fires in two calender machines and a pile of rubber-asbestos packing material. Material underneath the calenders smouldered after the sprinkler system was turned off and firefighters wasted no time in raking it out into the open and dousing it with water.

Two Belleville men are in satisfactory condition in Belleville General Hospital with first and second degree burns to their arms, faces and hands following an explosion and fire at the Canadian Durabla plant in the northeast industrial park yesterday afternoon.

Michael Foxon, 29, of 30 Hastings Crescent and Greg White 21, of 28 Lemoine Ave. were injured when the fire yesterday when a spark from a welding outfit ignited gasoline fumes and started a fire in two pieces of the plant's machinery.

Jack Harris, manager of the plant, said the two injured men were working near a corner of the plant when some repair work was being done on a hoist.

One of themen was holding a fire extinguisher and standing beneath a welder who was trying to mend a break in a hoist wall bracket near the plant's two calenders. The other man was standing behind the welder operating one of the calenders when the explosion occurred, Mr. Harris said.

Deputy Fire Chief Bob Emerson explained that when firefighters arrived at the accident scene, there was a fire in both of the plant's machines and in a pile of manufactured materials.

Canadian Durabla manufactures rubber - asbestos packing for gaskets. The company began its operations at the University Ave. plant last Nov. 22.

The company's workmen had apparently taken all the safety precautions prior to doing the welding work, Deputy Emerson said.

Immediately after the explosion occurred, the plant's sprinkler system poured water over the fires and an automatic alarm was sounded in the Moira St. fire hall.

A secretary in Canadian Durabla's front offices turned in an additional alarm and asked the firefighters to dispatch an ambulance to the plant.

Greg White was immediately rushed out of the plant to be taken to hospital by private car, but was transferred to one of the emergency vehicles when the two met on the Cannifton Rd.

Damage estimates are not yet available, but Mr. Harris said that he believed any damage was confined primarily to the two calenders.

Minutes after an explosion rocked the manufacturing plant of Canadian Durabla Ltd., in the northeast industrial park yesterday afternoon City Ambulance attendants rushed to the scene and, after providing emergency treatment for burns, sped Michael Foxon, 29, to Belleville General Hospital. Mr. Foxon was injured, along with Greg White, 21, when a spark from a welding outfit triggered an explosion in one of the calenders in the plant. Mr. White was rushed part way to hospital by private car and was transferred to a LaSalle Ambulance emergency vehicle on Cannifton Road.

Parks Board Overruled On Hotel Parking Issue

Belleville city council has acted against a Parks Board of Management motion that would have denied use of parkland as a parking area for the Four Seasons Hotel.

Council, on an 8-3 vote Monday, directed that subject to installation of lighting and to a satisfactory rental, council enter into an agreement with Four Seasons Hotel to allow use of 90 parking spaces on a triangular piece of park property opposite the hotel.

The lease would be for a five-year period.

Mayor Robbi Jeffrey brought in the resolution.

Parks Board chairman Paul Russell, however, said that granting the hotel use of the land for parking would establish a dangerous precedent.

He admitted the parks board had earlier agreed to allow development of 40 parking spaces on the park property which he said would be compatible with parks board needs.

However, the alderman said the hotel has made a further request for an additional 50 spaces.

The parks board chairman said his board has developed plans for the area and if council acceded to the request for a five-year lease it would be difficult to have the lease discontinued.

He said the parks board had turned down a request from the hospital board for use of parkland as a parking lot. As a result the hospital has to build a parking garage.

Alderman Dr. John Stock, Stu Meeks and George Zegouras spoke in favor of Mayor Jeffrey's motion to allow use of parkland by the hotel. Alderman Stock, however, said the rental should be more than the $100 a year proposed by hotel authorities.

Alderman Ben Corke said that council members were talking in terms of $7,000 to $2,500 for parking spaces and suggested that the $100 rental offered would be only about one per cent of what it was worth.

Alderman Jean Smith said she was reluctant to give up any parkland to industry.

Mayor Jeffrey claimed the triangular piece of park property in question was not to be considered with the hospital request.

She pointed out that any agreement with the hotel would have to be approved by city council.

The mayor's motion to enter into an agreement with the hotel was opposed only by Aldermen Russell, Smith and Corke.

Language Ruled Not Obscene

A Belleville youth, charged with creating a public disturbance by using obscene language, had the charge against him dismissed by Judge Fred Shannon in provincial court yesterday, after the court ruled that the Crown had failed to adduce evidence showing that the language was contrary to prevailing moral standards.

John Cummings was convicted and charged by police Nov. 30 after he was involved in a shouting match with police on Pinnacle Street, near Campbell Street.

During the trial, the court was told that Cummings had been walking north along Pinnacle Street with a friend, when two police officers saw him kick over a garbage pail.

The policeman approached the two youths and told them to pick the garbage up. Cummings then started to yell at the officers telling them to "f— off" and calling them "f— pigs".

The police then arrested Cummings and charged him with creating a disturbance by using obscene language.

Cash Grabbed

Belleville police are investigating the theft of between $200 and $300 from a Quinte Mall businessman early yesterday morning.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reports that Stan Meeks, an employee of Coles Bookstore, was walking to the bank inside the mall when a thief rushed up to him and grabbed a cloth cash bag containing the store's bank deposit.

The investigation is continuing.

Dr. G. S. Cronk, who died Monday after more than a half-century as a leading city surgeon, found his medical books an invaluable asset in early days when local doctors were slone to solve problems. He left books to new Belleville General Hospital library — which now perpetuates his name — when this photograph was taken 15 months ago.

Medical Pioneer Dr. Sam Is Dead

He had been a physician of wide, varied experience some years before he became settled as Dr. Sam.

That was 35 year ago, when he arrived in Belleville.

Last year, Dr. Sam saw his last patient and quietly stepped out of practice.

But with the death Monday of George Sampson Cronk at 84, the entire community has lost personal contact with a record of the character of an era.

Dr. Cronk epitomized the hometown physician.

Today the identity is an image — that of the specialized professional who succeeded in a less specialized age, adding self-reliance to talent in become doctor, private counsellor, public servant and personality.

Dr. Cronk gave reality to the image.

In his time he was physician and surgeon to generations of families, public health officer and coroner.

His service and individualism were firmed early in life. He went to work to put himself through high school.

Dr. Cronk was born March 29, 1889 on a farm near Parham in Frontenac County, the youngest of five children.

He took a high school entrance exam at the age of 13, then, Manoah Cronk, paid the $5 fee — and came second in the county. But first, he had to work, heading into Northern Ontario's opening mining boom. He returned to study at Kingston Business College, went back to the mines and finally entered high school — at 19.

He entered medicine at Queen's University. In 1911, graduating in 1915 — as World War I settled down to stalemate. Immediately commissioned, he served in hospital units in the Middle East. He was posted to the Far East in 1917 and was in China when typhus broke out. His work in quelling the local epidemic drew mention in war despatches. In late 1918 he was assigned as senior officer to the Camp Mohawk flying school in Deseronto.

After the war, he took a refresher course in New York, then returned to the Quinte district. He opened practice — and began his long association with Belleville in August 1919.

Specialized facilities and consultation were neither as sophisticated or easily-accessible to the hometown physician of Dr. Sam's later career. Yet his most indispensible possessions in those years were his books on surgery, frequently, his only guide to a problem.

Surgery at Belleville General Hospital meant calling nurses in from ward duty. Chloroform or ether was used as anesthetic.

Two years after he arrived, Dr. Cronk was the city's first medical officer; a post he held 36 years until 1955.

In 1930 he was appointed provincial coroner for the area, serving until 1967.

As his career advanced he accumulated other titles. In both professional and community capacities. But, to many simply as Dr. Sam he was mainly known through his career.

It is not known how many patients he ministered to during his long vocation. But his son, Dr. Bruce Cronk, prominent district cardiology specialist, says his father delivered his 5,000th baby a long ago as 1945.

In recent years, Dr. Cronk began tapering off his professional activities. He stopped performing surgery in 1970, although his services remained on call. He continued as a surgical consultant. He interviewed his final patient last April.

A fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Canada, he held a life membership in the Ontario Medical Association, Belle Telephone regional surgeon for 35 years, a past president of Quinte University Alumni.

Within his community he served several times as president of BGH medical staff and chief of surgery, was a charter Kiwanis Club member, and a member of the Masonic Order for 56 years.

In 1967 he received the Canada Centennial Medal.

In late 1972 the hospital on which he had recited much of his vocation took the step that will perpetuate his name in his chosen community. The new medical library at BGH was named for Dr. Cronk — and now includes his well-thumbed set of surgery books.

Dr. Cronk married Lillian Guthrie in 1916. She survives, as does her daughter, Mrs. Harriet Simmons, of Trenton, six grandchildren and a great-grandson. Two of his grandchildren are also practising medicine.

The funeral will take place from Thornton Funeral Chapel to Bridge St. United Church Wednesday for service at 2 p.m. Burial will be in Belleville cemetery.

Calves Were St. Pat's Gift

St. Partick's Day, March 17 was a calving day on the Thurlow township farm of Gordon Ray, RR 2 Roslin.

Dr. Sunday Mr. Ray's Holstein cows in separate births gave birth to five calves — three heifers and two bulls — all within 12 hours. All five cows were artificially bred by Eastern Breeders.

Mr. Ray isn't sure about the St. Patrick's Day connection but feels there must be some Irish Luck somewhere along the line.

Four Set Their Sights on 50-goal Seasons

MONTREAL (CP) — The possibility of the National Hockey League winding up its regular schedule in three weeks with four or five 50-goal men looked today.

The previous high in 50-goal scorers was three in 1971-72 and again last season.

One player—centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins—reached the 50-goal mark almost one month ago. And Esposito continues to lead the individual scoring race with 65 goals in 69 games to put him ahead of the pace he set in 1970-71 when he scored a record 76 goals.

In his record season, Esposito had 52 goals after 69 games, and his current over-all point pace is equal to that of 1970-71—134.

Three other players have 46 goals so far and nine games in which to reach 50. They are right wingers Ken Hodge of Boston, Mickey Redmond of Detroit Red Wings and left winger Richard Martin of Buffalo Sabres.

Hodge's current total betters by one his highest previous output—45 goals in 1968-69—and includes 11 game-winning goals. Martin has set more goals today than he did in 1971-72 when he established the record for goals by a rookie with 44. The young Buffalo winger now has a career total of 127 goals, the most by any player in his first three years in the league.

Bill Goldsworthy of Minnesota North Stars also has a chance to produce 50 goals. The Minnesota right winger has 41 goals, five better than his 1972-73 50-output, with nine games left to play.

The three players who scored 50 or more goals last season were Esposito with 55, Redmond with 52 and Rick Mc-Leish of Philadelphia Flyers with 50.

Goldsworthy is the only one of the hopefuls who will get a chance to improve his output tonight. The North Stars play host to California Golden Seals in one of three scheduled contests, while Toronto Maple Leafs visit the Kings in Los Angeles and St. Louis Blues visit New York Islanders in the other two games.

Crush Toros

Knights Have Their Night

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kevin Morrison and Don Herriman each scored three goals Monday night as New Jersey Knights thundered to an 11-5 victory over Toronto Toros, but Andre Lacroix, their mild-mannered centre, slipped into top-scrap position in the World Hockey Association scoring race almost unnoticed.

Lacroix scored one goal and supplied five assists, raising his total to 31 goals and 71 assists for 101 points as he seeks to retain the scoring crown he won last season.

New Jersey's victory, in the only league game scheduled, further damaged Toros' playoff chances, although the Toronto team is still in second place in the East Division with 74 points.

Quebec Nordiques are third, one point behind the Toros; Cleveland Crusaders, fourth, two points back and Chicago Cougars, fifth, three points behind. The Nordiques have one game in hand on Toronto, the Crusaders two and the Cougars three. Even the Knights, who are in last place, with 68 points, remain in contention for one of four playoff positions.

In tonight's games, Minnesota Fighting Saints visit Vancouver Blazers and the Crusaders are in Chicago for a key contest against the Cougars.

"He puts the puck right on your stick," said Morrison, who with 32 goals this season has broken the WHA record for goals by a defenceman. "He's always giggling."

"He played extremely well," said Howell of Lacroix, who helped the Knights to their fourth consecutive game with out a loss.

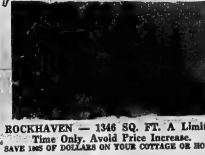
Delvecchio, Murdoch Rewarded for Service

NEW YORK (AP) — Alex Delvecchio, coach of the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, and Murray Murdoch, long-time Yale University hockey coach and former NHL player, were named Monday night at the ninth annual Lester Patrick dinner.

Delvecchio and Murdoch were presented with trophies for service to hockey in the United States.

Other Patrick awards were given posthumously to Weston W. Adams Sr., long-time president of Boston Bruins, and Frederick C. Trevor, who served as a hockey official at New York's Madison Square Garden for 47 years.

Weston W. Adams Jr., current president of the Bruins, accepted his father's award and Arthur Reichert, a hockey official at the Garden, received the trophy for Trevor.



Seven young players were honored by the NHL for being selected to the U.S. junior all-America hockey team.

The Patrick Award is named for the former owners of the Rangers and the trophies were presented by Lester Patrick's grandson, Craig, who plays for California Golden Seals.

Lacroix Threatening

The centre from Lauzon, Que., moved into second place Monday night with a goal and five assists in New Jersey Knights' 11-5 win over Toronto Toros.

Fraser and O'Neil, Meads in Command

First place finisher during the regular season when the squad put together an undefeated record, Mead Johnson joined Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate in a commanding position in first round playoff action when both teams scored wins Monday night at Memorial Arena.

Meads made it two in a row over Stanley Structures with a 7-3 win while Fraser and O'Neil followed suit by dumping Constellation 5-4 to lead that series 2-0. Meads and the Real Estate squad can now wrap up their sets when the best of five playoffs resume tonight.

The Intelligencer and Golden Mile Restaurant pulled in front in their match-ups with Rollins Lumber and Belleville General. The Intell needed overtime goals by Denny Sarrazar and Bruce Symons to get by the Lumbermen 5-3 while the Millers got shutout goaltending from Bob Harrison to blank the Generals 3-0. Opening actions in those series ended in ties.

Meads got a three-goal effort from Mike Keegan and a pair from Hugh Brust in the defeat of Stanley Structures. Bob Mulvihill and Russ Harrington added singles and Ron Fuller earned three assists. Pete Enright was tops for the losers with two goals. Rob Brown had the other Stanley tally.

A strong individual effort by Constellation's Ron Mitchell who accounted for all his team's goals wasn't enough to counteract Fraser and O'Neil's attack. Wayne McGeachy, Glen McMechan and Randy Pascoe each fired two goals for the winners with singles for Larry Pascoe and Bruce Pascoe.

Sarrazar had two Intell goals including the winner in overtime and Symon also supplied a pair. Fred Sickle counted the other goal for the Intell.

Rollins' goals were scored by Don Bowry, Dale Bamber and Mike Lasher.

Saints Winners

WATERLOO (Special) — Don McTaggart's 10-foot jump shot with one second remaining gave Quinte Secondary School Saints of Belleville 61-60 win over Cathedral High School of Hamilton in all-Ontario Triple A basketball action here Monday.

Quinte is scheduled to make its next start tonight at 7.30 when the Saints hook up with a strong Niagara Falls team.

THORBURN BEATEN

LONDON (Sunday) — Cliff Thorburn of Victoria, B.C., lost 5-4 to John Pulman of Britain in a nine-frame challenge series Monday. The highest break was 106 by Pulman.

Jamming Session in Midget Tournament

Action is concentrated in the Kingston goal area during Monday night Golden Hawk Midget Tournament game between Belleville Yardmen and Kingston Township. Kingston goalie is trapped out of his net but team-mates rush in to cover up. Yardmen (light sweaters) very nearly added to their total on this play. The Belleville team scored its second win of the tourney, downing Kingston 5-1.

Earl Jesse Rink Shares the Lead

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — British Columbia, Alberta and Ontario shared first place Monday after the first two rounds of the Canadian Legion curling championship.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Manitoba-Northwestern Ontario followed with 1-1 records while Prince Edward Island, Quebec and Newfoundland were winless.

Ontario's Earl Jesse rink from Branch 110 Trenton, forced an extra end to take an 8-7 win over the Quebec rink skipped by Brock Mackenzie in second-round action.

Newfoundland's rink, skipped by Bruce Cameron of Gander, led by a point coming home but Zeke Norwood's Manitoba rink scored two on the last end to take a 9-8 win.

At Lasalle of Pincher, Creek, Alta., handed the Roy Brown rink from P.E.I. a 10-5 defeat while B.C.'s Earl Glover edged Burley Townsend of Saskatchewan 5-4.

Lou Dougre's New Brunswick rink defeated Ontario's Dr. Ian Hay 4 after losing its first-round game.

Belleville Teams Sharp in Tourney

Mike Crawford fired two goals as Lions put Cobourg on the sidelines 5-1 in the double knockout event. The Belleville Major team had lost its opener to Trenton 4-3 in overtime Sunday night.

Eddie Grills, Gary Thompson and Peter McBride had the other goals for Lions.

In the first full day of tournament action, Monday, Belleville Yardmen minors scored a pair of impressive wins, downing Greenwood, Nova Scotia 5-3 and dumping Kingston Township minors 6-1.

Five players shared the Yardmen goals in the defeat of Greenwood. Bob Crawford, Tony Meagher, Paul Hipkin, Mark Ingman and Ray Shelly were the marksmen. Replying for the Nova Scotia team were Craig Bonazzi, Laurie Martin and Ian Kilpatrick.

Hipkin was a two - goal shooter in the win over Kingston. Adding singles to the Belleville total were Bob Thompson, Rob Chase, Sandy Waterson and Tony Meagher.

Picton's entry also picked up a pair of Monday wins. The Prince Edward County squad opened with a 5-2 win over Alex Majors and followed up by defeating Richvale 4-2.

Host Trenton Quisle Ice Products brought its record to 2-0 by edging Kingston Township Majors 3-2 on a pair of goals by Bruce Leadbeam, one of which came on a second period penalty shot. Bob Thompson was the other Trenton goal scorer.

Oromocto, New Brunswick not only joined the ranks of the double winners but goaltender Wayne Logan recorded the tournament's first shutout in the process. Logan closed the door on Colborne in a 5-0 win and Oromocto shaded Lindsay 5-4 in its next start.

In other Monday games, Kingston Majors nipped Cobourg 5-4; Kingston Minors got by Ajax Minors 3-1; Lindsay nipped Markham 4-3 in overtime and Richvale blanked Wexford 2-0 with Greg Alkinson chalking up the shutout.

World Curling Opens And It's No Contest

BERN, SWITZERLAND (CP) — The men played the boys Monday at the World Curling Championship and it was no contest.

Hec Gervais, 40, of St. Albert, Alta., beat Skip Leon, 15, of Norway 13-3 and Ole Fladeland of Pedersen rink from Denmark 11-2. The Danes have been curling half fourth years and Fladeland was world champion in 1961.

The only other undefeated rinks after two rounds were the United States and Switzerland.

Bud Somerville of Superior, Wisc., world champion in 1965, thumped Denmark 10-4 in the first round and then won 8-4 after over Norway in the second.

Switzerland beat France 6-5 and then upset defending champion Sweden 6-2.

In the third round today it was Canada against France, Norway against Scotland, the United States against Germany, Denmark against Sweden and Switzerland against Italy. The four winners found paired the U.S. and Canada, Norway and Switzerland, France and Germany, Denmark and Italy, and Scotland and Sweden.

The Norwegians never were in the game with Canada and allowed to gamble level when they got behind. They played the take-out game instead of trying to build a house and score some points.

"It was unusual," said Gervais. "At home we never see that kind of thing. However, they're young and will learn."

The big question has veteran curlers disbirbed.

"It's ridiculous to see a kid out there playing like men," said a United States curling official who asked that his name not be used.

The Norwegian kid may be the national champion but surely no one can take this championship seriously when they see him out there against the likes of Gervais and Somerville."

Against the Danes, Canada gave up one in the first end, got two back in the second and then stole the next four, picking up singles on the third and fourth and twos on the fifth and sixth.

Gervais said his front end was curling well and the Danes were off their game.

Clippers One Point From Top

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Dave Gilmour scored two goals Monday night to lead Baltimore to a 5-3 American Hockey League win over Jacksonville Barons and move the Clippers to within one point of first place in the South Division.

Hershey Bears lead with 85 points. The Clippers are four points ahead of Cincinnati Reds with Jacksonville and Virginia Red Wings sharing fourth place with 53 points each.

Gilmour snapped a 3-3 tie with a goal in the third period. Marc Dufour got an insurance goal into an empty net.

Rick Foley and Barry Salvaras scored the other Baltimore goals, while Dick Serrault got two for Jacksonville and Norm Conmyer one.

Rangers' Designated Hitter

Pride Trades Guitar For a Baseball Bat

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Texas Rangers and Minnesota Twins suffered exhibition baseball defeats Monday, but the Rangers had a distinct musical touch while the Twins again were left singing the blues.

The Rangers used country and western singing star Charley Pride, a one-time baseball leaguer, as their designated hitter in a 14-2 loss to Baltimore Orioles.

Brad Powell and Don Baylor each delivered three hits and three hits.

The Twins lost for the 11th time in 12 exhibition outings, 13-5 to Los Angeles Dodgers.

And they also lost slugger Harmon Killebrew. The first baseman hurt his right shoulder diving for a ball and probably will miss the season opener April 5 in Kansas City.

Boston Red Sox beat Chicago White Sox 8-4 for their 19th victory in 23 games as rookie Jim Rice belted a three-run homer and Rico Petrocelli contributed Rudy Meoraing singles by rookies Chris Ward and Jim Ty-rone helped Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over San Diego. It was the Padres' seventh setback in nine games.

Al Oliver hit a game-tying three-run homer in the sixth inning and Pittsburgh Pirates scored single runs in the seventh and eighth to defeat Montreal Expos 5-3 a San Juan, P.R. Willie Davis hit a two-run homer off Dock Ellis for Montreal.

Pat Bourque drove in three runs with two doubles and a single off Gaylord Perry and a two-run homer of Ken Sanders leading Oakland As to a 6-3 victory over Cleveland Indians.

Right-hander Jesus Hernais and lefty Mike Wallace of Philadelphia Phillies combined to blank Cincinnati Reds 4-0 on four hits while Jim Northrup rapped a two-run homer off Atlanta's Horic Harrison in the first inning as start Detroit Tigers to a 10-3 rout of the Braves.

Further Study Necessary-OHHA

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Horse Trainers Association (OHHA) decided Monday it would neither endorse nor reject off-track betting on the Lake Perlock system until more information is available.

The decision will be made by the OHHA, the Ontario Harness Tracks of Ontario, the Horse Racing Industry Committee on Off-Track Betting, the Canadian Thoroughbred and Standard-bred Horse Societies, the Canadian Trotting Association, the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association and the Ontario Racing Commission.

John Mooney, president of the Ontario Jockey Club, suggested that the horse racing industry should examine an Ontario government report on off-track betting.

"It is the finding of a group whether supported by every individual observers, but frankly, I think this whole thing could be resolved to the benefit of horse owners, breeders and track operators if the government would announce how it intends to operate their off-track betting system.

"The fears of the $2 track operators would be lessened, and I don't think there would be any opposition."

WFL Drafts Pros

NEW YORK (AP) — In the World Football League professional player draft Monday, one team selected a priest, another took a former pro football player, and a third chose the United States' greatest active rusher—in the 30th round.

It seemed almost like a boxing match—each of the 10 rounds lasted about three minutes, followed by a one-minute rest.

There were murmurs when teams took heavyweights such like Larry Csonka, Bobba Smith and Alan Page, and there were laughs when former National Basketball Association star guard Richie Guerin was chosen in the last round by the Birmingham Americans.

Buffalo Bills' rushing star O. J. Simpson was selected by the Southern California Sun—after six hours of dickering and 463 choices.

The Portland Storm selected running back Dave Buchanan as a free agent, but the Honolulu Hawaiians announced that they had signed Buchanan, former Hamilton Tiger-Cats lb.

And the Eastern Conference of the Canadian Football League announced in 1972, but set out last year after entering the WFL picture.

The Hawaiians' claim was upheld.

Two clubs, New York Stars and Toronto Northmen, announced they had signed Stars acquired John Elliott, a 6-foot-4, 245-pound tackle who played out guard Richie Guerin was chosen in the last round by the Birmingham Americans.

Buffalo Bills' rushing star O. J. Simpson was selected by the Southern California Sun—

CFL Statistics Prove Officials Not 'Homers'

TORONTO (CP) — In case there are some detractors who think otherwise, Canadian Football League game officials are not "homers"—and finally they have statistics to prove it.

Penalty figures compiled from 68 league games last season show that of 908 penalties called, 52 per cent were assessed against the home team and only 48 per cent against the Most frequently penalized of the nine teams were British Columbia Lions who were whistled down an 123 occasions for an average of 7.7 penalties per game.

However, Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts actually suffered the most. Each drew 121 penalties which worked out to a league-leading average of 8.6 per game over the 14-game Eastern Conference schedule. Lions' 123 penalties were second over the 16-game Western Conference schedule.

Least penalized teams were Winnipeg Blue Bombers (4.7 per game), Saskatchewan Roughriders (5.8) and Hamilton Tiger-Cats (6.0). Seven of the teams outdrew their visitors in penalties. Only in Hamilton and Saskatchewan did the home team have fewer penalties than the visitors.

The most frequent violation was for defensive offside, an infraction that was flagged down 361 times and the penalty accepted 194 times. Second most frequent call was for offensive holding, which was called 143 times and accepted 101 times.

The penalty most often paced off was for unnecessary roughness, a violation detected 135 times and declined only twice by the opposition.

Pass interference (98) procedural penalties (63) and no-yard calls on punts (70) were the next most frequent infractions detected by officials.

Hamilton was the only team to avoid an offensive offside penalty, of 49 called during the season. Winnipeg was tops with nine. Winnipeg was the only team not called for a clipping penalty while Toronto led with 10.

Of 14 penalties called for "unsportsmanlike conduct" exactly half were charged to Toronto Argonauts, all of them on road games. Calgary, with two, was the only other team with more than one in the unsportsmanlike category.

Approximately 10 per cent of all penalties on players who are not identifiable. Often an offside movement in the middle of a line blends it with the subsequent flow of action so that an official doesn't have an opportunity to identify the player who committed the infraction.

Spitfires Take Lead

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Gary Armstrong's goal at 13:05 of the third period broke a 3-3 tie and gave Windsor a 7-3 win Monday over Chatham Maroons in their best-of-seven Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League title series.

The win gives the Spitfires a 3-1 edge in games.

Scott Miller scored the other Windsor goal when Chatham was two men short in the first period. Doug Simpson scored for the Maroons.

Saskatchewan Rink Is Showing the Way

HALIFAX (CP) — The Saskatchewan foursome led by Dacgey Kradevill has established itself as the team to beat after three rounds at the Canadian senior women's curling championship.

The Weyburn rink was the only unbeaten entry following play Monday in which Saskatchewan trounced Nova Scotia 16-2.

"It's my this was our best game so far," Mrs. Kradevill said. "My team was a bit sharper tonight."

on the first end and then proceeded to steal more points during the next four ends before Nova Scotia got on the scoresheet.

Ivy Lord of New Brunswick, who had shared first place with Saskatchewan after two rounds of play, fell from the ranks of unbeaten when the Saint John crew was defeated 11-4 by Jeannette Blair of St. John's Nfld. It was Newfoundland's first win in three starts.

In other second games, Manitoba edged Ontario 9-7, British Columbia beat Quebec 11-6 and Prince Edward Island MacLean of Dartmouth for two trounced Alberta 16-5.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, March 20

Aries (March 21-April 19) A friend's well-meaning advice is more compassionate than logical. Before you heed it, turn it over in your mind.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20) Someone you've no friendly terms with has a way of doing things that shirt the borderline of ethics. Avoid this person today.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Don't be your own lawyer if you have a legal problem at this time. Get expert advice—it will be less expensive in the long run.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) The last thing you want to do today is to hide mistakes. If you've done something wrong, seek help from one who can rectify it.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) It's not your nature to be deceitful but you're going to tell a little white lie, and it's going to backfire.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you've put off things you should have done yesterday they'll suffer even more today. In your haste to catch up, you'll sacrifice efficiency.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Leave all things of a speculative nature alone today. That includes trying to draw to an inside straight in penny poker.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're not a very good shopper today and if you shop you'll prove it. You could easily add a bauble you don't need.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's something the family expects you to do for them but you'll become so involved in something else it will be overlooked.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Pay particular attention to financial transactions you have today. You could be taken advantage of if you're careless in receipts.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't get too involved in business matters at this time with acquaintances about whom you know little.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You will be disappointed today by one you are counting on for help. Don't put so much faith in his promises.

There is silent room for you.
For memory keeps you ever safe at home.
Though you died so young and far away
Ever remembered by mother and dad.

FORD — In loving memory of a dear son, Ronnie, who passed away March 19, 1971.
We silently think and sometimes weep
As a reminder to you we keep.
Memories are a keepsake for each dear one
Should they be taken or should they remain.
We keep you in our memory
We cast no blame on anyone
Why you passed away I do not know
Only those who loved you
Can feel the pain we know.

Never a part again.

And they.

CARD OF THANKS

We are completely overwhelmed by the generosity and kindness of a host of friends and neighbors who came to our aid in our hour of need. Words cannot express our thanks to you for the many deeds of kindness shown to us. We only pray that God will richly bless you, as He has blessed us. Special thanks to Rev. Ralph Hall for his comforting words, to the Ladies Aid who served us a meal, to the choir for the beautiful singing, to the pallbearers who carried our beloved husband to his last resting place, to the many who sent flowers and to those who sent memorials and to those who gave us rides to and from church. Words cannot express our thanks to you for your kindness. May God richly bless you.
—Mrs. Ruth Ann Hall and family.

We would like at this time of our grief to thank everyone for the kind deeds and words of sympathy shown to us, in our hour of sorrow. Especially Dr. Hall who helped to ease the pain.
—Mrs. Jean Jacobs, Sue and Michael Hogue, Charles and Chad Jacobs.

Rolls-Royce Demand High

LONDON (CP) — Despite record production of 2,789 cars in 1973, demand for a Rolls-Royce still outstrips the supply, managing director David Plastow said as he announced plans for further expansion.

The firm plans to manufacture 3,150 cars in 1974 and boost output to 3,466 in 1975 with emphasis on export markets.

Plastow said a new company, Rolls-Royce International S.A., has been set up at Lausanne, Switzerland, to market Rolls-Royce and Bentley cars abroad.

The company reported 1973 exports of 1,246 vehicles worth $21.4 million, a value increase of 39 per cent over the preceding year, more than half of them to the United States and Canada.

Asked whether the world fuel shortage would affect Rolls-Royce sales, Plastow said half the 30 million cars in the United States use more gasoline than a Rolls. A Rolls Silver Shadow offered more than 17 miles to the gallon.

Dylan Thomas Is Evaluated

LONDON (CP) — Dylan Thomas behaved as poets were expected to behave. He was witty, eloquent and, most of the time, drunk.

But 20 years after his death, it has become clear that this lively Welshman played an integral part in preparing the way for the current revival of interest in poetry, especially as a performer's art, with his booming, dramatic readings of verse on radio and platform.

Now that the public clamor which followed his death in 1953 in a New York hospital has abated, it is possible to assess his work more closely. Although qualities such as "the most fantastic character of our time," which appeared above his obituaries, may have been exaggerated, Thomas' legend remains unparalleled among modern-day literary figures.

His Eighteen Hundred and Eighty Poems, was published when he was only 20, in 1934. Its Celtic verbal flavors and personal, introverted tone made a deep impression in the thick of the "social relevance" and "the poet as reporter" approach of his two themes were sex and death, placed within an intensive range of forms and techniques.

Some critics tended to write Thomas off as a Welsh magician who produced rhetorical gush and deluded both himself and his readers into thinking it was magnificent verse.

Although his range was severely limited and he over-used a handful of images and phrases almost to the point of parodying himself, his best work had power, beauty and an unmistakable individuality.

Thomas's style may have been a year representative English poets such as W. H. Auden and Stephen Spender.

owed something to his Welsh origin. Behind much of his poetry lies that country of the Depression, culturally impoverished and scarred by industrial ism in the mining valleys, as well as the warmth of his hometown, Swansea, and the landscape of the Gower Peninsula.

Though at first he had only a limited public, in later life he became popular. His lilting poems about childhood, notably Fern Hill are much loved, like his story, A Child's Christmas in Wales and his radio play, Under Milk Wood.

On the recent 20th anniversary of his death an exhibition sponsored by the Welsh Arts Council in Cardiff included manuscripts of poems and letters by Thomas's first editions of his books, magazines, records and paintings, all in illustration of the years spent by life-poet in Wales. They embraced his childhood and early manhood in Swansea and the later years in Laugharne, on the Carmarthen coast, where he is buried.

Government Offices Are in 755 Buildings

OTTAWA (CP) — Ever get the feeling that almost every building in Ottawa contains government offices?

It's not surprising. The federal government occupies about 15 million square feet of space in the capital region. This space is spread through 755 buildings, comprising more than 45 per cent of the inventory of government buildings across the country.

Those 755 include such prestige places as Rideau Hall, home for the Governor-General and the prime minister's country residence at Harrington Lake near here. And they include every barn and shed at the Central Experimental Farm.

The 26 million square feet is cut to 27 million after corridors, washrooms, and other public areas have been subtracted.

Only 15 million square feet of that is in offices. The remainder includes laboratories, printing plants, heating plants, cafeterias and similar establishments.

The government domain in Ottawa includes 130 foot suites and 23,000 parking places. A staff of 2,500 is required to maintain the property.

In the last five years the government has added about 1.5 million square feet of space a year to its holdings in the capital region.

PCs Would Aid Canadian Publishing Establishments

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian publishing houses would get a better break against U.S. competition under a resolution passed at a policy session of the Conservative annual meeting Monday.

The proposals, introduced by Peter Reilly (Ottawa West), call for changes in the Postal Act, copyright negotiations with the U.S., a Crown corporation to help Canadian publishers distribute books in areas outside the main markets and changes in the Income Tax Act to give a tax break to advertisers patronizing Canadian magazines.

Court Hears Tape of Offer To Help Get Liquor Permit

TORONTO (CP) — A general manager of a large Sylvanus Apps, former correctional services minister, on a charge of representing that he was able to obtain a liquor licence for Gaetano Esquono, owner of a Toronto restaurant.

Hughes also is being tried on charges of trying to defraud Mr. Esquono over what was trying to obtain a liquor licence for his downtown restaurant.

Crown Counsel Kenneth Chase told the jury that Hughes was arrested leaving the restaurant Aug. 7 after allegedly committing the offences in July and August.

The tape-recorded conversation was between two men, one of whom spoke of a need for a liquor licence.

"Can you help? Can you really help me? I know what your connections are," one man said.

The other said: "We've got to see the right people in the government, that's all.

"I know people in the government . . . I've had lots of dealings with them. It's a matter of seeing the right guy. These guys are government clerks, that's all, and they think like that and that is the basic trouble."

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada now has a $95-million international trade deficit with the United States and New Democrat Ed Broadbent wants the government to do something about it.

"We have moved from a surplus position to a more than $200-million deficit position—a turnaround of more than $600 million in one year," Mr. Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby) told the Commons Monday.

Library Plans Break Activities

Winter break is here this week for the city's students. And while the older ones will probably have enough to do to keep busy, there is something planned for the younger ones.

On Thursday at the library's east branch on Victoria and Ferry Streets, a story hour and puppet show will be presented. This starts at 10:30 a.m.

Then at 2 p.m. at the main library on Pinnacle Street, the story hour and puppet show will again be presented. The puppet show is the story of Peter Rabbit.

Both presentations will take about 45 minutes for those mothers that want to take a break from their young ones this week.

Food Ministry Urged To Control Land-use

TORONTO (CP) — The chairman of the government's Farm Classification Advisory Committee said Monday Ontario is rapidly running out of productive farm land.

Edward Kowal released his committee's findings which recommend that the Ministry of Agriculture and Food get sole jurisdiction for farm land-use planning.

The seven-member committee also recommended that farm land be classified into five classifications: Agricultural agricultural-residential, rural-residential, rural-recreational and rural-speculative.

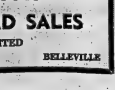
Mr. Kowal indicated that it was the speculators dabbling in farm lands that were causing much of the problem.

"The speculators are the worse cat in the whole situation," he told a news conference.

He said a classification system could eventually help government evolve policy to end speculation.

The committee found in its study that speculation has removed large chunks of arable land from production "thereby posing a distinct and immediate hazard to the adequate supply of products."

Chocolates Up



TORONTO (CP) — Two other cigarette companies said Monday they also anticipate price increases following an earlier announcement in Montreal by Imperial Tobacco Products Ltd. that its price to wholesalers would rise 67 cents per 1,000 cigarettes effective April 1.

The increase was expected to be affected at the retail level by a rise of 20 cents a carton. Two cents on packages of 20 cigarettes and three cents on 25s but no more," the Imperial announcement said.

Government Accused Of Pension Laxity

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario teachers have lost more than $615 million over the last 56 years through provincial government underpayments and mishandling of their pensions, Don Scott, Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) superannuation commissioner, said Tuesday.

He said he will launch a civil suit against the government to attempt to retrieve $11,782,000, the amount an OSSTF auditor's report claims was lost in 1973.

That suit will be a test case for further action to win back the total amount owing 103,000 active teachers and 12,000 now receiving pensions in five affiliated teachers' organizations, he said.

Mr. Scott told delegates to the OSSTF annual convention that: government underpayments to the fund, insufficient interest rates on investments and benefits paid to non-contributors have contributed to the loss.

"At the present rate of rip-off our fund will have been improperly reduced by $1 billion by 1982."

He said participating teachers now hold one-fifth of the provincial debt through the fund managed by six government-appointed commissioners and five elected representatives of teachers' organizations.

Mr. Scott, re-elected to his post Tuesday, later said in an interview his figures are result of three years' research into pension and government records.

He said a financial report audited by Thorne Gunn and Company revealed the more than $11 million 1973 deficit.

The issue has not come to light until now "because teachers have had a decided faith in the government," he said.

"This has generated a state of dependency on the government in the minds of teachers, who are fearful of government action.

Mr. Scott said he does not anticipate support from other teachers' organizations representing elementary and Roman Catholic school teachers.

"Basically they will not respond positively to my position because they feel threatened."

He said some members of the 34,000-member OSSTF also feel that since we have a good plan we should meekly accept it and say nothing in case the government decides to withdraw what they imagine to be their significant support."

This attitude, he said, has been responsible for inaction now on pension receiving no increases for the last 15 years.

"Such an attitude is responsible for the fact that there are hundreds of widowed pensioners' wives whose pensions today are approximately $97.50 a month."

Mr. Scott said he will challenge Premier William Davis, Treasurer John White and Education Minister Thomas Wells to public debate in September to refute the claims.

He also charged that the provincial treasurer is in a conflict-of-interest position as a commissioner responsible for care of the investment fund and as a government minister using that fund.

Jim Forster, a Toronto English teacher, was elected president of the OSSTF on the Tuesday ballot Tuesday, defeating Doug Hammer, president last year.

Mr. Forster said in an interview a motion calling for a corporation to provide teachers' funds to opposition party members in the next provincial election will be presented to delegates later in the convention.

Bakers Ask Food Board OK Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bakery Council of Canada, representing most major bakers, says profit margins are so thin that bakers no longer can afford to hold back price increases.

In a brief to the food prices review board today, it said the price of a 24-ounce loaf must be allowed to rise at least another cent, to an average of 35 cents.

Most bakers raised prices by two cents a loaf earlier this month, but agreed to a request from Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray to stall another further increase until after today's meeting with the board.

The council's brief says the prices review board, by agreeing that a two-cent increase was justified, recognized that bakers had been absorbing higher costs for months.

It states that the board also acknowledged that another one-cent increase was possibly justified.

The council says it believes a minimum three-cent increase is fully justified now.

Amin Halts Hijacking

NAIROBI (CP) — President Idi Amin of Uganda stopped in today to end a hijack attempt when he talked two Ethiopians out of a plan to fly an airliner at gunpoint to Libya, an East African Airways spokesman said.

The spokesman said that the two Ethiopians, a man and wife, took over the twin-engined F-27 Fokker Friendship airliner with 33 other persons aboard on a scheduled flight from Nairobi to the Kenya coast resort of Malindi.

They ordered the captain to fly to Libya.

When the plane touched down to refuel at Entebbe, Gen. Amin rushed to the airport. Troops ringed the aircraft.

Amin persuaded the Ethiopians to surrender and later was reported questioning them.

The passengers, most of whom were European tourists on their way to a vacation on the Kenyan coast, and four crew members were allowed to leave the aircraft.

FREDERICTON (CP) — A large section of the downtown business and commercial district was a scene of smoldering desolation early today as a result of a major fire in the city's centre.

Although no injuries were reported, city clerk Stanley Thornburn said damage might reach several million dollars.

More than 60 people were forced to flee second and third storey buildings as the fire spread.

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) 30 in Metropolitan Toronto hospitals are taking a strike vote to back demands for higher wages. Court Can't Intervene

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court justice ruled Tuesday that an Ontario law prevents the court from interfering with an arbitration award in favor of workers in a 19-bed provincial nursing home whose owners say they can't afford the pay increase. Mr. Justice R. E. Holland said the court could intervene under the Judicial Review Procedure Act only if there was a denial of natural justice. There was no such denial in this case, he said.

Samples Said Biased

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Chiropractic Association says charges that many chiropractors file incorrect bills for patients' X-rays and insurance were based on a biased sampling. Russian Crew Held MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today one of its helicopters made an emergency landing in China and the aircraft and its three-man crew have not been returned.

On other matters, Mr. Macdonald announced that an application will be made to the national energy board this week to extend the interprovincial crude oil pipeline to Montreal from Sarnia, Ont.

Barring delays from farmers protesting the route, construction of the more than 500-mile extension should start by the end of May, he said.

Overseas crude oil, under a 1961 national policy, is used in all markets in and east of the Ottawa Valley. The pipeline will abolish the valley as a dividing line and join the two areas together in one market using both domestic and overseas crude.

Because of the large gap between domestic and international crude prices, the government announced a $240-million subsidy program in January to ease the higher petroleum costs faced by eastern consumers.

Mr. Macdonald said Tuesday that careful auditing procedures will prevent oil companies from abusing the program.

He disclosed that the government will keep the 26 million gallons of heating oil it bought last fall as insurance against winter oil shortages. No serious shortages developed and the oil went unused.

Nixon Says World Needs Strong President in U.S.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — President Nixon is continuing a drive to rebuild Watergate-eroded public confidence in his leadership with his appearances in Texas.

During a TV-radio news conference in Houston Tuesday night, Nixon firmly rejected a call by Senator James Buckley that he resign for the good of the presidency.

Nixon contended the world "needs a strong American president, not an American president who, every time the polls go down, says, 'Well, maybe I better resign'."

A poll taken after Buckley, a New York conservative Republican, called for Nixon's resignation, showed that 38 wanted support Nixon's stand against quitting while 17 favor his resignation.

In The Associated Press poll, 33 senators declined to take a position and 11 others could not be reached.

At his news conference, Nixon also:

—said that there will be no gasoline rationing and that the gasoline saving will be allowed seven days a week. But he said that, as a result of the end of the Arab oil embargo, prices for petroleum products will go up.

—announced somewhat more moderate in his approach to Western Europe than in his appearance Friday in Chicago. Nixon said he will continue to oppose a cut in U.S. troop levels there—a threat he seemed to use as a club in Chicago.

—said the United States will remain Israel's friend, but that he feels "it is much better to have the United States a friend of Israel's neighbors and thereby able to influence and perhaps restrain their goals."

Millhaven Guards Use Gas

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Gas was used to quell a minor disturbance Tuesday night at Millhaven Institution, John Maloney, regional director of penitentiaries, said today.

"It was a minor dust-up involving two ranges," he said. "I don't have all the details. I do know that a couple of windows in a corridor were broken."

He said he assumed the disturbance centred around charges laid last weekend against three prisoners after prison authorities say were found in a cell with some sort of "brew."

Ajax Boy, 3 Is Smothered In Cedar Chest

AJAX, Ont. (CP) — A three-year-old boy was tragically stated Tuesday after apparently locking himself in a cedar chest in his bedroom.

William Williamson was found by his father, Ken, in their house in this community just west of Oshawa.

Teachers' Spokesman Wants Half Trustees Employees

TORONTO (CP) — Douglas Knott, chief negotiator for 18,000 separate school teachers, said Tuesday local school boards should be restructured to include teachers and board employees at the policy level.

Speaking to the annual assembly of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association (OECTA), he said half of the trustees sitting on school boards should be board employees elected by their fellow workers.

"I propose in democracies the relationship between teacher and trustee, between employer and employee," he told about 500 delegates and observers at the assembly.

Mr. Knott later told reporters that parents are desperate for someone to restore order to the school and the craft.

He blamed provincial policy for creating chaos in the educational system and listed problem areas:

—Curriculum revisions and changes every year;

—Open area, no-classroom schools throughout Ontario with little guidance for teachers on how to use them;

—Compulsory subjects thrown out of high schools and then re-stored;

—"Individualized instruction does not work because there are too many individuals";

—"Alcoholism and drug refuge" across the province among the young and the only help we get is a shaking of the head. . . .

Mr. Knott said such problems did not exist when we had the baby days and the strap."

Macdonald Expects $6 to $7 a Barrel Price for Canadian Oil

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa and the oil-producing provinces may agree on a price of $6 to $7 a barrel for domestic crude oil April 1, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald indicated Tuesday.

He told the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee that the current $4 price must be raised either by voluntary price freeze ends March 31.

"Six dollars is a more realistic price and that's the price I'd assume we'd move to as a minimum on April 1."

He said later he is not prejudging the results of price negotiations between Ottawa, Alberta and Saskatchewan. But $6 to $7 would be a reasonable price range for both sides to consider.

Crude oil on international markets is selling for more than $10.50 a barrel and the two western provinces have said they want a major domestic price boost after the freeze is lifted.

Neither province has announced specific goals.

If the new price is held at $6 to $7, it is expected that Ottawa will have to make concessions on western economic issues such as freight rates and economic development.

For consumers, a wellhead increase to $6 a barrel, likely would mean a gasoline boost of five to six cents a gallon.

Dairy Farmers Younger

A renewed interest on the part of young men to remain on the farm is the basis shown in Prince Edward county.

Kenneth Wright, secretary-treasurer of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee, in a news release, notes that of the 318 milk producers in the county, approximately one third are young farmers.

In contrast, the ratio of young farmers only 10 years ago would have been about five per cent.

Recently 33 county farmers under 30 met with Allan Ketcheson, Ontario Milk Marketing Board director, to discuss the future of the dairy industry. These young farmers represent some 100 young men who have entered farming. About 40 farmers at the meeting were under 27 with five of these having on the county milk committee.

Questions asked at the meeting included the method by which the OMMB sets basic milk prices and quotas, how entry is obtained into the top priced market and how to get access to land held by speculators and retired people.

Many of these questions will be answered at the annual Prince Edward County Milk Producers meeting to be held March 21 at the Pinecrest school in Bloomfield. Wright and sons of producers and any one else interested in the dairy business are urged to attend the evening meeting.

Chairman Harry Dower will review 1973 activities; Allan Ketcheson will review OMMB policies; Tom Heath will discuss regulations on milk quality and Jack Jones, Belleville Lacey Mathison will discuss federal agreements and capital grants available to farmers operating cheese factories.

Fine Increase Under Review

Belleville motorists may feel the effects of inflation once more in the near future.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey recommended a review of parking fines levied in the city yesterday during the monthly meeting of the Belleville police commission.

The mayor made the recommendation following discussion of parking problems being experienced at the Belleville General Hospital.

Currently, motorists who park their vehicles in fire access lanes at either the Belleville General Hospital or Quinte Mall are liable to a $5 fine. Overtime parking fines throughout the city costs the motorists $1.

Police Chief Douglas Crate said that the recommendation, if accepted, would enable the security guards to place $5 parking tickets on cars parked in the fire access lanes.

The security guards would be able to enforce the parking bylaw at the hospital only.

Alderman Denies Interest Conflict

Belleville Alderman Jack Ireland denies any conflict of interest in any vote (of city grants to the Chamber of Commerce.

The charge that council members could be guilty of conflict of interest was made several weeks ago by a local citizen objecting to city grants paid to certain local organizations, including the Chamber of Commerce.

In a statement to council Monday, Alderman Ireland said he had served as a director of the Chamber for four years in the early 1950s.

He had served as alderman from 1957 to 1963 but was not active with the Chamber during this period.

Later he had served six years as appointee to the city board of commissioners, serving as director, vice-president and president, during which according to the commissioner's bylaw had been dropped from the rolls before being re-elected to council in 1970.

Personally, the alderman said he had never been a member of the Chamber but Ireland's Furniture and Appliances Ltd. had designated one of their employees to be elected and it was on this basis that he had qualified for office.

Radio System Approved

Following an Ontario Police Commission recommendation that all police officers in the province be provided with radio equipment when they are on duty, the Belleville police commission yesterday passed a resolution that would place the cost of financing such a scheme into the police department's 1975 budget.

Police Chief Douglas Crate said that the PREP system (Provincial Radio Equipped Policemen) recommended by the Ontario Police Commission would cost his department approximately $10,000.

As presents, the Belleville police department is partially radio equipped with base and portable communications systems that are used by officers on the beat.

Under the new PREP system, all police officers will be equipped with radios that enable them to communicate with their headquarters. The radios will also have a special frequency reserved for all other police departments, so that officers from different municipalities and forces will be able to communicate with each other.

The move to include the PREP costs in the 1975 budget was made to take advantage of a provincial subsidy that covers 75 per cent of the costs of implementing the program.

Since 1962, the veteran civil servant has been manager of the Manpower office in his native Trenton.

Mr. White succeeds H.W. (Pete) Kern who retired early this year.

Born in Trenton, Mr. White joined the airforce there during World War II. After his service discharge in late 1945, he joined the federal National Employment Service, serving in Trenton, Midland, and Toronto. In the late 1950s he was posted as manager of Smith Falls NES office and in 1961 was transferred to Toronto as assistant to the supervisor Ontario region employment officer.

Mr. White is married with five children, three still at home.

As Belleville district manager for Manpower, he supervises an area that includes the city, Ameliasburgh township and Hastings County.

Guards May Ticket Cars

Security guards employed by the Belleville General Hospital will soon be able to obtain cars and tickets that persist in parking in the fire access routes at the hospital.

Belleville's police commission yesterday passed a resolution recommending that the security investigation Service guards at the hospital be given the same special bylaw enforcement officers to relieve the city's police department of the chore of policing the illegal parking activities of motorists at the hospital.

Police Chief Douglas Crate said that the recommendation, if accepted, would enable the security guards to place $5 parking tickets on cars parked in the fire access lanes.

The security guards would be able to enforce the parking bylaw at the hospital only.

Protester at Bata Walkout

Bata Workers Back, But on Rotating Basis

By JIM SMELLIE
Staff Reporter

BATAWA — The 380 workers of the engineering department at Bata Shoes who stopped work yesterday returned to work today.

But they will work only on a rotating basis. This was decided at a meeting Tuesday of Local 1758 International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

At the meeting, at Frankford Legion Hall, 88 voted in favor of working every other day while 77 voted to stay off work indefinitely.

Workers stopped work Tuesday to protest a slowdown in contract negotiations.

Main dispute centres around differences between the company and the union on cost-of-living benefits.

The company is offering workers a 13-cent increase over two years in lieu of cost-of-living bonus, says a union official. But workers must work a full 40-hour week to collect it.

The union wants an increase of one cent for every .3 per cent on the cost of living scale.

Robert Kidd, union president, said, "We're looking at this more as a protest than as a strike."

Bill O'Rourke, general manager at Bata Footwear, expressed concern that if workers continued to stay off the job, a total of about 1,000 people here and at satellite plants in Picton and Campbellford would have to be laid off.

12 Passengers Treated As Buses Collide

TRENTON — A dozen people were sent to Trenton Memorial Hospital Tuesday after two buses collided on Dundas Street West.

A police spokesman said a Trailways bus collided with the rear end of a Voyageur coach and damages have been estimated at about $10,000.

None of the passengers were seriously injured, said a Trenton Memorial Hospital spokesman. All were treated and released.

Homes May Be Scarce

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — Prince Edward County council's economic development committee has expressed concern for an apparent housing shortage here created by new development now underway.

"We are taking the taxpayer's time and money bringing in industry. If an agreement is not made soon for housing, we don't know where people will live," committee chairman George Foster warned council last night.

Wellington reeve Robert Boyce referred to his village as "the bedroom for all of this industry". He asked what facts Reeve Foster's committee used as a basis for its report.

He said that his council met this week to discuss growth and does not know how to project for the future.

Reeve Foster said he has talked with several people who say they cannot find homes in the $30,000 — $35,000 price range here. He told Reeve Boyce that economic development director William Duggan would assist in supplying pertinent facts on projected growth.

Mr. Duggan said his only firm information is that 150 houses at Prince Edward Heights, now occupied by staff members, must be vacated by the end of the year.

He said eight times as many subdividers have made proposals in the past year over preceding four years.

"What the total requirement is, I don't think anyone knows. I think it is pretty certain that we are short as of now," he said.

Low-grade Uranium Revival, U.S., Japan Turns to Canada

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — A consortium of United States and Japanese interests said Tuesday an exploration program for low-grade uranium is being revived in this community 75 miles west of Sudbury.

The group, which includes Kerr-McGee Corp. of Oklahoma City, Okla., nine Japanese electric utilities and six Japanese mining companies, said it plans to drill two holes by July.

Samples will then be analyzed to see if development is feasible, the group said. Drilling costs, estimated at $200,000, will be shared equally by the participants.

The existence of the low-grade ore was established during a three-year search by the same group that ended in 1971. Cost to that time was about $1.8 million.

New Chairman

MARMORA — Garnet Brownson has been elected chairman of Marmora Arena Reconstruction Committee and says and means committee, replacing James (Scotty) Cook. Ted Fox will assume the newly created position of vice-chairman.

Eleanor Wells and Audrey Westworth consented to remain as treasurer and secretary, respectively.

Plans were discussed for the second annual Skate-a-thon on Sunday, March 31. Application forms will be distributed at the schools but may also be picked up at The Gift Shoppe or Becker's store.

Other fund-raising projects will be a pancake breakfast in April, the third annual chicken bar-be-que Aug. 4, and the fourth annual fish-fry on Aug. 31.

Bancroft Aims for Future

It's Changing to Remain the Same

By HARRY HULHALL
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — Winter is relaxing its hold on this hub of the Quinte north. But gradual, blossoming change can already be scented on the community landscape.

It's not been wrought by any single, dramatic expansion, although two potential developments are being watched:

(1) Reopening of the nearby Faraday uranium mine as world energy shortages hold out the prospect of new markets.

(2) A proposed shopping plaza, which, if it ever became a reality, would be the biggest in the region.

The change will be in the appearance of the community, not in its character, indicates Reeve Jack Hallin, the aim is to preserve its essential lifestyle intact.

"If you had to sum up our community environment in a word, you'd have to say 'relaxed,'" says the reeve.

The same assessment has occurred to others outside this north Hastings County service centre of 2,300 poised between Ontario's metropolitan rim and the Ottawa Valley. In fact, it's the core explanation for what's happening.

Bancroft, folded in clean bush-and-water country, retains an atmosphere of unspoiled freedom where human contact and community spirit are root factors. It's also ideally situated at a highway crossroads.

As a result it's a village with a magnetic pull for those bucking big-city pressures and trends.

Says Ken Willcocks, Chamber of Commerce president: "We get all kinds of people, coming here who say they want to settle in a town where they know their neighbors."

In recent years there's been no generation gap among the hopeful. Those contemplating retirement years mingle with young couples seeking a lifestyle transplant.

"There's a lot of people who like to change jobs, especially people with young families," says one real estate spokesman. "They feel it's a better place for them to live and bring up their children."

One drawback to such hopes is the shortage of suitable job alternatives. Bancroft's can breed community traits that bear watching, Reeve Hatting indicates.

"The danger in this is sizing with being relaxed can be an element of satisfaction," he cautions. "And because of communication and transportation we're going to be forced to progress in a way that at least incorporates change with a relaxed attitude."

Bancroft once before absorbed the phenomenon of sudden change — during the uranium boom of the 1950s. Its population temporarily doubled in a decade before the market — and the mines — shut down. Now the energy scare has posed the possibility that the sole boom survivor — Faraday, west of here on Highway 28 — might some day reopen.

But Bancroft has a philosophy about mining operations. They should be regarded as an "economic bonus," boosting, but not perpetually sustaining the local economy, says Mr. Willcocks.

Tension was injected in the local air late last month when prospects of one abrupt change came over the horizon. A spokesman for a Montreal based company revealed a proposal for a $4 million shopping centre at the north end of the village, with up to 50 stores. Ambitious dimensions of the project raised local debate as to its viability. But downtown merchants have moved to redevelop their central business core. Reeve Hatlin issued a statement confirming village council's support for the official plan which calls for strengthening and redevelopment of the downtown core. This included not allowing other commercial areas to develop "that would detract" from the established business area.

Council, said Reeve Hatlin was encouraged by the response to redevelopment already shown by some merchants.

But, the statement added, if the enthusiasm doesn't hold, "other alternatives will have to be explored in order to keep Bancroft the service centre of North Hastings."

Pondering the plans proposal, he said obviously his village isn't the only Ontario centre that developer has objectively examined and "they can see potential."

"What their long-term planning is remains to be seen. It's conceivable they know something we don't know."

Key to unlocking Bancroft's change while keeping its traditional community character secure is planning, says the reeve.

"I believe we're right at the initial stages of expansion and development," Reeve Hatling says. "This means the necessity for solid planning is just an absolute must."

Slush - - Crash!

MARMORA — Slushy road conditions, following overnight snow was blamed for a car crash on Highway 14 at Sine, south of here Tuesday morning.

Police said James Quinlin, 20, RR 2 Marmora, lost control on a curve when slush was thrown on his windshield by passing vehicles. Damage to his car, which hit two guideposts, was estimated at $700.

His career evolved through the span of recent history, but while government and statesmen came and went on the world stage, and medical science experienced some of its most significant progress, the Belleville doctor remained the man of warmth, skill and integrity whom patients of several generations came to know. His was experience too that was sharpened by service overseas and by consistent dedication to his profession.

It is men like Dr. Cronk who attest to the essential humanity of men and women, even in a troubled world. He will be missed.

Easter Seals

The fact that this year's Timmy of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children's Easter Seals campaign is a Belleville youngster gives added significance to the campaign locally.

Next week too Whipper Billy Watson comes to town for another visit with the Rotary Club which once again is adding its practical backing to this worthy cause.

Mr. Watson was here last year and his combined presence and moral support in the interests of these youngsters is of incalculable benefit, remembering also that the one time wrestling great was injured himself in an auto accident a few years ago.

Much has been done by the society and the service clubs, and with that vital public support which enables the work to continue year after year. The remarkable successes achieved in the correction of physical disability, through the Society's treatment facilities, is a measure of the achievement.

The purchase of Easter Seals enables the program to continue and make further contributions to the self-sufficiency of the youngsters.

Too Much

Food Prices Review Board chairman Beryl Plumptre has been repeating something we seem to recall the Prime Minister saying, with regard to that $40,000 a year earner: and it is to the effect that only by paying such a salary can the best people be found for the job.

The Australian-born Mrs. Plumptre, with a long record of volunteer endeavor and good works since her marriage and residence in Canada, (she has been in this country since the early thirties) is probably as well qualified a person for the task as any. But even at that, $40,000 — within $5,000 or so of the Prime Minister's salary — seems grossly excessive.

First of all, the job did not exist a year or so ago, so that a benevolent bureaucracy simply dipped into its pot of dollars for this handsome dispensation from what of course originally is the hard-pressed taxpayer's pocket.

And secondly, the Government's overall record of extravagance is now so well documented as to be known by all informed citizens.

In effect, the country cannot afford Mrs. Plumptre, especially as her board's influence is almost negligible.

Someone suggested in Parliament the other day that the Prime Minister should auction off some of his expensive office and home trappings, and evidently he agreed but only if MPs would agree to a cut in salary, this in the interests of combatting inflation.

Well if this were done, and if the civil servants agreed to a similar cut — we have said in the past that a drop of a thousand from each salary would never be missed — then a considerable saving would be accomplished. But we cannot see it happening. For one thing it would make the Government look bad and that the Trudeau would not tolerate, even if he knows, and the public knows, that its record is questionable enough as it stands.

Crown Corporations Planned

Bureaucracy — From Mere 'Growth' To a 'Glamor' Industry

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — For openers this year, the federal government plans spending an initial $22 billion.

Or a shade less than 19 per cent more.

But that is just the first bid for federal spending — in the annual tax and bar, spend or spend political game as disclosed in Treasury Board's Estimates — with the rest of the play still to come in succeeding sets of Supplementary Estimates.

These Supplementaries are sort of spending afterthoughts, multi-million-dollar items the Mr. federal senators forgot or were careful not to include in their Main Estimates.

So when the accounts are all in and entries in the federal books completed, the bill will have soared onward and upward to around that starting $22 billion.

And while governments — all of them, federal, provincial and municipal — are passing some spending responsibility on to every dollar you earn, the biggest spender of all, the multi-billion-dollar Ottawa Establishment, is hardly the matter of fact about it, smug in the reasonably safe assumption that there is nothing you can do to change things.

There it is take it or leave it, like it or hump it attitude on everything except one hypersensitive point, the huge and ever-growing public service.

It is the country's greatest growth industry.

Treasury Board finally comes clear of the figures, more than 400,000.

But that 400,000 is not the whole public service story. It does not include the multitudes on the federal payroll with the CNR, the CBC, and the whole sprawling empire of crown corporations and special agencies.

Even this only partial reflection of the enormity of the federal staff and its multi-billion-dollar cost has aroused parliamentary interest in the Ottawa Establishment and rash of some intriguing questions.

He hears, through a very wise and odd-to-the-Ottawa-knowing senator that there are between 1,500 and 2,000.

So many, he has been informed, that like many other underemployed public servants, they keep on the appearance of not being entirely idle by writing papers for each other's enlightenment.

So he is putting some questions on the Commons Order Paper to nail down the facts and figures.

But if the federal public service long has been a growth industry — and it definitely has — it is now to become the stock market equivalent of what they call a "glamor" enterprise with expansion so swift and huge as to be explosive.

New crown companies — like the National Petroleum Corporation — new boards — after the fashion of the Prices Review — and new agencies — in the style of the scores of odd little hole-in-the-corner enterprises tucked away all over Ottawa — are in the works.

And think of the hundreds of marks thousands of new federal job that will mean. After all, didn't the payroll soar some 27,000 between Jan. and '72?

So Treasury Board is on the defensive in the Prices Review case, doing a Gee-Whiz — They are spending five times as much on it in brochure explaining "How Your Tax Dollar Is Divided."

This special section, uding its own words, "begs the question of the public service," while public concerning for the first time, that its numbers exceed a half million.

And it makes the further rather startling disclosure that the percentage of the total federal public service in every province exceeds the Provincial percentage of the country's population.

While Treasury Board claims there is a "reasonable degree of relationship between the two," Nova Scotia, for instance, the province has 3.8 per cent of the federal public service, but only 3.3 per cent of the country's population.

Is your region getting its fair share of the nation's biggest growth industry?

Ontario Conference has 36 per cent of the federal public service, or curve 18.6 per cent of Canada's population. New Brunswick has 4.3 for an even three population percentage, Prince Edward Island 1.7 for 2.5, and Newfoundland 2.7 for 3.6.

Which seems to mean that if you eliminated population in proportion to public servants, only federal employees would be left.

Belgium's Experience with Differing Languages

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

It's a curious paradox that even after assisting in its liberation from German occupation in late 1944, Canadians have less affection for Belgium than they have for Holland which they also helped liberate.

Belgium's entire racial and cultural set-up is almost a microcosm of Canada's, bilingualism and federalism being holy cloisted issues as indeed they were in the last Belgian election just concluded.

Yet Holland sticks in the Canadian memory, maybe because more Canadians died leaving Holland and because the heir to the Dutch throne, the present Queen Juliana, lived in exile in Ottawa and raised her family there during the war years.

Whatever the reasons, it is Belgium which currently should attract our attention if briefly and how she has handled her problem of two languages, one Latin and one Anglo-Saxon in origin compared to ourselves.

The two official Belgian languages are of course French and Flemish. It is close to Dutch, but is one of the so-called Germanic languages along with German and the remote Friesian spoken in the Friesian Islands off the Dutch and German coasts.

The main difference between the Belgians and the Canadians is that Belgium is not yet a federal state. Belgian Flanders where Flemish is spoken is not a self-governing province like Quebec.

Indeed one of the burning issues of the early 1960s which resulted in tremendous Belgian riots, riots which almost toppled was the concern that a federal state would wreck it as a unitary Flanders. Sound familiar?

What had given more pounds to the regional cultural fights in already tiny Belgium has been the rise since the war of regionally-minded and federalist-thinking parties to compete with traditional national parties.

In effect they want a replacement of the unitary state, which we do not have by Canada with four federal-provincial structures, and more independence to three regions.

These are French-speaking Walloons, Flemish-speaking Flanders and bilingual Brussels the Belgian capital city and also the headquarters for the European Common Market bureaucracy.

The winner of the election last March 10 was the Social Christian Party which believes in moving slowly into the federal idea.

Belgians opposed to a federal system will probably look at last week's announcement from the Quebec government rejecting French proposals for the official language of that province as the kind of crisis Belgium would soon face if her parliament ever voted in federalism.

Canadian over-reacting to their own problems of race and language have not yet experienced bitter rioting over language differences of the kind which plagued Belgium about a decade ago.

The conclusion to be drawn from this is that federalism applied to the Belgian experience and language is not a panacea but was even more important in stabilizing support for Confederacy during the Civil War.

Canadian Aid for African Lands

Oxfam Says It Supports Liberation Movements

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

OXFAM-Canada supports the Canadian government's recent initiative in offering humanitarian aid to indigenous peoples in southern Africa fighting to free themselves from the yoke of European colonial or minority regimes. Even leaving aside the rightness of their cause, we believe such aid is justified on purely humanitarian grounds.

Thus, we were appalled by the wave of public and press criticism which has forced at least a temporary shelving of the government's plans. The criticism seems to be based on a number of misconceptions:

First, the proposed aid would not be used to support "Terrorism." The situation of a huge black population in rebellion against a tiny minority of European masters is so different from the FLQ crisis in Quebec or the recent wave of airline hijackings and political kidnappings that any attempt to equate the two is pure deception.

In any case, the proposed humanitarian aid would be for use to support the civilian population, not the military efforts of the liberation movements. OXFAM-Canada, other non-government organizations and several churches, several UN agencies, as well as the governments of Sweden, the Netherlands and other countries are already engaged in this humanitarian effort. Each of these sources has given care to see that the aid is used for the purposes specified.

Why is humanitarian aid needed? The need springs partially from the tactics used by the colonial and minority regimes in attempting to fight the insurgents. As in all recents wars of this type, the civilian population suffers.

Hit and run operations, saturation bombing and the use of defoliants decimay not only villages, but food crops as well; the traditional farmers who depend on these crops and their families must be fed. Medical aid is required for the casualties, a high proportion of whom are children.

On the positive side, the liberation movements are more than guerrilla armies. They are fighting for majority rule, but in the midst of this struggle are building the foundations for peace; To the civil population they provide elected local governments. Immunistics and medical aid, schools for children and literacy classes for adults; new seeds, tools and methods for African farmers; and tradeing facilities. The benefits of these development activities can be documented and deserve our support.

Our morally questionable involvement in southern Africa through trade and investment in the European colonial and minority ruled territories should not prevent us from giving humanitarian aid to these whose only crime is to be black and want freedom.

CATHERINE HARVEY,
OXFAM-Ontario
Regional Director

Streaking Phenomenon

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Hail to all "streakers". Carry on! It has always been my contention that we should set aside one day each year when we must all strip ourselves of all garments and appear in each other as we really are — unable to impress others with mink coats, jewels, and expensively cut garments. A day when our every pretension, frivolity, and "financial giants" would have to offer us more than jewelled cufflinks and monogrammed shirts to impress us! — And, who knows? — if there was a day when we had to dispense with our "two-way stretches" and "push-up" bras we might encourage us to keep in better shape.

So, parents, let your children "streakers" and use as your theme song "Streak-o-lite" "made-in" coming bye, bye!

MARIE-PAULEY.

Football League Furore

Peterborough Examiner

Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde has been involved indirectly into a fuzzy over the incursion into Canada of a World Football League team.

Mr. Lalonde has been roving about the country severely cautioning nationalistic sentiment about the Canadian Football League. According to the health minister, the CFL is one of the country's cultural institutions and any attempt to weaken it will be regarded with extreme disfavor by the keeper of the nation's culture — the federal government.

Just anyone doubt that Mr. Lalonde is serious about protecting the country's cultural extravagance, the health minister has let it be known that he intends to stop the WFL at all costs. Legislation is apparently in the works that would stop the Yankee imperialists of sport at the border.

The time will come when Parliament has "to decide if we keep Canadian football alive or act like a bunch of colonials," said Mr. Lalonde.

"Colonial" is a strong tag to use. The WFL isn't even off the ground yet.

The Action And Reaction Syndrome

Brockville Recorder and Times

Most people are content with the majority of letters to the editor columns with editorial views or the views expressed in particular feature articles appearing in the newspapers.

It is a phenomenon found in all print media accepting and publishing letters to the editor. It is seen in the way free, the smallest weekly to the large international publications such as Time and Newsweek.

But why? Is it because editors are content with accepting regularity, or because feature writers consistently take an inconsistent or a particular bent? We think not.

The key here is the word "reaction". Disagreement, especially strongly expressed, and sometimes passionate reaction. In many cases it is usually because of something in the news. Legislation, the Canada-U.S. Auto Agreement, on the other hand, usually produces little response, a reader may feel an editorial is right in his views but the reader is not likely to respond by taking the time to compose and write a letter of agreement.

We suppose the whole topic could be summed up by saying, "Have you ever heard someone vehemently agree?"

Uncle Tom's Cabin, by Harriet Beecher Stowe, was first published in book form 132 years ago today—in 1852. It had earlier been serialized in a magazine.

The sentimental novel sold 500,000 copies in the United States and was translated into 22 languages. It fanned flames of anti-slavery feeling in the North and was even more important in stimulating support for Confederacy during the Civil War.

The Bible has God's plan for our lives. If we get of the word it surely means that we have struck out on our own. May the Lord help us to find it in our hearts but share it with the world.

Ann Landers

Wants to Enroll At Lavender U

Dear Ann Landers: I am a homosexual. I've been hearing some talk about a new school soon to be opened, called Lavender University. It is, of course, for homosexuals only, both male and female, and I think it's a fantastic idea. Unfortunately, there are very few places besides gay bars where lonesome homosexuals can meet one another.

Will you please get some information on Lavender U, and give me some facts? Thank you very much. And thank you, too, for your enlightened approach to those of us who are "different." — Bay Area Admirer.

Dear Bay: Lavender U. is scheduled to open in San Francisco later this year. The school will offer no degrees and will have no campus. The fees will be established by the faculty. Many classes will be held in the homes of the instructors until they are able to construct or buy a building.

The courses they plan to offer are Greek literature, metaphysics, photography, opera appreciation, modern dance, jewelry-making, and hiking.

One of the problems the homosexual activists anticipate is that some heterosexuals might try to enroll. They say they want only homosexuals, but there is no way to make a person prove he is gay. I hope they don't spend too much time worrying about this "obstacle" since I seriously doubt that a school of this type would attract many straights.

Dear Ann Landers: Whenever we meet another couple for cocktails, and the check arrives, my husband manages to leaf through his wallet just long enough so that the other fellow pays it.

This embarrasses me to death. How can I get this clip artist to pay our way? Please suggest something subtle.— Married To A Sponge.

Dear Married: Sorry, but a guy whose hide is as thick as your husband's wouldn't respond to anything subtle. You will have to hit him with a sledge hammer. Suggested line when the check appears: "Oh, no—THIS time my husband is going to be the host. We were YOUR guests last time." Keep track and make the sponge alternate, whether he likes it or not.

Unique Ingredients Equal Unexpected Delights

For cake bakers, today a quintet of recipes unusual either in ingredients or appearance. And just to make it easier, a look at the finished product for each recipe.

Peanut Butter Cake

1 ¾ cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup regular margarine or butter, softened
1 and one third cups sugar
2 eggs
¼ cup peanut butter
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring
¾ cup wheat bran cereal
1 cup milk
one-third cup strawberry preserves

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Set aside.

Place margarine and sugar in large mixing bowl; beat until well-combined. Add eggs, peanut butter and vanilla; beat well.

Measure wheat bran cereal and milk into small mixing bowl; stir to combine. Add to peanut butter mixture; mix well. Add sifted dry ingredients; mix until well-combined. Line bottoms of 2 8-inch round cake pans with waxed paper; pour batter evenly into pans.

Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 35 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pans. Cool completely on wire racks. Spread strawberry preserves between layers; frost sides and top with Peanut Butter Frosting. Decorate with additional preserves, as shown.

Peanut Butter Frosting

3 tablespoons regular margarine or butter, softened
3 tablespoons peanut butter
2 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon vanilla flavoring
2 cups sifted confectioners sugar

Measure margarine, peanut butter, milk and vanilla into small mixing bowl; mix well. Add sugar; beat until light and fluffy. Spread Frosting on sides and top of Peanut Butter Cake. Note: Vary the amount of milk as needed to achieve a good consistency for spreading.

Patchwork Cake

1 pkg. cherry almond cake mix
4 slices canned pineapple
2 tblsp. cornstarch cup heavy cream, whipped
¼ cup chopped maraschino cherries maraschino cherry halves tangerine or mandarine orange sections

Prepare and bake cake mix according to directions on package for an 8-inch square pan. Cool 15-20 minutes, then turn out on rack and cool. Add water to pineapple syrup to make ½ cup. Place in a small saucepan and stir in cornstarch.

Save two pineapple slices for top of cake. Finely chop remaining pineapple slices and add with chopped cherries to syrup mixture. Cook over low heat until thickened.

Slice cake crosswise. Spread pineapple filling between two layers. Spread top of cake with remaining whipped cream and decorate with reserved pineapple slices (cut as desired), cherry halves and tangerine sections. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Serves 8 to 10. Note: Your own white cake recipe would be just as suitable.

Golden Cheesecake

1 ¼ cups cold water
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
3 eggs, separated
2 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
¼ cup sugar
½ pint whipping cream (10 ounces)
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 teaspoon grated orange rind

Cube 2 ¾ cups rutabaga. Drop into boiling, salted water; and cook until just tender. Drain. Puree in blender or whip in mixmaster or by hand. This should yield 1 ¼ cups pureed rutabaga. Set aside.

Mix crumbs and butter. Reserve ¼ cup and press remainder on bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Chill. Soften gelatin in cold water in top part of small double boiler. Add ½ cup sugar, salt, milk and slightly beaten egg yolks. Cook over boiling water, stirring until slightly thickened. Pour over cheese and reserved pureed rutabaga. Beat until smooth and blended. Cool.

Beat egg whites until foamy; add ¼ cup sugar and beat until stiff. Whip cream and fold into first mixture; fold in egg whites. Add flavorings. Pour into prepared pan, sprinkle with reserved crumbs and chill until firm.

Makes 16 to 12 servings.

Applesauce Meringue

1 ¾ cup sifted flour
one cup raisins
½ tsp salt
one tsp cinammon
¼ tsp cloves
one cup brown sugar
½ cup butter
one egg
cup cup sweetened applesauce

Grease and flour eight inch square pan. Preheat ovan to 350.

Cream butter, add sugar gradually. Beat in egg. Mix together flour, salt, soda and spices. Stir into butter mixture, stirring until smooth. Add raisins which you have very lightly floured and applesauce. Bake for about 40 minutes.

Topping:

1 cup applesauce
1 tbsp grated lemon rind
½ tsp cinnamon
½ tsp salt
2 egg whites
4 tbsp sugar
¼ tsp cream of tartar

Drain excess liquid from one cup of applesauce and add lemon rind and cinnamon. Beat egg whites until stiff, gradually adding sugar, salt and cream of tartar.

Spread apple mixture over cake. Top with swirls of meringue. Place in hot oven (450) until golden, 6 to 8 minutes.

Beer Cake

2 cups flour
1 ¼ teaspoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
1½ cups sour cream
½ cup beer
1¼ teaspoons vanilla

Filling and Topping

½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
½ to ¾ cups chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease 10" tube pan. Sift flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt into large mixing bowl. Cream together in separate bowl butter and sugar. Add eggs, sour cream, beer and vanilla. Stir vigorously approximately two minutes. Add to dry ingredients and mix until all ingredients are well blended.

In separate bowl mix sugar, cinnamon and walnut chips. Spoon one-third of cake batter into greased 10" tube pan - sprinkle on one-third of filling. Spoon on another third of cake batter and again sprinkle on a third of filling. Spoon on remaining third of batter and sprinkle remainder of cinnamon mixture on top. Cook 45 to 50 minutes or until browned on top and cake tester comes out clean.

Get Help Face to Face

Dear Doris: I'm an 18-year-old girl. My parents are dead and I've taken drugs to forget them. And I've quit the drug scene for two months now.

Well, I fell in love with a guy, and I think he only cares for sex. That really hurts me, so I feel like turning back to drugs. Drugs are the only comforting thing for me.

I am not going to visit a head shrinker. I want to be myself. I want to be able to stand on my own two feet. Please give me an answer. — Drugs or Dope

Dear D. or D.: What a great blow it must have been to lose both of your parents — and I can see you reaching for something — anything — which might promise forgetfulness. But drugs could destroy you; even though they seem the only comforting thing.

You are missing the affection and closeness of other people. This boy seemed to become (though you might someone to talk to, — a social worker — at close range. Face to face you can really unload and can be helped to sort yourself out.

Take the plunge!

Dear Doris: Our son, 13, is a big boy. He is strong and capable on the farm but when it comes to school work his enthusiasm fails.

He has been skipping classes. He has taken up smoking and, if available, drinking.

He says all the kids are doing it and why shouldn't he? To me this is irresponsible. How can we help him to see that he is on the wrong track? — Puzzled, B.C.

Dear Puzzled: It is amazing how the everybody's doing it argument settles the matter so often for our teenagers. It seems so tremendously important to be like everybody else.

Talk to the school and you'll find that everybody is not doing it — not skipping classes, nor smoking, nor drinking. There are the stalwart few who stand out as being more mature, more thoughtful, more able to stand on their own two feet.

Under-achieving suggests lack of motivation. Discuss careers with your boy and find out what talents he has. He needs a goal.

One teenage girl's whole future was changed when at 13 she spent a single week of her vacation at sewing school making a dress for herself. She has great joy in her creation; from then on moved ahead with purpose.

Confidential to D.-P.: Fussy thing about sexual relations — what turns one person on turns another off. I hear you, wife's turned-up nose; she is fascinated by his brown eyes; fascinated is a list which gets the him ribbon.

A gynecologist tells me your condition is quite common and can usually be easily corrected. What hests me is why a loving husband would joke about it to your friends!

Write me if you have further trouble, next time exclusive, a self-addressed, stamped envelope so that I can go into the whole matter more thoroughly than is possible in the column.

Meanwhile, consider whether your husband's being "turned off" is caused by something deeper than your slight imperfection. Counseling might bring some concealed dissatisfaction out into the open.

Hydro Hike Coming Up

Belleville electricity users can expect another bite out of their pocketbooks this year when the third rate increase since 1971 is expected to take effect July 1.

Increases in material costs and wages, and an approximate 5% per cent hike in the wholesale price of power to Belleville have driven up operating costs incurred by the city utilities commission. The increases have forced commissioners to look at the possibility of raising rates for all 12,000 city customers.

During a meeting Tuesday, the commission authorized the undertaking of a detailed study to determine the utility's financial position with and without a rate boost.

General manager Neil Bellyou said it would be jointly done by BUC employees and Ontario Hydro. Should commissioners approve a rate hike, final approval rests with Hydro.

He hoped the study would be completed in time to give users the customary two months' advance notice of the change.

Mr. Bryton said the percentage of the increase for the different categories, may vary this time around.

Police Charge Motorcyclist After Chase

A Belleville man was charged with dangerous driving early last night after Belleville police chased two motorcyclists, at high speeds, along streets in the East Hill area.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today that one of his department's constables, on routine patrol along Dundas Street East, noticed three motorcyclists speeding east along the roadway. When the officer turned to follow them, two of the cyclists sped away.

They led the police on a chase that twisted along Dundas Street East, Haig Road, Bleecker Ave. and Pine, St. at speeds reported to be as high as 80 miles an hour.

During the chase, one of the motorcyclists is reported to have just missed hitting a female pedestrian at Bridge Street.

The police constable lost track of one of the cyclists when he turned off Bleecker Ave. but captured the other man on Pine Street.

Water Beds For Jail?

Overnight guests who stay in the Belleville police department's jail cells may find themselves sleeping on water beds.

No, the new move to redecorate the cells that were recently criticized in a grand jury report isn't as established fact yet, but it may be.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie told the Belleville police commission yesterday that he was looking into the grand jury's recommendation that his department equip the Campbell Street cells with mattresses made of some nonflammable type of material fesably washable for the use of persons being held in custody.

In its Feb. 27 report the grand jury had criticized the police department's jail block saying that the blackness of the cells combined with the hard cement beds to make the cell block very depressing.

The suggestion that water beds be counted as a suitable alternative to the cement beds came from Mayor Robin Jeffrey.

The police Chief said that he hadn't considered the water beds as a solution to the problem but would look into the matter.

Residents Request Drainage

A group of homeowners in the Robertson Lane area of west Belleville have a water problem in their basements and back yards and feel city hall should do something about the matter.

In a letter to Mayor Robin Jeffrey, residents stated the problem had increased since construction of homes on Dunnett by three local builders.

The petitioners ask that something be done by the city to properly drain the area, and indicated they were prepared to meet with a city representative to discuss the problem.

Garbage Used to Set Fires

The arsonist who set three fires in five apartment buildings at the corner of Sidney Street and West Moira late last night, did so by scattering green plastic garbage bags, full of garbage, about the floor of the apartments' utility rooms. One of the three fires was extinguished by tenants who lived at 230E Moira, while firefighters managed to extinguish the fires in the utility rooms at 230B and 230C Moira Street West. Garbage was already laid out to be ignited in the other two buildings. While fire damage was confined primarily to the utility rooms, the downstairs halls the arsonist, nevertheless, managed to cause $50,000 worth of damage.

Sewerless Tenants Charged for Service

City council should have a bylaw making it mandatory for householders to connect to a sanitary sewer when it is installed along their street.

That is the feeling of Alderman Joe Cox, who during the inquiry period at Monday's council meeting, asked that such a bylaw be given consideration.

The question of forced connection to a sanitary sewer was introduced earlier in the meeting by Alderman Stu Meeks who noted that some tenants in the Hillcrest area were being assessed sewer rates when their houses were not connected to the sewer.

He said the tenants' landlords had refused to make the necessary connections and asked if there was any way which the tenants could be relieved of the charge.

Also at Monday's meeting, council gave third reading to a bylaw authorizing construction of sanitary sewers on McFarland Drive, University Ave., Centre Street, West Street and Ilce Crescent in Hillcrest.

Other sanctlats will include Mayor Robin Jeffrey, Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, and professionals from recreation departments at Peterborough and Niagara Falls from the province's community and social services ministry.

About 100 are expected to attend the conference, starting at 9 a.m.

The OMRA is a federation of 15 regional organizations made up of professional and volunteer workers in municipal recreation. It provides a communications channel for stimulating increased awareness on recreation matters. It also assists local and provincial governments in establishing legislative guidelines.

Chairman of the Belleville conference is Mrs. Helen Weichel, Peterborough, while Joan Gobbie, member of the Belleville recreation committee, is co-ordinator. Belleville recreation staff organizing the event are Wilma Summerh, publicity chairman; registers, Rita Becker; mechanics chairman, Clifford Beich; Lennox and Addington counties.

Recreation Conference Slated for Centennial

A day-long conference on recreation — with special interest for smaller communities — will be held in Belleville March 30.

The conference, involving both professionals and community spokesmen, is being organized by the Ontario Municipal Recreation Association for its east-central Ontario zone.

It will be held at Centennial Secondary School.

Theme of the event will be communications in recreation and program highlights include panel discussions on government involvement, finances and organization structures.

Among those participating will be Walter Beath, chairman of the new Durham Region municipality — the biggest in the province — also includes Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and

Meters Will Stay

The municipally owned parking lot on the west side of Front Street will continue as a metered lot at least for the time being.

This was the decision of the Belleville Parking Authority at its March meeting when no action was taken on a request from the Board of Management, Downtown Improvement Area, to make the area an attendant lot.

In other business at the meeting, a financial report submitted by City Treasurer Frank J. Morrell, showed that the authority had a net revenue of $4,908.49 on 1973 operations.

Revenue for the year totalled $114,442.53 with expenditures of $107,534.12, including $30,985.22 in debenture charges.

The authority has $337,250, including $460,749 in land and $76,250 in equipment. On the other side it has debenture debt of $213,874 and a $323,425 investment in capital assets.

Roll Out The Barrel

The visiting students from Lahr, Germany, had the barrel rolled out for them yesterday. Through the efforts of Chamber of Commerce manager, Don Sutton and Corby's Distilleries, the students toured the Corby plant. The students, who will be leaving the city for Germany in June, were given a first-hand look at the various processes involved in making whisky.

16-year-old Charged After Apartment Fires

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

A 16-year-old Belleville youth, James Gordon Rickie Dafoe, of 193 West Moira Street, is being held in custody here, charged with arson following an arsonist's attempt to set fire to five apartment buildings in Belleville's west end late last night.

Shortly before 11 p.m. Tuesday, fire broke out in the basement utility rooms of three apartment buildings that are clustered together at the intersection of Moira Street West and Sidney Street.

Unlit arson materials, garbage bags scattered about the basement floor, were found in the utility rooms of the three buildings that form part of the 30-unit apartment complex at 230A to 230 E Moira Street West.

When firefighters arrived at the scene, tenants had put out the fire in the basement storage area of the utility room at 230B Moira. The other two buildings, 230C and 230B Moira, were damaged extensively by smoke and water even though the fires were confined to the utility rooms and the basement hallways.

One of the rescues, executed by PC Gerry Bull and City Ambulance attendant Al White, saw the men rush into the burning building to pull an elderly woman from the smoke-filled bedroom of a second floor apartment on the south side of the building. The two men lowered the woman to the ground from the apartment's balcony.

While PC Bull and Mr. White were inside the building at 230C Moira, firefighters led by Captain Elmer Helm, Barney Smith and Fred Smith, assisted an unidentified Oriental youth from a third floor window on the south west side of the building, using ladders from one of the fire trucks and an aerial truck.

Firefighter Jack Finkle had made a previous attempt to rescue the youth from a southeast balcony but had been driven back by the thick smoke.

A third fire victim rescued from one of the burning buildings was an elderly woman who was trapped on the third floor balcony of her north side apartment at 230C Moira Street.

The woman was assisted down a ladder by firefighter Fred Smith and PC Gerry Bull.

Deputy Fire Chief Bob Emerson, and some other firefighters received a fright when they were told by a frightened mother that a "baby" was trapped in a third floor apartment at 230B Moira Street. The deputy chief rushed into the smoke-filled apartment without an air pack, and scrambled about the apartment looking for the child. He couldn't find her.

On coming out of the building to catch his breath, the deputy chief discovered that the "baby" was a 22-year-old woman who had already managed to escape on her own.

Lowell Canterbury, a resident of 230D Moira Street West, was one of the people who first called firefighters to the scene.

Everyone Out Safely

Belleville firefighters, assisted by two City Ambulance attendants, Al White and Tony Tyrell, and Belleville police constable Gerry Bull, rescued at least three people from burning buildings at last night's fires at 230 Moira Street. The fires, which were set by an arsonist in the laundry rooms of three of the five apartment buildings owned by Gerry Joyce, of Belleville, caused an estimated $50,000 damage. No one was injured in the blaze but two men were treated for smoke inhalation.

Night Soil Collector Is Hired

The city has hired a new contractor for the collection of night soil in the Hillcrest area. He is George Masterson, who will be paid $700 a month for his services.

City council Monday gave formal approval to the contract which was dated March 1.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said the contract included collections from three houses on Canniffon Road that do not have city water or sewer service.

Rivermouth Bubbler Loses Out in Council

Alderman Stu Meeks says he is confused.

The confusement came at Monday's city council meeting during discussion on the alderman's notice of motion, which called for installation of a bubble system in the mouth of the Moira River as a means to relieve spring flooding threats.

The motion was lost on a 10-1 vote.

In speaking to his motion, the alderman quoted a letter received from a Queen's University professor who said a bubble system might have beneficial results.

On the other hand, City Engineer Wilbur Purcell was quoted as saying that such a system had already been investigated and that it would not work satisfactorily because of the shallow water depth.

"I am just a layman ," said the alderman. "I am very confused."

Alderman Arthur Keegan seconded the motion but said if the proposed dredging of silt from the rivermouth went ahead it might be that he bubble system would not be needed.

Police Forces Will Co-operate

A signed mutual aid agreement between the Trenton and Belleville police departments was tabled during yesterday's meeting of the Belleville police commission.

The agreement, a subject of negotiation between the two departments since last August 15, will permit both municipal police departments to assist each other for assistance without having to obtain the prior approval of the respective police chiefs.

Under the new agreement, each police department will be able to call for and receive emergency assistance from the other department in almost all fields of police work.

Breathalyzer technicians, identification officers and extra constables for chases, crowd control and other related matters will be assigned in work on a temporary basis, with the police department requesting emergency assistance provided such an assignment of personnel does not weaken the effectiveness of the assisting police force.

The question of payment for services received under the mutual aid agreement, one of the major sticking points in the negotiations, was resolved in such a way that the municipality requesting assistance will be responsible for paying the cost of services provided to it.

Reduced Speed Limit Proposed

All non-arterial roadways in Belleville should have a 25-mile-an-hour speed limit.

That is the feeling of city Alderman John Stock, who Monday introduced a notice of motion that the speed limit on non-arterial streets reduced to the 25-mile limit.

The alderman said the reasoning for his motion to be before council at its next meeting was the number of traffic deaths in the city in recent months.

Another notice of motion from Ald. Ben Corke to come before council at its next meeting calls for an approach by council to ask Sidney and Thurlow townships to join with Belleville in the proposed purchase of the Potter property west of the city.

The proposal is for the Moira River Conservation Authority to purchase the 360-acre tract of land for greenbelt and development as a trailer park.

City council voted Monday to enter into an agreement to purchase the property according to a schedule of costs set out by the authority. Councils of the two rural municipalities have yet to give formal agreement to the purchase.

Panama's Friend Of Poor Jittery

PANAMA CITY, Panama (Reuter) — Panama's strongman, Gen. Omar Torrijos, is increasingly wary of plots to overthrow him as he speeds up the pace of reforms to improve the lot of the poor.

In the last few weeks at least eight former officials have been detained, accused of sedition.

The government recently announced the imprisonment of two men allegedly sent here from Florida, as couriers of former National Guard Col. Amado Sanjur who led an abortive coup against Torrijos in 1969.

In this torrid city of squalid shanties and modern high-rise buildings, talk of revolution had long been confined to Torrijos and his enthusiastic band of supporters. Signboards with the general's revolutionary slogans dot the skyline.

But in the air-conditioned, carpeted offices of big business and banking, there is increasing uneasiness over the general's alleged shift towards socialism.

"We are in the grip of a military dictatorship and Communists are being given more and more power in the government," one prominent businessman claimed.

The uneasiness arises from Torrijos' efforts to institutionalize the revolution begun with a military coup in 1968, which ended nearly 70 years of oligarchic rule by a handful of wealthy families.

In 1972, he was backed "maximum leader" of Panama and an unusual system of government was set up under which President Demetio Lakas carries out some administrative functions but has no political power and the peasants have a voice in the government.

The avowed aim of the 44-year-old general is to redistribute wealth and bring the lower classes more and more into the political and economic mainstream of the country.

Businessmen fidgeted in 1972 when a new labor code was introduced, increasing social benefits and granting a year-end bonus of one month's salary to workers.

But the private sector began to protest louder when a new housing law was published last October designed to encourage the building of low-cost housing.

The law froze all rents, both for private and commercial premises, and ordered banks to commit half their deposit savings to long-term loans for construction of social interest.

Private businessmen claim that as a result, funds have been leaving Panama and $125 million worth of construction projects have been frozen.

Late last year, they called a "bosses strike" which was nearly crushed when the government declared the day for which it was intended a public holiday.

Despite the anti-Torrijos sentiment in the private sector, the possibility of a coup is generally discounted here.

The 8,000-strong National Guard appears to be united behind Torrijos and even businessmen here admit that without the military's help there can be no possibility of action. "We businessmen are cowards," one executive said.

But the government is apparently concerned. The government-controlled daily newspaper Matutino recently warned that there was a limit to Torrijos' patience with his opponents.

A serious plot was attributed to Sanjur who tried to incite a National Guard mutiny in 1969 while Torrijos was in Mexico.

Sanjur escaped from a Panamanian jail and received asylum in the United States-controlled Canal Zone, from where he made out some advertisements in Miami.

The case was kept secret for three months and discreetly by the end of January after two men—a Cuban and a Panamanian—had been sentenced to 15 and five years imprisonment.

Berkshire Vigilantes

WALLINGFORD, England (CP) — Soaring meat prices have encouraged increased cattle rustling in this Berkshire area. So 40 farmers have turned vigilante, offering up to $23,000 for worthwhile information on the cattle thieves and selling the reward notices in trees, Wild West style.

Search Under Way For Cheap Protein

NEW YORK (CP) — A worldwide hunt is under way to develop a cheap protein supplement to replace costly soybean and fish meal now being fed to cattle.

With world appetites for beef increasing at rapidly at prices, feeding cattle herds has become nearly $170 a ton or fish meal at $587 a ton is becoming prohibitive.

Several companies are involved in research for a protein supplement.

Just about everything is being tried from recycling treated cow manure to removing the protein from crushed leaves, grasses and vines.

The major source of fish meal—the Peruvian anchovy catch—is being fished out and soybean meal prices are on the rise again after hitting a record $419 a ton last June.

Over-all, farmers have doubled the amount of protein supplements fed 10 years ago.

The result is that "the cost of protein for animal diets has at least doubled in the last few months, so there is a push to discover new sources of animal feeds," says Jack Taylor, an official in the U.S. food and drug administration's bureau of veterinary medicine.

The worldwide hunt for such supplements is turning up a variety of technologies and substitutes unknown to farmers 20 years ago," says Business Week magazine.

Among those in the race to satisfy the protein supplement market, and their methods, are:

—Bechtel Corp. and Louisiana State University, which plan to churn out protein supplement for farm animals with waste material from wood, paper and sugar cane.

—British Petroleum Co., whose scientists are using petroleum as the basis for growing protein with laboratory-created bacteria.

—Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd., which has built a pilot plant that uses wood alcohol as the base.

—Hungarian scientists, who have come up with a process which extracts the vital protein from green plants, mills it into a slurry, presses out the juices and heats it to more than 177 degrees. The protein in the juice coagulates and is recovered by a centrifugal process.

Last year, the Hungarians turned out 1,200 tons, of concentrate with the same 45 to 50 per cent protein content as soybean meal—and sold some to farmers in Austria, Italy and West Germany for the same price as soybean meal.

THE SOVEREIGN STATE OF I.T.T.

by Jeremy Sanjour

The story of multi-national corporations, and in particular that of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, is told in this authentic picture of a giant corporation in action. The author reveals I.T.T.'s relations with Nazi Germany, and shows what happens when an international company becomes too powerful for a nation to control.

THE JACKETS OF GREEN

by Jeremy Bryant

This is the story of the Rifle Brigade, but it is also the story of an army and how it helped to create and garrison the British Empire for a century and a half. In this far-flung empire, the British Army was the principle means of defending and preserving the peace. But all was not war. This is also a social history of the Rifle Regiment. One officer composed the Khan Beali Song, while another explored and surveyed the unexplored territory between the River Niger and the Nile.

KENNEDY JUSTICE

Victor S. Navasky.

When Robert F. Kennedy became Attorney-General, he was probably more powerful than anyone who had held the job before, because of his relationship to the President of the United States, but he had to still deal with F.B.I. Director J. Edgar Hoover before he could hope to mobilize the Justice Department behind the chosen causes. Victor Navasky has done intensive research over a period of five years, casting fresh light on such subjects as the wiretapping of the Dr. Martin Luther King residence the all-out effort to put Hoffa behind bars, and the crime war against the top racketeers in the United States.

This book is about an age which has gone for ever, the age of the steamer, the tall stacked, shallow-draft, wood burners, that used to ply the Trent Valley and Kawartha Lakes in the 19th century. It is also about people who came to settle the lands drained by the Trent, to clear fields, cut the forests, and build the towns.

Cattle Prices Decline In Subsidy Confusion

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Government action intended to help beef producers during hard times received Tuesday by an uproar in the beef industry.

A call for an emergency debate in the Commons and the suspension of livestock trading in Calgary.

And the return to producers, at some points, had not increased, despite the federal subsidy intended to help them.

A spokesman for the Winnipeg Public Stockyards said the federal subsidy program has created so much confusion that packing houses are bidding down the price of steers by up to $7 a hundred weight—same as the amount of the subsidy—to protect themselves.

Beef prices in Calgary dropped by about $2 Tuesday, causing the livestock exchange to suspend trading until the situation is sorted out.

In Ottawa, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan hinted that the government might raise the subsidy to beef farmers to $9 from the current $7.

He told reporters the government is looking at all aspects of the four-day-old program in an effort to make it work smoothly.

One way or the other, he said, the government is determined to "get the confusion out of the market."

The government implemented the subsidy to help domestic cattlemen through a period of depressed beef prices, driven down from record levels by volumes of cheaper U.S. beef.

The subsidy is supposed to be paid to beef producers such as ranchers by processors and packers. They must give the producer the going prices for his beef, plus the subsidy which is equal to seven cents a pound on the four top grades of beef.

But, said Arthur Evans, manager of Canada Packers in Calgary, packers are reluctant to buy beef under these conditions because of "the danger of losing a bundle."

"The situation is too confusing at this point."

Dismissal Is Upheld

TORONTO (CP) The firing of Ross MacKenzie, a Sudbury-based inspector with the ministry of environment's air management branch, has been upheld by a public service grievance board.

Marchand Seeks Rail Union Help

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand carried his campaign for overhauling the transport system to the workers Tuesday, urging rail unions help in reorganizing the railway industry.

Mr. Marchand, who repeated his promise to resign if he cannot tighten government control over transportation, asked union co-operation in dealing with job-change problems.

W. C. Y. McGregor, chairman of the Canadian Railway Labor Association (CRLA), replied he was sure the association would give the minister its "full co-operation in discussing these issues."

Mr. McGregor was presenting the annual CRLA brief to he cabinet. The association said it's aim of th National Transportation Act to develop an economic, efficient and adequate transport system have not been met.

Mr. Marchand reiterated his view that the government's approach under the transportation act has been "all wrong." The transport minister did not have enough legal control over transportation.

The minister did not have the power to tell the railways to build bigger cars to carry grain. He could not inform the railways that subsidies paid for operating losses on passenger be affected."

service should be spent on improving service.

"I can't manage transport in Canada," the minister said. "If you ask who is managing transport in Canada, I don't know."

Mr. Marchand said the government now sees a growing role for the railways. Committee service was the best answer to increasing urban traffic problems.

"I think in the process we will need your full co-operation because some men are going to

It's Brinco or Oil Gamble For Newfoundland - - Moores

MONTREAL (CP) — Newfoundland would probably have to spend $500 million over the next 10 years on thermal generating plants if it cannot secure Labrador hydro power on its industrial terms, Premier Frank Moores said Tuesday.

As well, he said, the province would have to join the international "gamble" for oil supplies to feed such plants.

"We would be crazy to get into a world gambling situation when we have hydro power sitting on our doorstep," he said at the windup of talks here on a bid to purchase Brinco Ltd., which holds 90 per cent of the all the untapped hydro-electric potential in Labrador, Newfoundland's mainland territory.

Privately, sources say Mr. Moores decided his province of 500,000 could finance construction of the alternative plants. Without hydro power, the province could not begin to attempt to have needed industrial development.

Brinco, set up under an act of the Newfoundland legislature, is involved in mineral exploration in other provinces but Mr. Moores said in interviews during his talks here that the province, if it assumed control of Brinco, would divest itself of all the company's interests except those involved in water rights.

"We don't want to get into private enterprise or the mining business," he said during the only news conference he gave in a week here.

The key is three million horsepower of untapped hydro potential on the lower Churchill River, which Newfoundland wants harnessed, quickly and fed into a planned power grid to serve provincial needs.

Brinco Reports Offer

MONTREAL (CP) — The board of directors of Brinco Ltd. was to meet today to discuss a Newfoundland government offer of just under $80 million for controlling interest in the resource company.

Brinco released a letter it is sending to its 23,000 shareholders, in which it said the Newfoundland government first offered $6.75 a share March 11, then increased that to $7.07 a share Monday, for the controlling 46.5 per cent of Brinco stock held by Rio Tinto-Zinc Corp. of London.

Finance Minister John Crosbie of Newfoundland said last week the intention was to offer other shareholders the price agreed upon by Rio Tinto.

There are 24 million outstanding Brinco shares and, if the province buys them at $7.07 the final price tag would be about $169,680,000.

Mississippi Anglers Examined by Spacemen

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (AP) — A weird thing happened to Charles Hickson and Calvin Parker Jr., as they stood casting for crustacea in the Pascagoula River.

They said a spaceship hovered nearby and three pale, wrinkled creatures floated them, took them inside for an examination, then let them go.

Mystified investigators found no logical way to debunk the story.

Authorities said whatever happened undoubtedly was a mid-meeting experience for Hickson, a 45-year-old shipyard foreman, and his young visitor, the son of a family friend.

It took place last Oct. 11 near the beginning of a great flap over Unidentified Flying Objects—UFOs—along the Gulf Coast.

"I've done everything I can to prove I'm telling the truth," Hickson said recently.

He is a slightly stooped man of middle height with a monkish fringe of hair, a slow and serene Mississippi drawl, and a face that crinkles and lately has been working too long, which occupy him from 8 a.m. until 9:30 p.m.

"As long as I'm working, I don't have any problems, but when I don't have anything to do, I sit and think," he said.

"I don't reckon I'll ever get over trying to figure out where they came from and why they picked me."

Hickson's report, briefly stated, was:

He and Parker, 19, were fishing at an old shipyard site which has since been scraped clean for new construction. At the time, it bore the ruin of a barge drydock, two rusty iron piers, a jumble of soda bottles, empty bottles and beer cans.

Though it seemed an isolated spot, it was not. Pascagoula is directly across the 100-yard-wide river. Huge shipyard cranes loom a mile to the south; a busy highway is 150 yards to the north.

A soft darkness had fallen as the men cast their lures. An oblong luminous blue blob circled, descended, hovered nearby.

Hickson said he and Parker were too stunned to run, and in any case there was no place to flee.

An opening—not a door, simply an indescribable open-ing—appeared in the side and three pale creatures came out, paralyzed them, floated him as to the craft, rotated him before it, instrumented resembling a big eye, then put him back on the pier.

Parker, injected almost in shock when officers questioned him three hours after the alleged encounter, said he blacked out as the creatures approached and remembers no more of it.

"They weren't lying," said Howard Eiler, chief investigator for the Jackson County sheriff's department. "What-ever it was, it was real to them."

Eiler's exhaustion was later backed up by a polygraph test given both men.

Since then, Parker, a shy, lanky, unsophisticated youth who came here to work at the shipyard with Hickson, has quit school and moved back home to Laurel, Miss.

Joe Ozanne, counsel for the returned home to Laurel, Miss.

shipyard, said Parker was first treated at a hospital for the threat of a complete physical and emotional breakdown."

For Hickson, things have been a bit better than he expected when he predicted that, "though I'll be the laughing stock of the country," he had to tell the story so government officials would know of it.

Government officials didn't show much interest. But Hickson, convinced his UFO came from another world, said he was surprised by the number of people who accepted that as logical.

He said he hadn't pondered the matter before Oct. 11 but,

"I don't see why God would put life on just this one small speck and no other place."

Guaranteed Income Too Costly--Lalonde

OTTAWA (CP) — The three opposition parties ganged up on the government Tuesday in support of a guaranteed annual income, but Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde said it would be too expensive.

Mr. Lalonde lit into a Social Credit proposal for cradle-to-grave payments to All Canadians.

Rene Matte (SC—Champlain) had said the proposal would cost only a few billion dollars more than current social programs. Mr. Lalonde told the Commons. But the minister worked out the cost at $36 to $37 billion.

That represented 125 per cent of current federal spending and would double all federal taxes, he added.

The debate was on Mr. Matte's motion which said the House regrets that the government has taken no concrete steps to ensure the establishment of a guaranteed minimum annual income to overcome poverty in Canada and proposed for special cases such as lowvalids and widows.

Mr. Lalonde denied that he opposes the guaranteed annual income idea. It already existed for old people in the form of old age pensions.

The government has tied these and other social programs to the cost of living, Mr. Lalonde said—a step provincial governments would do well to follow.

Mr. Lalonde said increased family allowances are another step toward guaranteed annual income.

But Mr. Matte said the present system of family allowances, unemployment insurance, pensions and income supplements is confusing, inefficient and "not entirely effective."

Both Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) and Grace Mac Innis (NDP—Vancouver Kingsway) endorsed this view.

Mr. Macquarrie said the government has been dragging its feet on the guaranteed annual income question.

Miss Mac Innis

Sharp Outlines African Aid Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has outlined a clearly-defined program of humanitarian aid to African freedom movements that he says will show "where we stand on the issues of racism and colonialist injustices."

In a statement to the Commons external affairs committee Tuesday, he said the aid would be strictly non-military and would flow only through private Canadian and international organizations or through United Nations agencies.

He said the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) would receive requests for funds for freedom groups in Namibia, Rhodesia, the Portuguese territories and South Africa.

"The projects clearly would not be practical without at least the tacit concurrence of the local authorities in the particular regions concerned."

Funds would also be available for people in liberated areas—such as those in the Portuguese colonies—and for refugees who have fled whiteruled areas to black countries.

"Here again, no projects would be feasible without the agreement of whoever is in de facto control of a particular area where a project is located."

STOL Will Be Little Help

TORONTO (CP) — Short-take-off-and-landing aircraft (STOL) will not "relieve the growth of air traffic passengers into and out of Toronto, the commission inquiring into the proposed Pickering airport was told Tuesday.

P. M. L. Pearson, a consultant to the federal airport planning branch, said there will be 15.9 million passengers using Toronto airports each year by 1990.

The most optimistic estimate of the number of STOL passengers using Toronto Island Airport by then is about 750,000 each year, he said. Even if this is doubled, those using conventional aircraft will reach the 15.8-million figure by 1986 or 1987.

He said the STOL system will "complement rather than replace the conventional airport system."

Crisis Grows

HAMILTON (CP) — McMaster University President A. N. Bourns held a five-hour bargaining session with protesting students Tuesday but student leaders said the campus crisis is deepening.

Leaders of the Students Representative Assembly (SRA) called for a mass rally Thursday to discuss plans for a possible general strike to close the university in the wake of a day of turmoil. The SRA executive Tuesday voted in favor of calling a strike.

Back Nurse

TORONTO (CP) — The convention of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association sent a telegram of support Tuesday to Anita Marie Palmer, a nurse banned from the operating room of a Whitby, Ont., hospital because of her opposition to abortion.

A copy of the message to Miss Palmer, expressing "strong support of your opposition to forced participation in the taking of human life," was sent to Ontario Health Minister Frank Miller.

Three Die

NAMAO, Alta. (CP) — A Canadian Forces helicopter on a training flight crashed late Tuesday night one-half mile south of the airport where it was based, killing the three occupants.

Two of the men died in the crash and a third on the way to hospital.

Wasteful

TORONTO (CP) — A government-appointed study group has found disposable bottles and cans are wasteful, but stopped short of recommending action against such items in a report to an Ontario ministry of the environment study on solid waste.

Jewett Named

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — The appointment of Dr. Pauline Jewett as president of Simon Fraser University was announced today by Paul Cote, chairman of the university board of governors.

Dr. Jewett, a professor in the department of political science at Carleton University in Ottawa, will assume office Sept. 1.

Favor U.S. TV

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton-Wentworth regional council wants cable television companies to give priority to United States network outlets from Buffalo over Ontario stations in Kitchener, London and Barrie.

Plane Down

ADEN (Reuter) — The South Yemeni air defence system forced a twin-engined amphibious plane owned by a Canadian company to land here today for violating the country's air space, it was officially announced.

Information Minister Rashed Mohammed Thabit said in a press statement that authorities are investigating the incident.

Grandson of Former PM Heads PCs

OTTAWA (CP) — A united, Progressive Conservative party ended its general meeting Tuesday night on one last standing ovation for Leader Robert Stanfield and a long round of cheers for Michael Meighen, the new national president.

Mr. Meighen, a 34-year-old lawyer from Montreal, toppled incumbent Don Matthews from the presidency in a hotly-contested campaign that reached every delegate.

Mr. Matthews, a construction company owner from London, Ont., campaigned on the theme of "we've only just begun" and asked for a chance to finish the work started when he was first elected in 1971.

Mr. Meighen, on the other hand, campaigned as "the right man, the right time" under the tacit approval of an outwardly-neutral Mr. Stanfield.

The tacit approval remained tacit throughout the three-day convention. It was fairly clear that Mr. Stanfield favored Mr. Meighen, a grandson of former prime minister Arthur Meighen.

Many of Mr. Stanfield's original supporters in the Conservative caucus worked actively in the Meighen campaign.

Sales Legal

OTTAWA (CP) — The government may abolish the Statistics Act to prevent Statistics Canada selling official mailing lists to private business, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday.

"But there's no action I can take to prevent those who have purchased data from using them," he said in reply to a Conservative question by Allan Lawrence (PC—North Cumberland-Durham).

Mr. Gillespie said that past sales of the list, compiled by the revenue department, are legal under the act.

An important plank in Mr. Meighen's platform was his plan to rebuild the party in Quebec, where the Conservatives hold only three commons seats.

Fluently-bilingual, Mr. Meighen pledged to show that Quebec is eager to do its part for the Conservatives, both now and in the next campaign.

EDUCATION COSTS

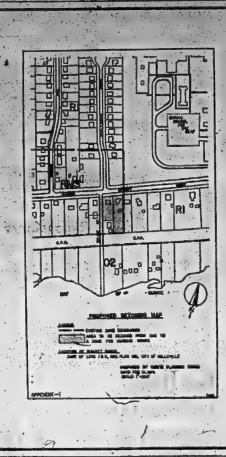
During 1971-1972, the provincial governments of Canada spent 94,125 million on education.

Draft Law On Pro Loops

OTTO LANG

OTTAWA (CP) — The justice department is working on legislation designed to keep U.S. football leagues out of Canada, Justice Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday night.

The minister would give no indication of what was in the proposed legislation when questioned at a meeting of the Commons justice committee.



144 Running

HALIFAX (CP) — A record 144 candidates, including eight women, were officially nominated Tuesday for the April 3 Nova Scotia election.

The Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats all entered full slates of 46 candidates. There are six independent candidates.

Psychiatrist Campaigns For Recognition of Sin

NEW YORK (AP) — Psychiatrist Karl Menninger says the old religious word sin has almost disappeared from modern usage but it remains a fact of the human condition that must be recognized.

He says the realities of personal guilt and sin have been glossed over as symptoms of emotional illness or environmental conditioning for which the individual is not considered responsible, but he adds:

"There is sin . . . which cannot be subsumed under verbal artifacts such as 'disease,' 'delinquency' 'deviancy.' There is immorality. There is unethical behavior. There is wrongdoing."

He calls for a reaffirmation of the concept of sin and of personal responsibility for it, in a new book published by Hawthorne called Whatever Became of Sin?, he declares:

"If the concept of personal responsibility and answerability for ourselves and for others were to return to common acceptance, hope would return to the world with it."

Menninger, who pioneered psychiatry in the United States and who founded the psychiatric centre in Topeka, Kan., that bears his name, says the "sense of personal moral responsibility is faint and apparently growing faint-er."

Challenging the views of behavioral scientists that individual acts always are determined by environmental or physical conditions, Menninger declares:

"There is always some environmental determination and always some individual determination and it is improper to exclude either."

But he adds that the prevailing attitude appears to be: "In the courtroom, everyone is responsible. Elsewhere, almost no one seems to be."

Menninger says that just as it is inadequate for a clergyman to give only pastoral counselling to a schizophrenic, it is inadequate for a psychiatrist to treat a symptom like sleeplessness of a man involved in wicked rascality.

"It does little good to repeat a symptom, but it may do great harm not to repeat a sin. Vice-versa, it does little good to merely proclaim vice a sin and sometimes a great harm to ignore a symptom."

He says recognizing the fact of voluntarily willed sin is "the only hopeful view," since it implies the possibility of repenting and correcting it. He adds:

"The logical, reasonable, effective solution for human reduction in such circumstances is to make atonement, as the theologians call it, or, as we say, by restitution, acknowledgment and revised tactics."

As the situation now is, "vague, amorphous evil appears all around us," with the presumption that "no one is responsible, no one guilty and that there is "just nothing to do."

He cites the traditional list of deadly sins—self-deifying pride, lust, gluttony, anger, sloth, envy, greed—and adds some of the new-named, cheating, lying, cruelty—and says they result from a "wrong attitude . . . an evil heart."

"I'm aware that psychological jargon can be employed which relates many of these to peculiarities of conditioning, special inhibitions, interactional incompatibilities and it does offer technical constructs. I wouldn't dispute them. I just don't think they lead to proper steps for correction."

Automakers Learn To Live with Recall

TORONTO (CP) — They don't like it, but automakers have learned to live with the recall campaign. It's costly and it usually means somebody goofed.

The real headache is tracking down the car owner, but the height of frustration comes with the motorist who simply does not answer a recall.

This year has started the same as many others. In the first two months, General Motors, Chrysler and Ford had four major recalls covering 325,547 vehicles in Canada. A total of 1.48 million were recalled in the United States.

In 1973 the Big Three and American Motors recalled 394,589 vehicles in Canada for safety defects. That represented the bulk—but not all—of such campaigns which by law are reported to the federal ministry of transport.

The ministry recorded 178 recalls last year from 56 companies—domestic auto makers, foreign auto manufacturers, snowmobile manufacturers, motorcycle firms and the like. Total number of vehicles involved for safety-related defects was 586,000, down from more than 850,000 in 1972.

The 1973 total included more than 100,000 snowmobiles and 40,000 motorcycles. In the fourth quarter alone there were 61 recalls covering 111,661 cars, trucks and buses, 28,318 snowmobiles, 22,846 motorcycles and 347 trailers.

Recalls have been around almost since the auto industry began. The first by General Motors, for instance, was initiated in 1916 by its Buick division.

A GM of Canada official said every mass-produced passenger car contains an average of about 14,000 parts, including gauges such as wheels, brakes, gears, valves, pistons, switches and electrical components.

"The number of vehicles recalled is in no way related to the number of vehicles which may actually have a defect," he said.

"In many cases, a recall campaign is like looking for a needle in a haystack. We may turn up a handful of defects even though thousands of vehicles were recalled."

Recalls are costly. Ford estimates a Jan. 11 recall of 125,000 1974-model cars, including 5,000 in Canada, will cost about $4 million. The campaign is to locate 400 cars that may have a malfunction in the automatic speed control device, an option, activated by a steering wheel button. Identifying the faulty units involves tearing apart the whole mechanism and Ford has committed itself to replacing all of them.

A large part of the expense is in tracking owners. Most auto manufacturers utilize registered mail to some extent.

Often the buyer has moved or sold his vehicle to someone whose address he doesn't know. Or he won't advise the new owner of the campaign or tell the manufacturer of the change of ownership.

Worse, after he receives notification of a recall he refuses to bring his car in.

"Our biggest problem in concluding callback campaigns is still getting the owner to bring his vehicle in once he or she has been notified," said a Chrysler Canada spokesman.

A Ford of Canada official suggested governments should consider a fine or other penalty for owners who ignore recalls. He said provincial motor vehicle registrars might consider keeping a computer record of owners to facilitate the search for third-or fourth-round buyers.

Ford goes through three mailings, two registered, in its hunt for owners. As a final resort, it makes a telephone check with the original dealer and customer.

Chrysler calls in an outside agency to help locate an owner if the registered letter is returned as undelivered.

Response to recall campaigns varies between 50 and 95 per cent.

In many cases the seriousness of the defect determines the response, a Ford spokesman said. A 1972 recall involving a small plastic ring fitting over the shoulder harness achieved 83 per cent completion "and it probably won't achieve much more."

Another 1972 recall requiring replacement of the rear axle in certain cars resulted in a near-100-per-cent response, excluding cases where the owner could not be found.

Last year Ford had 21 campaigns covering 25,038 vehicles in Canada. The smallest campaign involved three cars chassis for incorrect air brake routing; the largest 7,713 cars for a sticky throttle.

GM Canada recalled 236,510 vehicles and by Jan. 4 this year 136,835 were accounted for. Its smallest campaign covered two medium-duty trucks; its largest, 203,613 full-size 1971-72 cars.

Chrysler Canada had eight campaigns last year covering 10,852 cars and 17 covering 13,994 trucks. The largest was for 26,787 cars and the smallest involved five trucks.

American Motors had six campaigns in Canada for 16,275 vehicles, the smallest involving 63 Javelins that had an incorrect tire pressure sticker in the glove box. The largest was for 14,720 cars for an incorrect nut installed in the brake pedal linkage.

Commended For Bravery

OTTAWA (CP) — A crane operator who helped rescue several workers in a construction mishap has been commended by city council for bravery. Ray Beaudoin was working on the 18th floor of a partially-completed apartment building when the adjoining parking garage collapsed. He used his crane to aid rescuers despite warnings that the apartment building might also collapse.

Cop's Life Is Dull

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon says the life of a real-life policeman is rather dull compared to such television heroes as Columbo or Ironside. Addressing a meeting of the Ottawa Richelieu Club he said: "In my 35 years of police work I've never had as much fun as Columbo has in each half-hour program."

Standard Sign Agreed

OTTAWA (CP)— Ontario and Quebec have agreed on a standardized sign to mark Heritage Highways in both provinces. The new sign will feature a wagon wheel on a brown background. The words Heritage Highway will appear in English on the top in Ontario and in French below. The order will be reversed in Quebec.

Golden Hawk Tournament

Belleville Match-up Expected

TRENTON — Belleville vs Belleville in the late stages of the Golden Hawk Midget Hockey Tournament here this week? It could happen, Friday.

The Belleville entries, the Yardmen minors and Lions majors, both on the tournament's B side having lost one game each, don't play again until Friday morning.

Friday at 8:30, Lions take on Oromocto, New Brunswick, while the Yardmen meet Kingston Majors at 9:45. The winners of those games are scheduled to book up at 3:30 p.m. It could prove very interesting from a Belleville standpoint.

Yardmen tasted defeat for the first time in tournament play Tuesday when they dropped a 5-2 decision to Trenton Quinte Ice Products. The Belleville minors had earlier posted wins over Greenwood, Nova Scotia (5-3) and Kingston Minors (6-1).

"We haven't had any luck against Trenton at season," observed Yardmen Manager Doug Preston.

"I don't think there's that much to choose between the two teams but we always seem to come out on the short end by a goal or two. We're still in it and our guys can do the job."

Trenton's defeat of the Yardmen was the host team's third straight win in as many tourney starts. Rob Oliver aided two goals for the winners with singles for Dean Rice, Ray Vajda and Bruce Leeman.

Yardmen, down 4-0 at one point, battled back with goals from Tony Meagher, Mike Hardy and Paul Weeks.

Lions had a great day Tuesday, rebounding from an opening game 4-3 loss Sunday to record three wins at the expense of Quinte, Lindsay and Alex Minors.

The Belleville squad followed up a 5-1 defeat of Cobourg by posting identical 8-2 wins in its other two starts.

Eight players shared the Bricks, Russ Lawrence, Roger Lindsay. The marksmen were Mike Crawford, Peter McBride, Rosf Lawrence, Roger Chapman, Gary Thompson, Paul Murray, Gord Male and Eric Powell.

Crawford was a two-goal man as Lions downed Ajax. Singles were chalked up by Powell, Thompson, Lawrence, Ross MacLeod, Rick Barbeau and Brian Hamilton.

Picton brought its record to 3-1 by topping Oromocto 3-2 in overtime but the highlight of the day's play was a Wexford - Kingston Minor contest which went into three overtime periods before Wexford's Doug England gave his club a 3-1 win.

Kingston Majors avenged the defeat suffered by their minor league rival when they edged Wexford 3-2 in overtime later in the day.

In Tuesday's other games, Alex Minors topped Greenwood 7-6; Markham shaded Colborne 5-4; Wexford blanked Alex' Majors 7-2; Alex Minors outscored Richvale 4-2 and Kingston Majors slipped by Markham 5-4.

Tournament action continues all this week. Making their first appearance in games today will be teams from Agincourt, Oshawa, Aurora, Bay Ridges, Brampton, Scotts Falls, Oak, Otawa, Nepean, Scarboro, North Bay, Gloucester and West Ferris.

For Young Bowlers, It's Fun

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

The object of bowling and the five-pin variety in particular has for years enjoyed a place at the top of the popularly poll for participants of all ages, in the Quinte area, and across the country.

Men's and women's leagues, mixed leagues 250 average and those in the 100s — the sport has a large following. And here in Belleville the future of the sport looks bright indeed when one takes a look at the program for youth bowlers from tykes (6-8 years) to juniors (teenagers).

Whether it be at the Brunswick Belleville Bowl at the Plaza, or the Bowl-O-Drome downtown, youngsters are taking to the game and proving they are capable of quality the pins for scores which would put older, more experienced bowlers to shame.

Tykes, bantams and juniors from Brunswick Belleville Bowl and Trenton's D-and-A Lanes have been engaging in a friendly series for the past month.

The Belleville Youngsters have taken the measure of their counterparts from Trenton but in that respect the important factor in the long run?

Isn't it more important that the youngsters are competing for fun?

Hockey could take a lesson here.

In the tyke division, the Brunswick bowl five-pinners had a over Trenton by a total pinfall of 8,495 to 7,702.

Tops in doubles were Belleville bowlers Lori Roberts with 278 and Barry Smith, 308.

Bantam play-saw Belleville far out in front in pinfall, 18,227 to 13,616. Trenton's Melody Newton had high single for girls, 342 and for the boys, it was Belleville's Billy Curry checking in with 338.

Top triples went to Belleville bowlers alKilby Curry, 554 and David Stinson, 581.

Results of those series are from hosts and home standings. The juniors have taken gas'ole, half their competition. Bowling at Brunswick Bowl on the weekend, the Belleville bowlers once again had things under control. They won the first segment handily.

Marion Clark of Belleville bowling at Brunswick Bowl (247) while team-mate Steven Lloyd led the boys with a solid 771 (283).

Trenton's best among the girls was Nancy Cruickshank with 925 (235). Dan Jesly led the boys with a 545 (208).

Defeated by U.S. Rink, Gervais 'Not Sharp'

BERN, Switzerland (CP) — "He was particularly sharp and I wasn't." That's how Hec Gervais explained his first loss in the world curling championships Tuesday—and it summed up things perfectly.

Gervais and his rink from St. Albert, Alta., lost 7-5 to Rod Somerville of Superior, Wisc., in the fourth round of the championship and it was simply a case of the Canadians making errors while the Americans curled almost flawlessly.

After the fourth round, Switzerland was in first place with a 4-0 won-lost record, then at 3-1 were Canada, the U.S., Sweden and Germany, Scotland was at 2-2, Italy 1-3 with Denmark, and France and Norway trailed at 0-4.

In the sixth round, Canada has an important game with Switzerland, Italy plays Sweden, Denmark plays Scotland, Norway plays Germany and the U.S. is against France.

Results of Tuesday's third round were: Canada 9 France 3, Switzerland 10 Italy 2, Sweden 10 Denmark 4, Germany 10 the U.S. 6, and Scotland 8 Norway 4.

In other fourth round games it was: Switzerland 6 Norway 2, Germany 7 France 3, Sweden 8 Scotland 3 and Denmark 8 Italy 2 in an extra end.

About 4,000 spectators showed up for the night round which pitted the U.S. against Canada.

Somerville and his—link of—lead Tom Locken, second Bob Bruun and third Bob Nichols made few mistakes and had the shots when they counted.

The Canadian crew of lead Darrel Sutton, second Warren Hansen and third Ron Anton were not at their best. An indication of their form came in the seventh end with Canada down 5-1 after Somerville stole two in the sixth.

Hoping to build a house, Gervais asked Gerhard for rocks at the front of the rings. Sutton begged them both.

But it was really the sixth end that finished the Canadian crew. Trailing 5-1 with the last rock, Gervais was heavy on his first shot, running through the house on an open takeout attempt. Somerville put his second rock in the house and this time, attempting a takeout-and-stay, Gervais just tap short.

That made the score 5-1 and Gervais was never really a threat after that.

"In the sixth I had a chance to pick up two, but I was heavy on my first rock and picked up an my second which gave him a steal of two," said Gervais.

"Instead of the game being tied we were down 5-1 and we had to start to gamble a bit. But, you know, that Somerville rink is tough and there was no way he was going to let us come back."

The Canadian skip said, however, that "if I had to lose I'm glad I lost to one of the stronger rinks."

The game against the Americans was the first tough one Gervais has had. He had defeated Norway 7-3, Denmark 11-2 and France 8-3 in games which produced little opposition.

Asked if this had taken the sharpness from his game, Gervais refused to affirm.

"I don't think so. We curled OK against the others, we just were not good enough tonight. But there's a long way to go."

For his part, Somerville said the afternoon loss to the German had helped.

"We knew we had to win this one or we might as well pack up and go home. We all curled better against Hec than we did against the German rink, but I...

Brother Act For Indians

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gaylord Perry is happy to have brother Jim as a fellow member of the Cleveland pitching staff, but he has no illusion of relinquishing his status as the Indians' top gun.

"Brother or no brother, Jim still have to fight me for No. 1," Gaylord said after the Indians acquired Jim from the Detroit Tigers Tuesday in a three-way deal that also involved New York Yankees.

JIM PERRY

The Tigers sent Jim Perry to Cleveland and pitcher Ed Farmer to New York. The Indians shipped outfielder Walt Williams and rookie pitcher Vic Albury to Detroit and Rich Sawyer to New York while the Yankees dealt catcher Jerry Moses to Detroit.

In other spring training news, Chicago Cubs traded catcher Ken Rudolph to San Francisco Giants for rookie pitcher Willie Prall and Cincinnati Reds promoted first baseman-outfielder Terry Crowley from the Texas Rangers.

The three-way trade put the Perry brothers—both former Cy Young Award winners—on the same team for the first time since Jim, 37, was a junior and Gaylord, 35, was a freshman in high school at Williamston, N.C.

"We won the Carolina championship then," Gaylord recalled. "Jim has always been dedicated. When a team gets in a slump it needs an experienced pitcher, and Jim's the guy. We need old guys like us to stabilize this staff."

For the trivia buffs, five more victories will make the Perrys the winningest brother combination in major league history. Christy and Henry Mathewson won 372 games in the early part of the century—373 for Christy and 8 for Henry.

Meanwhile, Dave Duncan, who will be catching the Perry boys, celebrated by driving in four runs with a homer and double in the Indians' 8-6 exhibition victory over Oakland Athletics. Cleveland pounded Rollie Fingers for six runs in the sixth inning and two in the seventh, offsetting Oakland homers by Vic Davalillo, Sal Bourque and Bert Campaneris.

Petes May Have A Virus

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Slumping hockey teams are often jokingly referred to as having the plague, but in the case of Peterborough Petes, it may not be a joke.

Officials of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A team recently discovered that the whole team may be suffering from a rare Russian virus ailment known as giardia.

Club doctors found that the virus was probably picked up in Leningrad where the team represented Canada in the world junior hockey tournament in early January.

Since returning from that tournament Jan. 6, the Petes slumped to fourth place in their league front first and most of the players have complained of tiredness, diarrhea, vomiting and weight loss.

The Petes players are to undergo tests today and Thursday and if they are found to be suffering from giardia, an appropriate medication should cure them within three to five days, said Dr. Richard Clark, one of the team physicians.

The team physicians learned of the symptoms and cure for the ailment from doctors in Minnesota who treated tourists returning from Leningrad with the same complaints.

"Something had to be wrong," said Ed Redmond, Petes president.

"The club died and was showing no life. We finally found out—luckily before the playoffs."

The Major Junior A regular season ends this weekend.

Unfortunately, one of the Petes players had his sickness diagnosed as giardia and treated earlier but didn't make the connection between his own sickness and that of the other players.

Trenton Rink In Second Place

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Alberta's Al Lealtch of Pincher Creek needed the most spectacular shot of the series to hang on to his lead Tuesday in the fourth round of the Legion national curling championships.

He had to come from behind in the early stages of the game against the Manitoba-Northwestern Ontario entry skipped by Zeke Nowsad of Flin Flon, Man. He came up in the sixth with a four ender and went ahead in the eighth but Manitoba tied it with two in the ninth.

Lealtch, however, scored one as he came through a port with his final rock to take the 8-7 victory.

If put Alberta ahead with a 4-1 record. Ontario was second at 3-1, while Nova Scotia, British Columbia, Newfoundland and Manitoba-Northwestern Ontario were tied for third at 2-2.

Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Quebec trailed at 1-3.

Ontario's Earl Jesse rink from Trenton downed New Dugre of New Brunswick 7-5 in the fourth round after dropping a 7-2 game to Alberta.

Bruce Cameron's Newfoundland rink from Gander pounded B.C.'s Earl Glover of South Vancouver 11-3.

B.C. started strongly in the first two draws but ran into trouble Tuesday. It lost 14-3 to Ron Brown's P.E.I. entry from Summerside in the third round.

P.E.I., however, ran into trouble in the fourth round, losing 12-5 to Jesse, who is the first win for Brock Stackhouse of Montreal.

Nova Scotia, skipped by Frank Howe of Sydney, defeated its game with Saskatchewan until the eighth when the Bob Cowley Townsend rink from Regina hit for three and added four more to win 9-5.

In third-round games, New Brunswick downed Quebec 8-3, Newfoundland beat Saskatchewan 10-5 and Manitoba defeated Nova Scotia 10-7.

Islanders Are Out But They Don't Quit

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

New York Islanders' hopes of making a playoff berth this season in the National Hockey League have long gone, but they made things painful Tuesday for one of the clubs still in contention.

The Islanders hammered St. Louis Blues 5-1 to snap New York's 16-game losing streak and dimmed St. Louis chances of catching Atlanta Flames, who occupy the fourth and final playoff position in the West Division. The Flames, idle Tuesday, remained five points ahead of the Blues.

In other games, Minnesota North Stars fanned their hopes for the post-season series by defeating California's Golden Seals 6-3 and Toronto Maple Leafs, fourth in the East, remained a respectable distance ahead of Buffalo Sabres by settling for a 1-1 tie with Los Angeles Kings.

Gerry Hart and Tom Miller scored their first goals of the season for the Islanders and rookie defenceman Denis Potvin had a goal and two assists.

"They aren't quitting," said Arbour after New York's triumph.

"He's hard for them to get up when there's no place to go this late in the season." Arbour said. "But they really hustled tonight and their attitude is great."

The Islanders' defence, led by the spirited play of Potvin, held the Blues to just two shots in the first period. Centre Garry Unger had them both.

Arbour had stressed hustle to his players throughout the long losing stretch. "I've been telling them all along, when you hustle the other team's defence is going to make mistakes."

Howatt sneaked behind the defence, took passes from Bob Nystrom, and came in alone and broke in and beat Wayne Stephenson for his 30th goal of the season.

"We've been playing good hockey for the last two weeks, but we just haven't been getting the breaks," said Peterborough nursing a broken bone in his left foot.

California 3 at Minnesota 6

Alain Langlais, playing in his seventh NHL season, scored twice to lead Minnesota past California. Dennis Hextall scored once and set up three goals, including Bill Goldsworthy's 52nd of the season. Hextall's three assists gave him 54 for the season, a club record. J.P. Parise and Buster Harvey were the other Minnesota marksmen. Walt McKechnie scored twice for the Seals, and Rick Gilbertson had the other goal.

Toronto 1 at Los Angeles 1

Frank St. Marseille's goal after 6 seconds of the third period lifted Los Angeles into their tie with Toronto. Denis Dupere's goal at 13:21 of the second period gave Toronto the lead. Los Angeles Kings, a temporary lead.

Rangers Clinch First Place

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The contention that any hockey team with first-place aspirations needs solid goaltending was confirmed Tuesday as Kitchener Rangers clinched top spot in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series behind the standout netminding of Don Edwards.

The Rangers defeated Ottawa 67s 5-3 despite being outshot 45-30. Edwards was peppered with 19 shots in the final period.

The Kitchener goaltending duo of Edwards and Bob Blanchet has been the mainstay in the Rangers's rise from fifth place since the start of the 1976 portion of the season.

They have combined for a 27-6 goals-against average over that stretch which has seen the Rangers win 24 and lose only three in 32 games. Their combined average for that span is a series-leading 3.22.

In other games, St. Catharines Black Hawks dumped Hamilton Red Wings 6-2, Oshawa Generals defeated Kingston Canadians 5-3 and Peterborough Petes downed London Knights 4-1.

Crusaders Snap Cougars' Streak

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Crusaders marched into a tie for second place in the East Division of the World Hockey Association Tuesday by defeating Chicago 7-4 to snap the Cougars' winning streak at six games.

In the only other game, Vancouver Blazers, out of playoff range, upset Minnesota Fighting Saints 5-4.

In tonight's action, New Jersey Knights travel to Los Angeles to play the Sharks; Edmonton Oilers oppose New England Whalers; and Houston Aeros play the Crusaders at Cleveland.

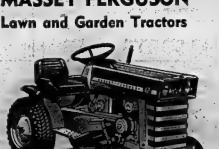
The Crusaders' triumph put them on even footing with Toronto Toros in the points column, but Cleveland has one game in hand. The result prevented the Cougars from moving into a tie for fourth place with Quebec Nordiques.

Ron Ward's second goal of the game late in the third period gave Cleveland its final 5-4 lead. Doug Brindley broke the Cougars' back with a shot into an empty Chicago net at 19:12 and he added another goal, ten seconds later.

Minnesota 4 at Vancouver 3

Despite the heroics of Mike Walton of the Saints, Vancouver emerged victorious before 9,575 fans through Danny Lawson's goal at 18:34 of the final period.

Minnesota trailed 4-2 entering the third period, but Walton narrowed the gap at 5:41 and 11:06 while his own team was shorthanded. Bob MacMillan tied the score at 16:35.



Walton's goal, his 52nd of the season, established two WHA records. It was the 17th consecutive game in which Walton has earned at least one point and it was his eighth shorthanded goal of the season.

Voyageurs Nip Braves

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — Goals by Larry Fullan and Jim Cahoon provided the scoring punch Nova Scotia Voyageurs needed to defeat Boston Braves 2-1 Tuesday night in the only American Hockey League game played.

The Voyageurs, took the lead for good at 3:19 of the second period and never lost it. Breaking in off right wing, Fullan moved into the slot and fired a five-foot wrist shot into the lower corner.

Nova Scotia increased its lead to 2-0 at 8:00 of the final period when centre Cahoon scored his 23rd goal of the season. Cahoon changed the course of a Sean Shanahan slap shot from the point into the net.

Boston narrowed the Voyageurs lead to one goal on Bob Gryp's goal. Following up shots by Pat Westrum and Ron Andesson, Gryp scored on a 10-foot wrist shot from the far side.

India and China Rivals in Nepal

BOMBAY (CP) — The mountain kingdom of Nepal in the Himalayas has become the scene of economic rivalry between Indian and China. Both have increased economic assistance to the backward nation.

While India is planning to double its aid to Nepal, China is sending a high-level delegation to Katmandu to discuss stepping up assistance.

Nepal's fifth five-year development plan is scheduled to begin next year. Indian aid for the fourth plan totalled more than $60 million, a sizable donation from a country by no means richer than its small but strategically placed northern neighbor.

Reports in the Indian press quote Nepalese officials as being hopeful that New Delhi will provide at least $70 million for the fifth plan.

The Katmandu correspondent of The Times of India News Service says Peking will make a "matching grant."

The plan will cost more than $1 billion. Nearly a third of this will have to come from foreign sources.

Katmandu reports say the United States, Canada, Soviet Union, Yugoslavia and West Germany are also taking "keen interest" in the plan which is expected to be a milestone in the ancient Hindu kingdom's progress towards modernization.

The Chinese have been anxious to ensure that Nepal does not become too dependent on India. Among other things, Chinese technicians have built some excellent mountain roads.

Houses Require Bylaw Change

Proposed construction of patio housing or attached single storey homes on 40-45 foot lots — would contravene existing Sidney Township bylaws, Bata Industries Ltd. planners were told Monday.

Minimum road frontage for rural homes in the municipality is 50 feet.

Although over 80 per cent of the proposed Bata 50-acre subdivision north of Batawa, meets the township's minimum, 25 of the 222 housing units are below the 50-foot requirement.

Patio housing as proposed by company planners, calls for L-spaced homes built around a private inner courtyard. Each lot would have 40-45 foot frontage a minimum 85 foot depth and 25-foot setback.

As the township bylaw now reads, such housing could not be constructed. The bylaw does not apply to attached housing.

In an effort to permit construction, Bata planners and township council will investigate the possibility of passing a site plan bylaw that would allow the 40-45 foot lots only in the proposed subdivision.

Toronto Pilot's Past Retrieved from Lake

TORONTO (CP) — Part of Don MacIntyre's past has been recovered from a lake in Norway.

A Mark 2 Halifax bomber, remarkably well preserved, was raised by a Royal Air Force crew and is to be replaced for permanent display at the RAF museum in London, England.

Mr. MacIntyre, now the 58-year-old manager of a Toronto factory producing television sets, was the pilot of the bomber, S for Sugar, when it crash-landed on the ice of the lake in 1942.

The four-engined aircraft had been riddled by anti-aircraft fire during a mission to drop special mines beside the German battleship Tirpitz, holed up in a Norwegian fiord.

Trailing smoke and flames, S for Sugar was piloted by Mr. MacIntyre over one lake and down on another.

As the Halifax started to break through the ice, he and the five other crew members—four Britons and another Canadian, Sgt. Pierre Mancherie—scrambled out.

One man with a twisted leg was left at a doctor's home while the five others walked for three days until they crossed the border into neutral Sweden where they were interned.

But Mr. MacIntyre was released shortly after and later worked in Britain in bomb development and as a chief flying instructor. For his wartime efforts he received the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Force Cross and the United States Distinguished Flying Cross.

Mr. MacIntyre was the only pilot of S for Sugar. He picked up the plane at the British plant where it was built, tested it and had flown it only 25 hours when they were shot down.

"I've just got to see her again," he said.

"You know," he added, "Churchill (then Britain's prime minister) signalled us before we took off . . . for the Tirpitz. He said: 'This will be something you'll tell your grandchildren about.'"

Said Mr. MacIntyre, father of a married daughter, 32, and a 19-year-old son: "The old man was right. When I have grandchildren, I shall."

Final Move

BOGEY HAY, England (CP) — After two years of play by post, a transatlantic chess game between local resident John Walker and convicted murderer Claude Bloodgood of Virginia State Penitentiary has ended abruptly. Bloodgood escaped custody while being taken to a chess tournament.

Wong Number

LONDON (CP) — A letter in The Times suggests one possible reason for the current decline in Sino-American harmony in Britain. The writer dialled the telephone number given by a reputable almanac for the National Industrial Relations Court. All he got was a Chinese take-away restaurant.

Educator of Year Balloting Begins

The only educator of the year who represents an elephant will soon hand over the Sir Mackenzie Bowell award to his 1974 successor.

Sgt. Bob Hall of Belleville Police Department has taken his Elmer the Safety Elephant campaign to elementary schools since 1963 and made such a hit that he was named educator of the year for 1973.

It was quite an accolade for a non-teacher who confesses he was terrified when he first went into schools to give his safety lessons.

His teaching techniques have changed, too, over the years.

"We used to show a film to a large group in the assembly and let the teacher follow up with the lesson," says Sgt. Hall. "The assembly situation was wrong — it was too cold. Now we teach a lesson in the classroom. It takes 10 times as long, but it's more effective."

Safety education begins in kindergarten, not with lessons, but with Sgt. Hall's brief presence to acquaint the pupils with a uniformed police officer.

"It's important to get right at them in kindergarten, because by five their ways are set and their destiny planned," says Sgt. Hall.

Bicycle safety is the most important program Sgt. Hall runs.

"It starts the kids out to be good car drivers," he says.

The bike safety message has to be put across before grade 6 because by that time the kids are too busy and too sophisticated to listen.

Sophistication is something Sgt. Hall has seen increasing among the younger set. No longer do grade 1 pupils believe Elmer, the elephant who never forgets his safety rules, is real. He has to be presented as a character in a story now.

Now that Sgt. Hall has become a familiar figure to pupils and parents, he is called upon to perform another service. Parents who catch their children in minor wrongdoing often call him in to put the fear of the law into little Johnny.

"It's something we never record," says Sgt. Hall. "Processing kids through the courts is the last thing we want."

Children also take their troubles to the officer and a lot of runaways are prevented that way.

"It's a service that should be enlarged," he says.

Sgt. Hall is the officer called in when a school gets a complaint about trespassing on property in the school neighborhood, or when youngsters snowball buses. A quiet talk with the culprits usually solves the problem.

Balloting to choose Sgt. Hall's successor is now under way. The results will be announced at the breakfast April 22 that ushers in Education Week in Hastings county.

Sgt. Hall takes special pleasure in seeing his name engraved on the Sir Mackenzie Bowell trophy.

"It honors all police officers working on safety throughout the province," he says.

Seminar March 27

On Wednesday March 27 at the Black Hawk Motor Inn, a business management seminar primarily for businessmen owning and operating smaller enterprises will be held.

The series of seminars is arranged by the Advisory Services Department of the Industrial Development Bank, in co-operation with The Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Some 25 to 30 businessmen are expected to attend the seminar.

The IDB, established in 1944 as a subsidiary of the Bank of Canada, makes loans to businesses of all types for a variety of purposes.

The Advisory Services Department of the bank is issuing a series of free pamphlets.

BEAVER handyman tip No. 24 Clip & Save in a series
Locating wall studs:
This is the 3rd tip in a series on panelling. Read them all!
1. On an already finished or plastered wall you must locate the studs in order to put up panelling.
2. You could probe with a nail or drill but there is an easier method.
3. Buy an inexpensive "stud finder" from your local Beaver store.
4. The distance from the centre of each stud to the next is 16".
5. After locating a stud, measure off and mark the remaining studs with a chalk line from top to bottom.
6. Make sure that the lines are straight by hanging a weighted string or plumb line from the edge of the ceiling to the floor.
7. Remember that studs are not always evenly spaced, so check at intervals with the stud finder to make sure you don't miss a stud as you panel.

Lasers Measure 'Tides' in Earth

LONDON (CP) — Laser equipment in a disused railway tunnel in Yorkshire is measuring "tides" in the earth's surface caused by gravitation of the sun and moon and the "ringing" of the earth after earthquakes.

The equipment, developed by the National Physics Laboratory (NPL) for the Cambridge University seismological observatory, measures the earth's dimensional changes in billionths of a yard.

Earth tides occur because of the world's rotation in the gravitational fields of the sun and moon. The moon causes the earth to bulge into an ellipsoid a little like a rugby football, with the longer axis along the line linking the centres of the two planets. So there are two maximum and two minimum tides a day.

But there are many more complicated gravitational influences that cause strain variations. Measurement of these is important in the study of the earth's structure. The "ringing" by earthquakes is a series of small free oscillations which can provide information which may be used in earthquake prediction. The NPL's laser system is expected to produce far better data than have been available.

A beam of light from a laser shines along a 450-foot pipe connected by a flexible joint to a reflector fixed in the rock of the tunnel. Strains in the rock cause changes in the length of the light path as the rock moves. So the reflected light goes out of phase on its return and the difference can be detected. To keep this interference signal at its maximum, th frequency of the laser light source is continually and automatically adjusted.

These changes in frequency are compared with the frequency of another laser specially developed by the NPL, which is constant to one part in 10^11 billion. The frequency differences between the two are therefore a record of the earth strain changes over the length of the tunnel.

Automatic telephone equipment has been installed because even the most enthusiastic scientist wants to avoid living in a tunnel with temperatures of 85 degrees and running water that ensures 100 per cent relative humidity.

Few Offer Help In Emergencies

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A 22-year-old nurse was struggling to save herself from drowning in bitterly-cold Lake Michigan into which she had fallen.

An old man saw her and asked a younger man walking along the lakefront to help.

The man kept on walking—and the nurse drowned.

To try to find out why somebody would refuse to help a fellow-human in distress, a test was conducted on 40 theological students at Princeton University.

The lesson of the test appeared to be that the fast pace of the modern world leaves little time for good deeds.

The students, some of whom had earlier been asked to prepare a short talk on the biblical parable of the Good Samaritan, were told to go to a lecture room.

As they walked across the college grounds they came upon a groaning and coughing "victim" slumped in a doorway. Twenty-four students kept on walking.

Some of them had been told they were late for their class, others that they were expected there immediately and the remainder that they could take their time.

Of the 16 students who stopped to help the "victim," most had been told they could take their time.

"A person not in a hurry may stop and offer help to a person in distress," the psychologists who conducted the test, concluded in a report.

"A person in a hurry is likely to keep going—even if he is hurrying to speak on the parable of the Good Samaritan."

Dr. Daniel Freedman, chairman of the department of psychiatry at the University of Chicago, said the fact that some people will walk by reflects the lack of community spirit in modern society.

"Cultural norms of how to be have have begun to break down," Dr. Freedman said.

"It often isn't just a question of the potential helper being afraid to take action, but also a fear that the agencies he might rely on, such as the police, might get him into trouble."

Dr. Freedman said one city Americans have taken toward overcoming the reticence to become involved is the consumer movement, in which people have complained about bad products and services they previously endured.

"I think Watergate also will help because people were offended by other people not playing by some decent game rules," he said.

Luxury Limousine Is Built to Order

LONDON (CP) — Two famous British automobile builders have pooled their talents to produce a luxury limousine that may be used for state occasions.

Called the Daimler Landaulette and described by its makers as a "majestic carriage", it is the most individual and expensive car ever offered by British Leyland Motor Corp., of which Jensen Plaa and Daimler are members.

Vanden Plas coachwork designers have used the Daimler eight-seater limousine to create a new car with a fixed roof for front occupants and a folding rear-roof section. Inside, thick carpets and polished figured walnut trim create a regal atmosphere.

Seats can be upholstered in finest West of England cloth or leather. Air conditioning, electrically operated windows and a driver-passenger compartment glass are available.

Although the Landaulette has a stately appearance, a 4.2 litre six-cylinder Jaguar XK engine gives it an impressive performance. Transmission is fully automatic. Power-assisted steering, all-round independent suspension, disc brakes and radial-ply tyres are all standard.

The Landaulette will only be made to order. The price will vary with the specification but will be at least $33,000.

The first Landaulette has already been delivered to the West Indies and a second car is being built for use in Africa.

BIRTHS

CLARKE — To Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sweet are happy to announce the safe arrival of their second daughter Jennifer Christa on March 18th, 1974 at 8:30 p.m. A sister for Tracy. Proud parents are Ted and Jacquie.

HAWLEY — Mervin and Ruth Hawley are happy to announce the arrival of their first child, Richard on March 18th, in Kingston General Hospital. Thanks for Doctor and Staff.

IN MEMORIAM

WRIGHT — In loving memory of a dear father, Murray Wright, who passed away March 20, 1966.
Without farewell he left us,
With only memories to remain,
He left behind a heart that will never be free from pain.
Loving memories never fail.
—Always remembered by daughter and son Connie and Bob.

MUIR — In loving memory of my dear grandmother, Muriel Ann Muir, who passed away May 21, 1970.
I look back the years when I speak your name,
But the ache in my heart remains the same.
No one knows the grief I bear,
For you were gone and you're not there.
—So dearly missed, your grandson Randy.

MUIR — In loving memory of Mom and Dad, who are together again in everlasting peace. Harold, who passed away March 20, 1971 and Alice passed away May 31, 1972.
Mom and Dad, you have left us to go to a better place I know
But we miss you so
And you'll always be in our hearts we can't let you go
But as time goes on it lessens and softens the pain of separation
We know at last you are in God's control.
Not a day passes that we do not think of you.
Sadly missed, kindness and love will never be forgotten.
As in life with your always you always understood.
To death the bond between us will not be broken
We'll meet again in Heaven once more and be with God's control forever.
—Till we meet again, Nancy, Elsie and Carol.

CARD OF THANKS

CONVENIENT SHOPPING

The convenience of having ample parking space and many shops under the same roof has led to a change in shopping habits among Canadians, many of whom forgo the shopping mall concept.

Reeve: Road Funds too Thin

PICTON — Sophiasburgh reeve George Foster predicts that county council's program for 1974 road construction is "screwed to the limit" and does not leave all the work budgeted will be completed.

Reeve Foster made his observations after Ameliasburgh Reeve Russell Thompson objected to a budget figure of $45,000 for improvements to the Allisonville Bridge. He said that he felt the bridge was "good and sound" and moved that money allotted for reconstruction be spent on roads in Ameliasburgh.

Reeve Foster refused to support the motion, later defeated in council. He noted he had inspected earlier that nothing had been placed in the budget for Ameliasburgh Reeve Russell Thompson said then was budgeted to regrade from County Road 18 to the village of Ameliasburgh.

"I have to support the report," said Reeve Foster.

Reeve Thompson pointed out that a road running from the third concession of Ameliasburgh to Highway 33 needs improvements and the villages of Ameliasburgh requires curbs and gutters and a resurfaced road.

He said he felt reconstruction of Allisonville Bridge should be "put ahead" in the 1974 construction program in favor of improvement to Ameliasburgh roads.

South Marysburgh reeve, Clifford Walker remarked that it had been agreed that road projects already underway should be completed. He mentioned county roads 8, 9 and 11.

Reeve Walker also observed that the town of Picton has requested improvements to the connecting links of Picton and Johnston Streets. He said that although the town pays a portion of the county's road budget no consideration has been given to its request.

"We have too much work for the amount of money we have. It has to be worked around this," said reeve Walker.

Chairman of the roads committee Allan Pettingill commented that funds are lacking for improvement to the two streets.

"If would take at least $200,000 for County Road 8," agreed reeve Foster. "Definitely, we couldn't start anything this year."

Athol reeve Keith Perry surmised that higher taxes could be the answer to the lack of funds for road construction.

"We may have to spend more of the taxpayer's money to keep these roads up," he said.

He added that the county's share is 1.9 mills and construction that perhaps three or four mills should be considered. He said 1974 people do not seem as worried about taxes as they did 10 years ago.

"People want services and if they do, they will have to pay for them," he said.

Council's budget for road construction and maintenance activities for 1974 totals $851,000. Road allotment from the ministry of transportation and communications is $412,000 and county contribution to roads based on 1.9 mills is $230,000.

Top Salvationist Band Will Play in Picton

PICTON — The Canadian Staff Band of the Salvation Army will visit Picton on May 4-5, sponsored by Picton Kiwanis Club.

Bandsmen will parade through Main Street from the County Buildings to the Picton Salvation Army citadel on their arrival. Later they will attend a dinner and civic reception in conjunction with Kiwanis Ladies' Night.

Later the band will present a concert at Picton United Church.

May 5 the band will attend a brief service at Picton Edward County Memorial Hospital and will assemble for a parade to the United Church for a combined Salvation Army and United Church service at 11 a.m.

That afternoon bandsmen will visit a county nursing home and take a sightseeing tour. Later, a festival luncheon will be served at the Salvation Army citadel. An open air service will follow.

In the evening an ecumenical service will be held at 7 p.m. at the United Church.

Tickets for the two day event are available from secretary Picton Lions Club. It is expected that tickets also will be sold in Belleville later.

Councils Must Help Arenas Says Warden

PICTON — Prince Edward warden Keith MacDonald says that county councils, in future, must be prepared to budget funds for community arenas.

He made his observation after North Marysburgh deputy reeve Allan Head questioned a proposed $14,500 council grant to Prince Edward Centre Commission. She said last year's grant was only $10,000 and asked if the $4,500 increase seemed prudent in a year of heavy expenses.

Robert Boyce, finance chairman, said expensive repairs are necessary at the arena this year. The ceiling in the auditorium must be replaced and the board and puck cushions renewed. Cost is estimated at more than $19,000.

Geordey Foster, Sophiasburgh reeve said the arena's revenue is "considerably less" this year because of the amount of ice time given to Wellington hockey players for $11 an hour. He said that this concession of prime time ice set $16 an hour, ice time was offered to Wellington hockey teams after the village arena was destroyed by fire last December.

There also was no federal LIP grant to the arena this year. In 1973 a LIP program totalled approximately $17,000.

Drouty-reeve Head commented "I only wish I was thinking of was the taxpayer at the bottom of the ladder."

Reeve Boyce said: "I sympathize with your feelings but we knew this had to be done. We want to, Wellington. It is unfortunate but it is the situation. We just cannot step aside and let Picton arena deteriorate to that extent."

Council minutes of the finance and personnel committee establish a motion to make $ 14,500 grant to the arena commission.

Reeve Foster said that it was his understanding that the town of Picton plans to increase its grant to the arena by 25 per cent this year. In past years the town has approved a grant of $1,000.

Warden MacDonald observed that there should be "similar grants" to both Picton and Wellington District arenas.

Things to Do For Holidayers

You say the kids are home for a week's holidays and you're at wits' end trying to figure out what to do with them.

Is that what's bothering you, mother? Is that what's making you tear your hair? Well, take heart, here's a few things they can keep busy until they return to school next week.

All this week until Friday, the Kinsmen Club of Belleville is providing free skating for school age children at Memorial Arena. Ice time starts at 1:30 p.m. and runs until 3:30 p.m.

And for the little ones, the public library is holding a free puppet show and story hour on Thursday. The puppet show, Peter Rabbit will be presented at the library's east branch on Victoria and Farley Streets at 10:30 a.m.

Then at 2 p.m. at the main library on Pinnacle Street, the puppet show and story telling will continue.

And although the film American Graffiti doesn't need any more publicity than it's success has already given it, Belleville's school students might want to see how life was in the early 60s.

Just follow the lineups at the Quinte Mall Cinema and show time at 7 and 9 p.m.

For the younger crowd, the Walt Disney film That Darn Cat is playing 2 p.m. matinees until Saturday at the Belle Theatre.

And for those who want to get in the swim of things, the Quinte Kiwanis Club is having public swims at their pool at the Black Hawk Motor Inn.

The one remaining public swim this week is Thursday from 1 to 4 p.m. The regular swims are Wednesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 9 p.m. and on Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m.

So, there you go mother, everything from skating to swimming to taking in a movie or just about to keep that little one amused for the rest of this week.

H. J. Tribute Approved

PICTON — Prince Edward County council has received official approval of its plan to name the new county home for the aged "The H. J. McFarland Memorial Home."

G. W. Hammond, Chief, Program Support Administration, in a letter to council this week sanctioned the move.

"It is a fine tribute to a man who has done so much for Prince Edward," he wrote.

Last month council unanimously voted to name the home in memory of Picton's late mayor in recognition of his interest in senior citizens.

Rents Up

VICTORIA (CP) Rents for recreational land leased from the B.C. government have increased two, three or more times in this year's lease renewals because of vast increases in land values, says a lands department spokesman. "A lot of people are really getting hit this year," he said. "Their rents haven't been changed for the past five years and in that time the value of land, especially waterfront land, has just gone sky-high."

Russians Friendly

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Life for the average Russian centres on acquiring more material goods and following hockey, says a University of Lethbridge history professor.

Ted Orchard returned from his third visit to Russia last December after a semester of studying 17th-century Russian history with the help of an exchange program organized through the Canada Council.

He found the people of Moscow friendly and good-natured.

"It seems that the people are having their first taste of affluence," Mr. Clifford said in an interview on comparing the 1974 Russian lifestyle to that of 1970 and 1965.

"They're dressing much better. The new synthetic fibres seem readily available and the clothes are quite stylish.

"I think more people are acquiring material goods such as televisions and appliances. Russia had a good harvest last fall. Food was quite plentiful and cheap when I was there.

"Costs for entertainment and culture are also quite reasonable.

"Since they can't invest their money and aren't able to buy much property, acquiring material goods is about the only way Russians can spend money."

Mr. Orchard said Russian bureaucracy is not so bad, especially since personal contact is made with the people controlling access to the material he wanted to study.

He said he felt no hostility in Moscow and found no difficulty talking to the citizens once he got his Russian sharpened up.

The Russians are genial people, he said, once one establishes personal contact and breaks down the reserve.

"Hockey is the international language and when I said I was a Canadian, the Russians responded, 'Ah yes, Phil Esposito.'"

"He was their favorite member of our national team, probably because he was rowdy and rambunctious."

But affluence has brought its problems too.

"They're having the same teen-age problems we are. Although drugs are harshly discouraged, one does see a good many youths inebriated in public."

Mr. Orchard said the Russians have embarked on an anti-drinking campaign, with propaganda pointing out the evils of excessive drink, higher prices for Vodka, limited hours for buying liquor and dry-out programs that seek to shame the imbiber into more moderate use of alcohol.

Some Provinces Unhappy About Equalization Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — Some provincial finance ministers were "not particularly entranced" with the exclusion of oil export tax revenues from calculation of equalization payments to the seven less-wealthy provinces, Finance Minister John Turner said Tuesday.

Replying to a Commons question by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, he said the matter was the subject of a day-long discussion at the finance ministers' meeting in late January.

He did not identify which provincial ministers opposed to the decision to exclude petroleum export money from calculation of the payments which go to all provinces except Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

The provincial ministers were told that, under the present law the revenues are not included for the calculation of payments, Mr. Turner said.

Equalization payments totalled $1.4 billion in 1971.

Oil tax revenue is shared equally by Ottawa and the oil-producing provinces, primarily Alberta. Taking the money into account would raise payments to the less wealthy provinces.

Mr. Turner said earlier that if the revenue were included in the calculations, Ontario eventually would qualify for equalization payments, placing what he called an intolerable burden on the federal treasury.

He estimated the cost from Oct. 1, when the last tariff effect, to Jan. 31 at $38 million.

Change in Canada Pensions Could Cover Housewives

TORONTO (CP) — A system has been worked out that would enable housewives to join the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) as contributors, says Jane Menzies, vice-president of the National Advisory Council on the Status of Women.

Mrs. Menzies said Tuesday in a telephone interview from her Winnipeg home that the plan was drawn up by a subcommittee to the advisory council to the CPP. The plan will be submitted in May to the council in Ottawa, she said.

The plan proposes that where only one spouse works, 50 per cent of the contributions of that spouse will go towards the other's pension, Mrs. Menzies said.

Where both are working, 50 per cent of the contributions of each will go toward the pension of the other, she said. Consequently, when the wife or husband withdraws from the labor market, the payments of the spouse toward the other will continue.

"It appeals to me," she said. "It means a woman will be a contributor throughout her life, and if the marriage breaks up she still has protection."

Members of the sub-committee are D. G. M. Cone, a Waterloo, Ont., lawyer; Valerie Knowles, a Windsor, Ont., insurance salesman; and J. T. Bickerdike, a Toronto actuary.

Insurance Payments Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance payments totalled $365 million in January, one per cent more than January, 1972, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

The average weekly benefit increased four per cent to $73.80 and was nine per cent higher than a year earlier, the report said.

MPs Sound Like Housewives When Talking of Food Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Consider these four comments on the cost of living:

"I wouldn't want to raise another family under the conditions of today."

"I've never seen in the supermarket whether I'll have enough to pay the cashier."

"I must admit that we wince a bit when the kids tack into a third helping of roast beef."

"At the end of the month, I have nothing left over."

Average consumers scraping by on minimum wages? No. The comments are those of four MPs, one from each of the parties represented in the Commons, and all earning at least $18,000 a year with another $6,000 in tax-free expenses. Among them they have a total of 37 children.

Liberal Joe Guay from the Winnipeg-area riding of St. Boniface is the father of seven. Only two children are at home, but he says it's "much tougher to raise a family now than it was eight or 10 years ago."

Newfoundland Conservative James McGrath, (St. John's East) says he now takes $20 with him on his six or seven trips a month to the supermarket, compared with $30 a year ago. But he says he always is left wondering whether he'll have enough to pay the bill when he shops for his family of "nine if you include the dog."

New Democrat food critic Terry Grier (Toronto-Lakeshore) says his family of five has cut back on "some quality food purchases." While he, like Mr. McGrath, says he probably is in better shape than a lot of consumers, he admits that his family has had to make some sacrifices.

Adrien Lambert (SC—Bellechasse), a farmer and father of 11, says the nine members of his family still at home go through $100 worth of groceries every week, up from $125 a week a year ago.

"To be honest, my salary is enough to provide a reasonable life with my family," Mr. Lambert says. "But there is never anything left over."

The four MPs represent the major regions—the Atlantic, Quebec, Ontario and the West. All say they have felt the 17-per-cent rise in living costs during the last year.

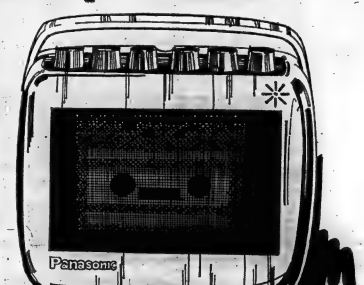
Mr. Guay argues that Canadian living conditions remain "better than those anywhere else in the world," but admits that $10 buys only half a bag of groceries in Winnipeg.

Mr. McGrath, his party's food critic, says his monthly grocery bill has risen by $300 during the last year.

After deductions, he says, he takes home $1,000 a month.

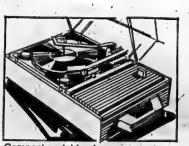
"And there's never enough—I don't know how we do it."

Mr. Grier, who spends about $30 a week on food, household items, says his family has been affected in little ways.



Mr. Lambert says he still a matter of corporate profit.

"Business and the capitalist farmers are exploited."



It was time to give the food prices review board enough power to keep prices down.

"All the board does now is watch prices rise, and the consumer gets no good from it at all."

O. M. L. Questions And Answers

QUESTION: We expect to spend a week or so in Vancouver later this spring. Can you give us any details about the city?

ANSWER: Vancouver's climate is quite mild, with no seasonal extremes. From November through March, temperatures generally range between a low of 36 and a high of 50 degrees; seldom does the thermometer fall below freezing, and rarely does it snow. Temperatures range from the mid-60's to the high 70's in April, May and October, and climb in the low 70's during the summer months. Rainfall: Moral all year, is especially heavy during the winter.

The major east-west routes to Vancouver are the Trans-Canada Highway (Canada 401) and Highways 1 and 7. To reach the downtown area, motorists on the Trans-Canada Highway should use the First Avenue exit or continue to Hastings Street and travel west, since the highway veers north and crosses the harbor into suburban North Vancouver.

All streets and avenues in downtown Vancouver are named; some downtown streets are one-way. Outside the business section, all avenues are numbered and run east and west, beginning with First Avenue just south of the business district. Streets are named and run north and south. Addresses begin at Ontario-Carroll Streets for east-west numbering and at Powell-Dundas Streets for north-south numbering. The downtown peninsula is connected to western Vancouver by Burrard and Granville Bridges, to the districts of North Vancouver and West Vancouver by the Lions Gate Bridge.

On-street parking is controlled by meter and is restricted on many streets during rush hours. Violators' cars will be towed away. Off-street parking in lots and garages ranges from 25 cents per hour to $2 per day. School zone parking between the hours of 8 and 5 on any school day is prohibited unless otherwise posted.

Vancouver can be a child's delight with its busy harbor and miles of parkland. Enthusiastic young sailors may enjoy a trip to the waterfront, where ships dock for loading and unloading, and where chugging tugs ply. They might also like a trip to Horseshoe Bay at dusk.

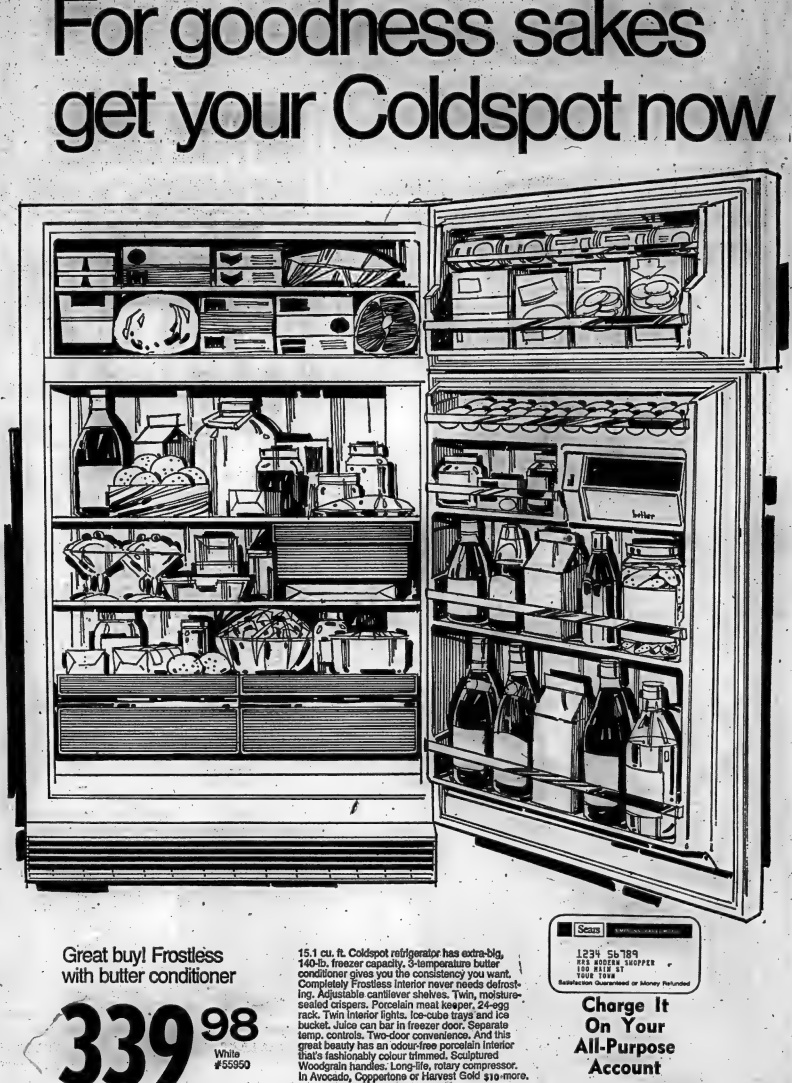
For a thrilling ride in North Vancouver, take the children on the Grouse Mountain tramway, which ascends 3,700 feet in less than five minutes. For interesting bridges you can visit Capilano Park, where a gently swinging footbridge spans a beautiful gorge, or Lynn Canyon Park, where a swaying suspension bridge crosses a waterfall.

Stanley Park can provide a full day's entertainment. Here youngsters can see polar bears dive for their dinners, watch penguins strut and preen themselves, see seals slither about their pool or walk through a forest of totem poles. (Note: The Children's Zoo is open in summer only). Budding engineers can ride through the park on a miniature steam railway engine. Stanley Park also offers canoeing, lawn bowling, cricket, swimming and bicycling over miles of quiet trails.

Downtown Vancouver has a number of department stores and many specialty shops including boutiques, china stores, import shops featuring oriental and Scottish products, tobacconists, leather goods stores and men's and women's specialty shops.

Picturesque Robson St. has little art galleries, record shops, handicraft shops and foreign grocery and pastry stores.

As the nine o'clock cannon booms out across the harbor, Vancouver comes to life in its after-dark finery. The city is liberally sprinkled with pleasant places to spend an evening, from sophisticated, intimate lounges to loud, crowded discotheques.



If there's anything a Vancouverite enjoys more than viewing his beautiful city at street level, it's viewing it from above. Consequently the lounges capping skyscrapers are popular spots. The Panorama Roof at the Vancouver Hotel, Top of the Towers, crowning the Georgian Towers, top of the Blue Horizon and the Tree House at the top of Denmon Place offer vistas of the city. The Grouse Nest in the Grouse Mountain Chalet, perched 3,700 feet above the city, has dining and dancing with a fantastic panorama.

If you love atmosphere, you can try one of the German, Italian, Hungarian or other spots with an ethnic flavor. The Rock, in the Grouse Mountain Chalet, and the Old Bavarian Rathskeller feature lusty German entertainment and beer. For an evening in a South Sea Atmosphere, there is Trader Vic's.

Princess Anne Unharmed

Police Seek Backer Of Foiled Kidnaper

LONDON (CP) — Police hunted today for associates of a man accused of an armed ambush against Princess Anne, and a court was told "it is a matter of state security."

Charged with the Wednesday night attack was Ian Ball, a 26-year-old unemployed Londoner who made a two-minute appearance at Bow Street magistrate's court in central London.

Pale-faced and with a trim beard, Ball stared firmly ahead from the dock where he stood handcuffed to two policemen.

The charge against him was attempted murder of Princess Anne's police bodyguard, Inspector James Beaton, who fell with three bullets in him during the attack on the royal limousine near Buckingham Palace.

Magistrate Kenneth Barraclough ordered Ball held in custody for another preliminary hearing on March 28.

A heavy police guard was thrown round the court as Ball was brought up in a prison van convoy with flashing blue lights.

The Princess and Capt. Mark Phillips, escaped unhurt, but unharmed. The attacker hemmed in their limousine with his small white sedan and then jumped out, gunfire blazing.

The royal chauffeur, a passerby and a policeman also fell wounded before the attacker was overpowered.

At Bow Street, custody was requested by detective Chief Superintendent Roy Ranson. He said:

"The reasons are that this man has a large sum of money. We wish to know the source of this money. We are endeavoring to trace his associates and it is imperative that full inquiries be made about this to assist us in these inquiries."

Ranson unsuccessfully applied for Ball to be kept in police custody rather than in an ordinary prison to afford ready access to the prisoner.

Magistrate Barraclough commented: "It is very unusual."

Superintendent Ranson replied: "Yes, sir, it is a matter of state security, which I cannot enlarge on."

Ball, tall and slender in a grey pin-striped suit, shrugged and said "no" when asked if he objected to police looking at his bank account. His only other remark was to apply for legal aid.

All spectators and journalists were searched before entering court.

The magistrate ruled that reporting restrictions should not be lifted during the preliminary hearing. This meant that nothing but the bare details of the charge could be published in Britain until either case went to trial or was dismissed. Even Superintendent Ranson's brief testimony was not subject to reporting by the British press.

—Anne and her husband seemed by this morning to have recovered from the shock. Capt. Phillips reported for duty as usual at Sandhurst Military Academy where he is an instructor. During the morning he took cadets to the rifle range for shooting practice.

The princess arranged to go riding in the ground of the academy.

The four men injured during the gun battle were all receiving in satisfactory condition. They were Jim Beaton, chief; four Alex Callender, journalist Brian McConnell who was passing by and intervened, and policeman Michael Hills who was on traffic duty near the scene.

As police inquiries proceeded, the motive behind the one-man attack remained obscure.

Found in the gunman's white sedan was a long letter addressed to the Queen. Unconfirmed press reports said the OTTAWA (CP) — Dairy prices should once again be determined by the market, rather than by quotas and other regulations that hold down production, a report prepared for the food prices review board recommends. McGill University professors Doug MacFarlane and L. W. Fischer say short-term subsidies should remain on fluid milk and skim milk powder in order to allow consumers access to the nutritional products. But dairy production generally should again be determined by marked prices rather than artificial supports by governments and marketing agencies.

Unofficial reports put the toll much higher.

Attack Made Near Palace

LONDON (CP) — A bizarre attempt to kidnap Princess Anne Wednesday night was followed by a shootout in which bullets whipped past the heads of the Queen's 23-year-old daughter and the man she married 18 weeks ago.

The princess, her husband and a lady-in-waiting huddled in the royal limousine during the shootout in the heart of London and escaped injury.

The spectacular attack occurred as the couple drove along the Mall, leading to Buckingham Palace, where 24 hours ago to the day Anne and Captain Mark Phillips had gasped before cheering crowds in a glass coach after their wedding in Westminster Abbey.

Police gave this account of the attack on the princess:

The Queen's only daughter and the army officer she married last November were returning from a showing of a documentary film about Pat Nixon when a white Ford forced the limousine to a stop on the ceremonial avenue leading to the palace.

A man got out of the car and began shooting, hitting Alex Callender, the royal chauffeur, and Inp. Beaton and shattering the front and rear windows of the limousine. Beaton tried to fire back, but his gun jammed.

The man also shot Constable Michael Hills, on foot patrol nearby, and Journalist Brian McConnell when they tried to intervene. His gun misfired leaving on his walkie-talkie before he collapsed.

Anne, her lady-in-waiting, Rowena Brassey, and Capt. Phillips stayed in the back of the limousine until more police arrived to rescue them. One eyewitness said the gunman shook the door in a vain attempt to get in.

"They were very brave," said eyewitness Sandy Scott. "Mark had his arm around her in a very protective sort of way."

Princess Anne and Mark were on their own in the back of the car, huddled together," she said. "Captain Phillips appeared to be shielding Anne with his body."

Miss Scott said Princess Anne's lady-in-waiting told her to "get down—there's a maniac."

Teachers' War Chest To Back PCs' Foes

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario secondary school teachers set up a "war chest" Wednesday to supply campaign funds to opponents of the Davis government in the next provincial election.

Delegates to the Ontario Secondary Schools Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) authorized a non-profit corporation to distribute voluntary contributions from its 34,000 members to candidates in provincial ridings.

In the meantime, the federation decided to avoid immediate confrontation with the government over future legislation which would remove their right to strike.

Delegates voted by a two-thirds majority to endorse recent OSSTF executive action which would seek amendments to legislation rather than rejecting it in total.

Only 80 delegates, largely from Metropolitan Toronto, Peel County and Windsor supported a motion urging rejection of the legislation "or similar legislation completely and unconditionally."

Jim Forster, newly-elected OSSTF president, said if an interview he believes seeking amendments is a "more politically feasible route."

That action should show the public that teachers are prepared to "exhaust every route" in their battle against government-imposed compulsory arbitration, he said.

Mr. Forster told delegates the campaign financing corporation would funnel contributions through teacher groups in each riding. He later said funds would be directed to candidates who appear to have the best chance of defeating Progressive Conservative party incumbents.

A former New Democratic Party candidate in Saskatchewan's Mackenzie riding in the 1965 federal election, Mr. Forster earlier told reporters that establishing the corporation was the major step he hoped the convention would take.

Another key resolution calling for a $50,000 study of secondary schools in the province through community forums also was approved Wednesday.

Earlier Wednesday, the federation agreed to set up its own pension fund as a supplement to a provincially-operated plan.

Separate School Group Is Undecided

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of Ontario Catholic separate school teachers ended their three-day annual meeting Wednesday without making a firm decision on taking political action or raising campaign funds.

Leo Normandeau, an Essex County teacher-principal elected president of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association (OECTA), said the teachers want to give the government "one last chance."

The 400 delegates tabled a motion of political involvement and, referred to the executive committee a motion for a political "war chest" by voluntary donations.

Application Filed For Gas Pipeline

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian Arctic Gas Ltd., a consortium of 27 oil and gas companies, filed an application today to build a natural gas pipeline which they hope will move Arctic gas south by 1978.

Officials of the company were to meet with Jean Chretien, minister for Indian affairs and northern development, for talks on the application.

Mr. Chretien's department and the National Energy Board (NEB) are to hold hearings on the project.

The consortium also is seeking approval from the United States agencies to build the line, which would be a central element in a North American gas pipeline grid.

They estimate cost at $5.7 billion but evidence supporting their cost estimate is among several key exhibits not yet released. Exhibits dealing with the economic issues, markets and reserves are among those to be filed at a later date.

The NEB has a 600-inch stack of documents filed with the application over many of the social and environmental issues connected with construction of the proposed 2,825 miles of 48-inch, 42-inch and 30-inch line. Of the total, 2,200 miles would be in Canada.

It would run through the Mackenzie River Valley in Caroline, Alta., from where branches would go to Kingsgate, B.C., and Monchy, Sask. The lines to border points would connect with U.S. systems and the Caroline-Monchy line would connect with the Trans-Canada system at the Alberta-Saskatchewan border.

The proposed construction program—based on regulatory approval being granted by next year—calls for gas from the Northwest Territories to begin flowing south by 1978 and the gas from Prudhoe Bay fields in Alaska to begin delivery the following year.

The Arctic Gas proposal is a competitor to a proposal by El Paso Natural Gas Co. to build a Trans-Alaska line. This would connect to a plant on Alaska's Pacific Coast where gas would be liquified for tanker shipment to California.

The U.S. portion of the Arctic Gas proposal would involve construction of pipelines from Monchy to the Midwest and East Coast, from Kingsgate to southern California, and expansion of existing lines from Coleman, Alta., to northern California.

The consortium has spent more than five years and $76 million studying the project and company officials say studies are continuing.

Premiers And PM To Confer

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will resume energy discussions with the 10 provincial premiers during a private meeting here next week, the prime minister's office confirmed Wednesday.

Plans for the meeting are still being made, a spokesman for Mr. Trudeau said. The prime minister had been contacting the various premiers to advise them of the meeting, but several premiers had not yet replied.

Purpose of the conference is to discuss oil pricing policy after April 1, when a current freeze on western oil is to be lifted.

Denturist Control Law May Change

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. R. L. Moran, president of the Ontario Dental Association, said Wednesday a "rumor mill" indicates the province may be changing its mind on the supervision of denturists.

Dr. Moran said in an interview that Ontario's Health Minister Frank Miller "posed the question" last week of how the dental association would react to changes in denturist legislation.

The present law requires denturists and dental technicians to operate under the supervision of a dentist—a requirement many denturists have opposed.

"The rumor mill is saying that the government may be changing its mind on the issue of supervision for the denturists," Dr. Moran said.

Mr. Miller is on vacation in Quebec this week and the dental association will not take a position until the minister makes a statement, he added.

Mr. Miller is expected to consult next week with the executive of the Denturists Society of Ontario.

House Inquiry May Get Jury Report Today

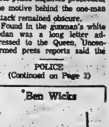
WASHINGTON (AP) — The grand jury report on President Nixon's role in Watergate goes to the House of Representatives impeachment inquiry today unless the United States Court of Appeals intervenes.

The appeals court agreed on hear arguments today from Watergate defence lawyers who hope to reverse Judge John Sirica's order sending the report to the House.

In scheduling arguments for 9:30 a.m. EST, the appeals court said it will consider requests for an additional delay in transmitting the report and also hear arguments on the legal issues.

John Wilson and Frank Strickler, lawyers for former presidential aide H. R. Haldeman, and John Bray, lawyer for Gordon Strachan, another former White House aide, asked the appeals court to order Sirica not to send the grand jury report to the House Judiciary committee.

Special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski opposed the request.



Sirica refused Wednesday to delay sending the report to the House until the appeals court had ruled. He did postpone action until 4 p.m. today to give the defendants a chance to appeal.

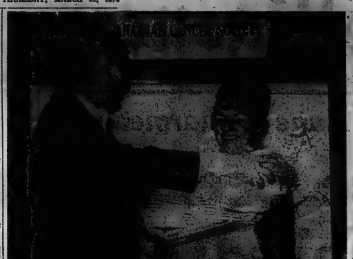
letter demanded a ransom of $2.5 million.

Police official said it was believed 11 shots were fired by the assailant. Experts were studying two revolvers found at the scene. They said five shots had been fired from one and six from the other. Authorities said earlier only six shots were fired.

Feagd in the white Ford that Bail rented for the evening in addition to the typewritten ransom demand addressed to the Queen were three pairs of handcuffs, a driver's licence and envelopes addressed to two companies.



Officials declined to disclose any further details of the discoveries.

The boldness of the attack jolted authorities who have not had to cope with a serious assault on royalty in Britain for nearly 40 years.

There was immediate speculation that the comparatively free-and-easy security arrangements surrounding the Royal Family might have to be tightened.

Ashe's only guard at the time was Insp. Beaton, sitting in the car that was taking her and her husband to Buckingham Palace. He drew a pistol and fired at the attacker but fell wounded before he was able to make an arrest.

Arming of police is still a rarity in Britain but there was speculation that guns may in future have to be more freely distributed.

Lending a Hand

The Belleville Branch of the Canadian Cancer Society is kicking off its campaign this year in a big way. This week, the industrial campaign was begun with this year's chairman of the cancer campaign, Brian Knudsen, assisting the city's cancer society president, Shirley Woodcox in preparing the mailing material. Altogether about 200 envelopes seeking the support of small businesses in the city will go out before April 1.

Campaign Goal $27,500

The goal for this year's cancer campaign has been set at $27,500. The campaign starts April 1.

Brian Knudsen, this year's campaign chairman, said, "Although 95 per cent of the society's work is carried out by volunteers, funds are required to pay the salaries of permanent employees and to provide necessary business equipment. These administrative costs take six cents from the dollar.

"Programs in research, education and service account for 80 cents of each dollar spent annually by the Canadian Cancer Society," said Mr. Knudson.

"Money donted by the public makes possible the purchase of sophisticated scientific equipment, construction of new buildings to house research centre, the payment of salaries to full-time scientists, laboratory technicians and assistants," added Mr. Knudsen.

He pointed out that public and professional education gets 13 cents out of each dollar spent by the Society. Service to cancer patients costs 11 cents and this covers cancer dressings, drugs and transportation of cancer patients to treatment centres.

Three cents out of every dollars goes toward patient lodges to provide accomodation for ambulatory patients attending out-of-town treatment centres. campaign costs take up five cents out of every dollar.

Teachers Meet in Toronto

More than 300 secondary school teachers met in Toronto this week to plot strategy for the coming negotiations. Among the delegates from District 19 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, comprising Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington counties were Jim Cox from Centennial, George Cunnigham from Trenton High School, H. A. Gottfried from PECVI and D.J. Brazeau from Centre Hastings in Madoc.

Area Teachers Buck Motion

District 19 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, comprising teachers from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, unsuccessfully attempted to defeat the resolution calling for a province-wide federation, attempt to defeat the present government of Ontario in the next election.

Glenn Richardson, a BCI English teacher, pointed out that the EPIC committee (Extra-curricular Policy Implementation Committee, the political lobby arm of OSSTF) itself was entirely opposed to this resolution.

The EPIC committee does not want OSSTF alignment for or against any particular political party. District 19 called for support for quality in education in general and continued pressure for that support on an all-party basis, said Mr. Richardson.

The resolution calling for defeat of the government was passed Thursday at 9 a.m., and by noon there was a strong movement on the floor to have it rescinded. District 19 delegates supported that movement on behalf of its EPIC committee.

EPIC is headed by Bob Leach, new a Trenton High School vice-principal who will become principal at North Hastings in Bancroft next September.

shooting, Roland Morgan said: "I saw the gunman with the door of the royal car open trying to pull Princess Anne out.

"When the assailant failed to get into the limousine after several attempts, he fled, only to be brought down in a rugby tackle by a policeman, officials said.

The cousin, "obviously very shaken," finally arrived at the palace in a police car.

A palace spokesman said the princess soon regained her composure, talked by telephone with various members of the Royal Family, and then chatted over coffee with other relatives and friends who called to offer sympathy and comfort.

A call was immediately put through to Prince Philip, on a tour of Indonesia with the Queen, and Anne assured her father that she was well and told him details of the experience. Prince Charles called from California, where he is visiting his Royal Navy ship, and the princess also telephoned the Queen Mother in nearby Clarence House to reassure her.

Her younger brothers, away at boarding school, were informed that she was well.

Among callers at the palace were the Duke of Kent, Anne's cousin, and the duchess.

Phillips, 27, a cavalry officer and equestrian Olympic gold medalist, also telephoned his mother in Wiltshire.

She said: "He has been in touch with me since the shooting and we have spoken about it. I would rather not say any more."

Anne and Phillips issued a joint statement saying they were thankful to be "in one piece" but "deeply distressed and concerned," that others were injured.

In Indonesia, a royal spokesman said the Queen and Prince Philip were "horrified at the incident but are relieved and grateful that no one was killed."

'Disaster' Night A Picton Success

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Correspondent

PICTON — Exercise Crash Picton organized by the Quinte area Emergency Measures Organization, swung into action Wednesday night with headquarters at the Bowen Pye hall.

Approximately 100 people including key local officials, radio operators, and representatives of services and agencies attended the mock disaster described by QEMO co-ordinator Cst. Angus Duffy.

Crash Picton simulated the aftermath of a passenger air craft crash.

Cst. Duffy noted that peacetime emergency plan has been approved by by-law for the town of Picton. For capable handling of a disaster, however, it is essential for key personnel — who would be involved — to be familiar with the plan requirements.

"We are dealing with fundamentals and principles, not tactics," said Mr. Duffy.

"It is the responsibility of the council of the municipality to provide support of its population in time of disaster," he said.

He stressed the importance of action during the first hour of a disaster.

"The first response must come from us," he observed.

John Kaine, QEMO consultant-instructor, said that in case of emergency there must be a control group.

Mr. Kaine pointed out that last year's disaster in Brighton proved that emergency situations can and do happen. A similar storm could strike in Picton and should this happen the heads of all municipal departments should be present to act.

Cst. Duffy emphasized that outsiders cannot be relied upon in an emergency. Although they will offer support it is the local people with an intimate knowledge of the situation who are needed.

A spokesman from CFB Trenton told exercise participants that the air base has "a very cut and dried" disaster plan and service personnel would provide support to local areas.

As soon as a disaster is declared 50 men standby to leave by bus. They will pick up casualties and cordon off the area for security.

He said that CFB Trenton can respond to a nuclear crash and attend to casualties in the event that Boeing 707 is hit. He estimated that from 250 to 300 persons would be available.

No Press For Developer Meet

PICTON — Prince Edward county councillors have voted unanimously to bar the press from a meeting with developers interested in building a 400-home subdivision west of Picton.

Prince Edward County warden Keith MacDonald supported press attendance and council was asked by him to vote on the question Tuesday.

When he returned the verdict to reporters he reported no member of council, including self, favored an open meeting.

The developers reportedly did not object to press attendance and had distributed copies of the planned subdivision among Prince Edward county land developers.

If approved, the subdivision would be built at Wicket's Corners, west of Picton.

Prince Edward's draft official plan calls for development to the north of Picton, closer to town.

Winter Work Raises Dam in Grimsthorpe Bush

Wildlife Area For North Hastings

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

GILMOUR — They're building a dam in barely accessible wilderness near here.

It's mostly for ducks.

But that doesn't totally define the significance of what will be the first managed wildlife habitat in the northern townships of Hastings County.

Site of the Ministry of Natural Resources project is marshy, Crown-owned acreage in the bushland fastness of Grimsthorpe township, 12 miles southeast of here.

Now nearing completion after a winter's work in one of the most desolate sectors of the county — Grimsthorpe has only one permanent resident — is a dam designed to restore an area once deemed ideal for black and gold muskrat.

The area, known as Robinson's Marsh, years ago was flooded by beavers. They dammed a drainage creek to boost water volume for log rym in nearby creeks.

When logging dwindled, the area fell into disuse. Wilderness reclaimed the shallow water body choking its wildfowl feeding grounds with undergrowth.

In 1950, an Ontario Hydro power corridor vaguely reopened the area. Through it Hydro service road flanked the marsh, giving it a degree of access.

It also received interest of provincial wildlife experts in the possibility of restoring Robinson's Marsh to its wild-fowl-muskrat habitat.

What was needed, wildlife officials decided, was a dam to first drain the area, fill off the—undergrowth, then raise the water level to restore the aquatic plant food.

The Robinson Marsh holding now is about 350 acres. Immediately to the north is the 625-acre Boundary Marsh over the Cashel township boundary. Together, a ministry survey concluded, the big ponds "could provide some of the best waterfowl hunting and muskrat trapping in south-central Ontario at national cost."

A forest access road was eventually cut to link to the Hydro route. The proposal for restoration was eventually approved. Late last year a ministry work crew began. Improving the rugged road-bed to equipment could be moved in.

Local labor was hired and the dam building got under way in early January. Local loggers kept the route plowed that equipment used in the winter bushland.

Now, ten weeks later, the dam is nearly ready, despite the vagaries of weather and difficulties of access.

Cement mix was trucked in from Campbellford and cement added on the site. When it's finished it will have taken about 100 tons of concrete to build the structure. It is 65 metres (1 feet high. Logs will be fostered in its 11-foot, 4-kiceway, controlled by winches.

A novel feature is an extended metal culvert that projects the sluice beyond the dam. After it's surrounded with fill, the Hydro road will be built across the culvert. This is a departure from standard design which builds roads across the top of the dam. This calls for a wider structure — and more concrete. The Robinson Marsh project should thus prove less costly than conventional structures, says ministry foreman Dickey Cross. If so, it could be used elsewhere.

When it's ready the marsh can be used by hunters, trappers and nature lovers, says a ministry official.

But that won't be for a while.

Dave Atkinson, the ministry's Tweed district wildlife supervisor, says plans are first to drain the area and let the marsh bottom "sweeten." After that, water will be raised to flood off the existing brush growth and aquatic food planted.

The whole management process of restoration could take four or five years, he says.

Bata Plant Prospect for Reserve

TYENDINAGA — The Quinte Mohawk council is firming up details of a proposal which may bring a first full-scale industry to this reserve.

The industry is Bata Footwear.

If the Mohawks and the company can reach agreement it would mean jobs for at least 30 reserve residents — mostly women — in two years.

Reserve council and advisors from the Indian affairs department have been engaged in discussions with Bata for about three months — after the company first broached the prospect of locating a satellite production unit on the reserve, Robin Dodson, the department's area economic development superintendent for southern Ontario, said Wednesday night.

With G.M. Mulvihill, department business management advisor, Mr. Mulvihill has been assisting the reserve council in preliminary negotiations with Bata.

The preliminaries advanced a stage further last night when both men signed confidentiality agreements with the Mohawk council.

Chief William Brant said council now is preparing to approach the company with a proposal, although no details were revealed.

The government officials are to seek a meeting between council and company representatives in the near future.

If agreement is reached, Bata would locate a production unit in a hanger building on the Mohawk airport, a World War II facility which recently was licensed as an airfield.

The plant would produce leather uppers for shoes from components supplied by Bata. These would be shipped to the company's main production centre at Belleville.

Among council's main priorities in the project is to provide jobs for reserve residents, said the chief.

Initially, the company would employ about 15 women, increasing the production unit in a second year.

Bata already has satellite plants at Campbellford and Picton.

Music Is Theme

PICTON — Music will provide the theme for a special meeting of the Prince Edward board of education in Picton at 8 p.m. Monday, March 25.

The meeting will be held in the board's office at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute and is open to all interested persons.

County Plan In Cabinet

PICTON — The Ontario Cabinet is now reviewing Prince Edward's proposal for county government.

Warden Keith MacDonald, reeve of Hallowell, has told county council he has been advised that the county will be notified when the proposal is approved.

The proposal would merge the county's ten municipalities in a one-tier system of government. Councillors earlier this year voted unanimously for a resolution seeking government action to create the single tier system.

Seniors' Club Gets $2,100

WELLINGTON — A federal grant of $2,175 will go to the Wellington Senior Citizens No. 499 of Ontario to enable them to expand their activities and organize a well-rounded program for seniors. The grant is under the New Horizons Programme.

The Wellington project, Recreation and Entertainment of Senior Citizens, will involve 119 persons.

Keep Off Ice

TWEED — The first day of spring meant lake ice was unsafe for all vehicles south of Highway 7, Ministry of Natural Resources reported today.

North of the highway line lake ice would only take a snowmobile, but persons were warned of all smaller waterways and creeks.

Thefts Bring Sentence

TRENTON — A Trenton man was sentenced to jail in provincial court here Wednesday after pleading guilty to 13 counts of break, enter and theft.

A police spokesman today said the thefts included tape decks, tapes and musical instruments taken from cars.

Robert Claude, 23 Ferry Street, received six months definite and six months indefinite on the first charge and 12 concurrent sentences for the remaining charges.

Prices Didn't Hit the Roof

TYENDINAGA — The Quinte Mohawks had a narrow escape from inflation recently, Chief William Brant told this reserve's council Wednesday night.

Recently council empowered the chief to approve an agreement with a Belleville contractor for major repair of a hangar roof on the reserve's newly-licensed airfield.

The $10,000 contract was signed in the nick of time.

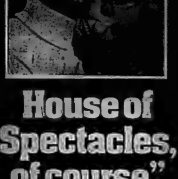
Two days later the cost of supplies needed went up 90 per cent, the chief said.

Mohawk Police Get Pay Hike

TYENDINAGA — A Quinte Mohawk council Wednesday night raised the pay of its two-man police force on this reserve — and agreed to another hike soon.

Council hiked the pay for its constables from $5,800 to $7,000. But both officers personally appeared before council and requested another raise.

Constables Richard Brant and Tom Maracle, both with police college training, noted the new scale was far from comparable with police pay in surrounding municipalities. In neighboring Deseronto, where salaries are still the lowest in the area, they said, a first class constable is paid more than $11,000.



Councillor Carl Brant, noting the professional qualifications and long duty hours demanded of the officers said they should not be asked to work for "at least a starvation rate".

Council agreed to pay Constable Brant — senior officer — $8,500 and his fellow constable, $8,000 by April, start of the new fiscal year.

Meantime, a solution to official recognition of the officers' status may have been reached.

Cocktail Party Bilingualism

French Tuition for Officials' Wives on Each Taxpayer's Bill

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Yes, indeed "cocktail circuit bilingualism" is a part — an "essential component" in the official view — of the federal government's $280 million language program.

And yes, the taxpayer is being billed what appears, by the government's own figures, a premium price for it.

Tom Cossitt, former Liberal party riding president and now Conservative MP for Leeds, made it something of an issue on the floor of the Commons the other day with the question:

"Why should the taxpayers pay the language lessons taken by the wife of the Governor of the Bank of Canada who makes $75,000 a year, and why should the taxpayers be paying for language lessons taken by the wife of the president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation who has been publicly quoted as saying she took them so that she could get along better in French at cocktail parties?"

In the Mr. Cossitt denounced this "cocktail circuit bilingualism" being charged against the taxpayer as "an unwarranted abuse of public funds," there was no response in the Commons to his questions.

Nor was there any reply to his demand that "this commercial aspect of bilingualism be stopped at once."

But sport altogether from the Commons, an explanation or "rationale," as it was put, since has emerged from the office of Paul Tellier, co-ordinator for the Public Service Commission of the government's bilingualism programs.

He was asked the same questions as Tom Cossitt had raised in the Commons.

And in broad outline, that is what he got from Prime Minister Trudeau started the public service not on the bilingual road. It was decided that when senior public servants practised their French or English — over cocktails at dinner, a merry-go-round of parties, they should have the psychological support of their wives joining in the chit-chat.

This was the "rationale," as Mr. Tellier calls it, of Treasury Board.

"It was argued," he related, "and I think correctly, that the wife should support her husband's efforts in struggling to familiarize himself in the use of a second language.

"The bilingual program is a huge operation, and to a senior civil servant carrying heavy responsibilities, the burden of learning French or English can be very heavy indeed.

"The circumstances and that part of the program was confided to the SX people [senior-executive category, salary range up to $60,000] — it was felt that the psychological support of the wife could be importantly helpful.

"That's where more so than on a social occasion."

So Mrs. Senior Civil Servant was invited to learn French at the taxpayers' expense.

The invitation exerted a certain pressure for acceptance since the wives were given to understand that their facility in French not only would support their husbands' bilingual efforts, but ever might be considered as a creditable additional qualification for their progress and promotion.

In short, the ability of the wife to be one of the assets that become an asset to her husband, and so the taxpayer also almost a requirement of his executive position.

The cocktail circuit bilingualism" opportunity then was extended to wives of parliamentarians.

So now, currently some 155 wives of senior public servants and 13 parliamentary wives are taking the hours of language lessons a week over a period of about eight months at a cost of $500 each to a total tap into the public treasury of $85,000.

The issue surfaced in the Commons after Tom Cossitt had come across an angry editorial in the Kingston Whig-Standard of January 14.

The Whig left no doubt that it was "cocktail French," for it quoted Mrs. Jean Trevor, wife of the president of CMHC, as saying that she took the course so I could get along at parties in French."

Husband, too, was Mrs. Norma Cafik, wife of the Ontario Liberal MP, as continuing she doesn't use her French much in Ottawa, but found it helpful last year on a trip with her husband to Paris.

Mrs. Gerald Bouey, wife of the Bank of Canada Governor, said she found French useful at diplomatic receptions.

Stanfield in Form

We have never been enamored of such expressions — in politics or elsewhere — as bear pit, brainstorming, or think tanks. They smack a little too much of 1984, if not of political corn.

Anyway there was Opposition leader Stanfield in what was described as a bear-pit session, seated on a swivel chair with a microphone alongside and the party faithful all around, waiting and questioning.

Mr. Stanfield looked a little uncomfortable, as well he might, but we were witnessing also an apparently rejuvenated Opposition leader, scornful of both the Government and the NDP which helps keep it in power.

The occasion was the party's convention in Ottawa and Mr. Stanfield received an overwhelming vote of confidence while displaying renewed personal vigor and political punch.

The question now is how long can both the man and the party keep this up? The PCs seem to be spoiling for an election already, yet with the life of the Government not yet close to its expiry. The PCs could shoot their bolt. Be that as it may there are anxieties enough on the national scene which could precipitate an election — inflation a major one, and not forgetting the highly questionable use to which Ottawa is extending the taxpayers' dollars both at home and abroad.

CAS Deficit

Municipal governments have neither the means nor the right to get into debt in the manner of the federal administration in Ottawa. In other words, two wrongs don't make a right.

In Belleville there is the matter of the $30,563 deficit revealed in last year's operations of the Children's Aid Society, due reportedly to a new wage agreement along with severance payments.

The deficit is now tacked onto this year's requirements which have been put at $695,681.

The CAS doubtless is doing the best job it can, but it looks as if more attention to costs and budgeting is in order. The temptation these days is to go into the red and hang the consequences since everybody else is doing it. But from the standpoint of public and municipal integrity, balancing the books should still be the goal.

Such deficits must also be viewed against the background of other city requirements, from road repair to new bridges, as well as requests like that of the Quinte district labor council for a $12,000 grant toward operation of a citizens' bureau. Inflation is a serious problem these days and Council must bear this increasingly in mind as it looks to current and future budget needs.

Ireland's Travail

There is little cause for celebration in Ireland these days, at least not in the North where persistent violence and brutality by a few cast a shadow over an essentially civilized land.

Heedless though of this tragedy, and perhaps because of it, there have been the traditional St. Patrick's Day parades — in Montreal for one and Peterborough too, and among other centres, Rochester, N.Y. Here veteran IRA men were reported to have participated, a reminder of the Irish-American element which unhappily, has helped foster old hatreds and finance the hideous weaponry of the guerrillas' disposal.

As the killing goes on, conflicting media reports compound the horror of it all. In recent days we have been told variously that the IRA provisionals are planning a unilateral truce; that renewed violence is a show of strength as a prelude to a ceasefire, and finally that it is actually the beginning of a new wave of terror.

The New Cold War: Washington Versus Europe

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger are on a collision course with Western Europe of their own making.

A 1-1-European statements from both men are curiously out-of-place and in Dr. Kissinger's case, even more so out-of-character. The reasons for these in his case are quite obscure. Although one can find a justification in Mr. Nixon's view for turning his back on Europe.

Dr. Kissinger's troubles began with a strong and historically inaccurate remark he made during a private Washington dinner where he was sure there were no reporters or tape records.

The crux was his astounding statement that because of the chaos following the First World War, Europe since then has been "free legitimate governments," with relative comments about the continent's instability.

This is the same secretary of state who began his time in this office by calling 1973 "The Year of Europe," a prophecy which did not bear fruit. Rather he might have called it "The Year of Henry Kissinger." And perhaps this is part of the trouble.

President Nixon's very harsh comments in answer to questions from senior mid-west management men at a black tie dinner in Chicago, included the comment that the U.S. would take on all nine European nations under the heading of self interest if necessary. The reference was to monetary trade differences and use of the growing Soviet-dollar billions which are being earned within European economies.

But the event behind both Nixon's harsh anti-European remarks comments and Kissinger's pique was the refusal of European NATO allies of the United States to make the same emergency military moves during last fall's Middle East crisis which Washington suddenly made.

This refusal rankled, but even more so did the almost unanimous European opinion that the United States was panicking over alleged Soviet military moves in the Mediterranean and Egypt. There was no threat to Europe or to the world, said Europe.

Moreover the energy crisis had just begun with the possibility the Arab oil-producing countries would embargo nearly all to European countries which continued to support Israel.

By "letting down" Israel in Mr. Nixon's eyes, they were also letting down the United States and long-standing NATO commitments.

NATO of course brings up another place of conflict between Europe and America—the European feeling that the shield is still necessary but not with the continuous cold war intensity which helped form the organization a quarter century ago.

President Nixon has cancelled his long-planned European visit next month, which means he will not complete such activities as the signing of joint declaration of principles with Western German Chancellor Willy Brandt.

But the great fence-mending Henry Kissinger where Arabs, Jews and Vietnamese are concerned, he has a massive job to do with the European press. French Foreign Minister Marcel Joubert is turning out to be a European Kissinger in every sense of the word.

Dr. Kissinger's Year of Europe will probably start with France and in Paris with the determined and nationalistic Joubert.

And it won't be as easy for him as the Middle Eastern debate has been.

Labor Congress Rattles Its Sabres

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Confrontation remains the basis of organized labor's stand in 1974.

The annual brief of the Canadian Labor Congress to the federal government bristles with warnings and challenges to industry as well as to government.

In effect, it flatly turns down Labor Minister John Munro's call for better understanding between labor and management in 1974. ("Canadians throughout the nation are demanding more reasonable behavior from both management and labor," he said.)

In its brief presented to the prime minister and cabinet the other day, the CLC makes it clear that organized labor feels it is falling behind business in its share of national income—and warns of serious industrial disruption if the trend is not reversed.

Besides bigger increases in base wage rates (which it says averaged 8 per cent under collective agreements signed in 1973), the CLC wants a further increase of more than 13 per cent in the federal minimum wage and changes in tax policies to ease profits in food processing and distribution, public ownership of the telephone system in Ontario and Quebec, a massive reorganization of Canada Manpower's placement services, and a variety of other measures.

A slightly different perspective of labor's gains is provided by the figures on total labor income: Wages, salaries and supplementary income rose from $26.7 billion to $32.757 million—including a 4.1 percent gain in the last three months of 1973.

Quarterly earnings in manufacturing industries at the year-end were running 10.3 per cent higher than a year earlier.

It's true that 1973 corporate gains in certain industries rose by a greater percentage than those wage gains. (It's true that the corporate earnings are not guaranteed by contract and their gains tend to fluctuate widely from year to year.)

But the CLC's broad-brush brief doesn't necessarily amount to an all-fight argument for still bigger wage increases—especially in view of the labor organization's stated opinion that the prospects for continued good times seem to day than a year ago.

The new (April 1) federal minimum hourly wage rate of $2.30 is already exceeded in British Columbia (where it will rise to $2.50 in June), and will be exceeded by mid-year in New Brunswick and the Yukon.

The other jurisdictions have all introduced increases in their minimum rate within recent months or have announced early increases.

Inevitably, these—combined with a sharp increase in unemployment insurance premiums will force a certain number of small businesses to close.

Overall, labor has a confidence—not to mention the industry—not to mention the forgotten public.

Old-fashioned confrontation, with never-ending demands for "more," may be the path to that goal for one highly organized sector of society.

But it is a way that extracts a high price—in the form of disruptive strikes, business failures and marginal unemployment.

One of the highlights in the Salvation Army young people's calendar is the annual youth council held in each of 15 divisions throughout the Canadian territory. This year's council for the mid-Ontario division is to be held the weekend of, March 21st. in Belleville.

Restoration Work At Historic Cobourg Site

Cobourg Star

As reported in the Cobourg Star several weeks ago, construction work at Victoria Hall is running well ahead of schedule, as much as that by the end of May the contractor will have reached the point he is expected to be by September.

Consequently, by that time, with about a half-million dollars spent, the Vic Hall Restoration Society, will have to call a pause until more money comes in, or until pledges mature.

There have been some out-of-town reports that Vic Hall is "in jeopardy". Far from it. A great deal of work has been accomplished, and some more money is needed to finish the job.

The society has approximately $300,000 additional in cash and pledges, and these funds are satisfactory collateral at any bank. Even $100,000 of this is a cash fund which the Cobourg Art Gallery so it can be put into Victoria Hall. As Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner said when he visited Cobourg recently, the federal government believes in circulating the nation's treasures around the country. Cobourg, because it has an art gallery and because it has Victoria Hall, has been selected as one of the places where these exhibitions can be held.

At present, the Cobourg Art Gallery must be incorporated, and steps are underway. The CAG then requires some sort of agreement with the town or the federal government knows that its $100,000 will be used for the purpose intended. Once these two steps are accomplished (and there is no reason why they cannot be within a few weeks), there will be an additional $100,000 released for Victoria Hall's restoration.

As well, campaign chairman Georges Jeanneret is in the final stages of planning a campaign of townspeople, which hopefully will yield $65,000.

It is good business if construction can be continued without interruption. Every dollar goes further.

Cobourg is going to have a magnificent municipal building when this project is finished, and the people of Cobourg are going to have a highly usable and beautiful centre for their community.

So don't worry about old Victoria Hall.

But don't forget her either. Your donations made one down the next few months will go further than ever in getting the job done at the lowest possible cost.

Nurses' Praise For Loyalist

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

This letter is in reply to an item in The Intelligencer of March 12 concerning the views of the nursing students at Loyalist.

The voiced remarks were primarily those of the last class of the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing, and not those of the third year class of Loyalist. We, the first class of Loyalist, would like to make our own impressions of our college. We feel that the new nursing course will upgrade the nursing education rather than downgrade it as the writer seemed to imply. We feel as much a part of this college as any other student. The move to the college has not only put us into the mainstream of education in the community, but has given us many other assets. Among these are increased amount of facilities and equipment to add to the movement to the college. The formality between staff and students has become more relaxed since the move to the college than at any other time.

Tradition is maintained to ensure that nursing skills do not lower and to maintain nursing as a respectable profession. We do not feel that this makes our course better than any others.

In conclusion, the majority of the students in the Diploma Nursing Program at Loyalist were unaware that the newspaper would be printing an article concerning our feelings about Loyalist. The opinions were aired to only a few of the students. It was not a proper cross section of the student body. Therefore, it is not an accurate article, and does not give the readers concrete information. The information in the article of the nursing class should be disregarded, in truth, as that of "It is Loyal to Loyalist".

Politics And Civic Rights

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Conservative Association last Thursday night, a motion was lodged with the Ontario president of this Association objecting to a ruling by our provincial government that no public servant in this province could be an executive of any political party organization.

As a retired Ontario public servant, I commend such a decision taken, because in essence the barring of a public servant from serving as an executive of a political party is no different than prohibiting him from publicly campaigning as a candidate for a political office.

In fact it was not until the pressure was put on the Ontario government by the Civil Service Association of Ontario that public servants in this province could stand for election to any public body.

Fred Bronson, president of the local Progressive Conservative Association, has phrased it well when he said (as reported in your paper) that the legislation which imposes on the rights of individuals to participate in our political processes should not exist (unless there is a real conflict of interest) in this province.

'Class' Difference Between Good, Great

TORONTO (CP) — A prominent British rock music promoter once said the difference between a good rock 'n' roll band and a great one is class. With thousands of good bands on the market today, class has become an essential ingredient in order to stand out in the crowd.

Bearfoot, a Canadian band still in its childhood, is one of the few new groups in the market with this ingredient. The songs are strong and catchy, its records well produced and presented and its performances on stage dynamic and professional. The band has come a long way in the short time since it was formed and with two albums behind it and a good chance of top 10 single scents with its disc Molly, big things appear in store for these four talented and versatile musicians.

Moreover, the band hopes to digress from its rock sound into, at times, more mellow music. Guitarist Hugh Brodkie has studied classical guitar while keyboard player and lead singer Dwayne Ford is an accomplished jazz pianist.

"We are looking forward to balancing our playing with acoustic numbers," Ford said. "It will add another dimension to our music and provide our live act with an effective contrast."

Driving force behind Bearfoot is Dwayne who pens much of the group's music. The class element emanates from Dwayne's songs which go far beyond the normal bounds of most rock 'n' roll tunes. He uses words unsparingly and runs them well into the lyric line. His music is instantly likeable and full of contrasts, as in Molly and the group's expected follow-up single Sweet Virginia.

"I only feel normal when I'm writing music," Dwayne said. "When I'm not, I get schizoid. When I write, I am satisfied. A song is born like a child and we all work around it. The thing about Bearfoot is that each member contributes to every song. We have great teamwork."

Although Bearfoot was formed only last December, Dwayne and Hugh had played together for several years previously. They started out in Edmonton in a band which Ronnie Hawkins put together. Dwayne later left to form Atkinson, Danko and Ford which enjoyed moderate success.

Bassist Chris Vickery and drummer Malcolm Tomlinson also worked as a team prior to Bearfoot. Both played under Bill King and worked together on sessions.

"One of the reasons Bearfoot clicked so well and so quickly was because we joined two pairs of musicians," Dwayne said. "Hugh and I formed the top half and Mal and Chris the bottom half of the sound. It was like a melting pot."

Despite the standard of excellence Bearfoot has already achieved, all four feel their music still is in the raw stage.

"We're still in the phase of feeling each other out musically, especially on stage," said Chris, at 29, the veteran of the band.

"I've been playing for 15 years and I've played with five musicians before but I've never felt as excited as I now am with Bearfoot and its potential."

What the band currently is concentrating on playing in the Ontario area, a Canadian tour is expected within months. And with Molly scheduled for release in the United States, demand for Bearfoot appearances south of the border also is anticipated.

"The reason I signed this band," said manager Marty Onrot, "is because they have something extra, something different in their music. They have only just begun and already the public is hearing that something."

Scarce Gas Is Threat To Health

CHICAGO (CP) — The gasoline shortage in the United States has affected the doctor as well as the average citizen and there is some concern about the possible effects on health care.

The American Medical Association (AMA) says that so far there has been no serious curtailment of medical care because of the shortage, but instances have turned up of physicians being seriously handicapped in looking after the sick.

The AMA has told the federal energy office of its concerns.

"It is essential that physicians and other health professionals be assured of adequate allocation of gasoline. Unless such specific provisions are established, those in need of medical care could find such care unavailable in emergency situations," Ernest B. Howard, executive vice-president, told administrator William Simon.

A survey by American Medical News, the AMA weekly newspaper, revealed many instances of more or less serious problems due to the fuel shortage.

—In Oregon, some doctors are riding bicycles to the office and at least one physician, after running out of gas, had to be driven to a hospital by the state police.

—In Florida, a group of physicians serving their own 100-mile area became so desperate that they purchased a gas station.

—In Hawaii, at least 50 physicians needed hospital duty substitutes during one weekend and some surgery was postponed.

—In New Jersey, hospital administrators reported serious problems with employee absenteeism. At least one obstetrician reportedly is asking patients in labor to pick him up on the way to the hospital. Blood donations are suffering because prospective donors lack gas to come to headquarters and the shortage prohibits bloodmobiles from travelling.

Survey of state medical associations by the AMA field service department showed that most rural states were having only minor problems with fuel distribution. But the problem appeared to be worsening in a few areas, where medical organizations were striving to work out systems to insure adequate supply of fuel for health professionals.

NDP Proposes Transport Utility

OTTAWA (CP) — The heavily-criticized government transport policy was back in the Commons spotlight today with debate scheduled on a New Democrat motion seeking establishment of publicly-owned transport utility.

The NDP motion, favoring integration of "all forms of national transportation" in a single utility, calls for nationalization of CP Rail and its subsidiaries.

That part of the motion is unlikely to win support from the other parties, but with Transport Minister Jean Marchand under heavy opposition fire recently, critics were expected to make the most of a full day's debate on transport.

Mr. Marchand has been blasted almost daily for the slow rail movement of prairie grain shipments. His admission during the House speech debate that transport policy needs complete revamping has only encouraged opposition criticism.

Part of the NDP motion may find even the minister speaking in support. It calls on the government to appoint "a transport controller with full authority to allocate and control railway rolling stock."

Mr. Marchand already has indicated this is being considered. Conservative spokesmen have also supported the idea.

The NDP motion is a vehicle for debate and will not come to a vote.

Quizzed by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield Wednesday, Mr. Marchand brushed aside the suggestion that transport policy is being drawn up by outside experts rather than department staff.

The railways have been accused of failing grain shipments because freight rates are higher on other commodities, and Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River) suggested Wednesday that the railways are required by law to give grain the fastest possible service.

Mr. Marchand replied that there is a legal commitment for grain delivery, "but there's no time limit."

Mr. Marchand also was urged to stop development of the new Toronto airport because new forms of travel are available.

John Harney (NDP—Scarborough West) and Norman Cafik (L—Ontario) both cited statements by the minister that if the government had known five to 15 years ago there would be trains capable of speeds of 200 miles an hour, it "might not have decided to build the new Toronto and Montreal airports.

Mr. Marchand said: "I was just talking about things that could happen and did not happen.

Wednesday's low-key debate concerned a government bill to encourage competition and provide protection for consumers.

Sinclair Stevens (PC—York Simcoe) said the government should investigate the operations of the chartered banks as well as foreign-controlled corporations and large labor unions.

Bill Kempling (PC—Hamilton Wentworth) also attacked the banks, "the most pampered, catered to and protected business in this country."

He said they are reluctant to give loans under the Small Business Loans Act, the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act "or under any similar type of legislation" because they can make more profit on other types of business.

He challenged MPs to ask at a chartered bok bout such loans.

Dief Likes Marchand

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand has an unexpected fan—John Diefenbaker.

After giving a humorous, arm-waving display at a news conference outside the Commons, Mr. Marchand was stopped by Mr. Diefenbaker who was moving to replace him before the television cameras.

"If you hadn't chosen politics you would have been a great actor," chuckled the former Progressive Conservative prime minister.

"Not as good as you," replied the transport minister.

"He's a great character," Mr. Diefenbaker told reporters as Mr. Marchand turned away.

"I like him. He understands Parliament and he hasn't got anyone around him that does."

Bank Head Wants Tight Money Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — The fight to control inflation emerges as the main concern in the annual report, released Wednesday, of Governor Gerald Bouey of the Bank of Canada, and he indicates a key weapon will be increasing emphasis on limiting money supply.

Mr. Bouey says the speed with which the economy grew during 1973 caught central bank policymakers by surprise and rapid rates of growth in the money supply of several countries led to strong inflationary pressure.

The central bank report, prepared annually for the Finance minister, is basically a review of 1972, but there are some hints as to future policy and some comments on what bank economists expect for this year.

"It is clear that in 1974 the Canadian economy faces many uncertainties that lie beyond our borders and beyond our power to influence significantly, the report said."

The rapid rise in oil prices is ahead, the prospect is for a very heavy investment of new a key factor and most industrial strong underlying demand, the countries expect sizable deficits productive facilities to serve for that reason, the report said. ation in Canada, since we have But Canada is in a relatively fa already entered a period of vorable position because it pro needs."

duces about as much oil as it consumes.

"Thus the circumstances at present are more favorable for a substantial rate of economic growth in 1974 in Canada than in the United States and many overseas countries, and a divergence in current rates of economic growth has already emerged. If things go reasonably well, this divergence will narrow in the latter part of the year as the pace of economic activity in the United States and overseas countries picks up."

Brinco Rejects Offer by Moores

MONTREAL (CP) — The next move is up to Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland following rejection of his government's latest offer to purchase Brinco Ltd. An aide said the premier would address the legislature on the subject today.

In a statement released Wednesday night, the resource company's board of directors rejected the latest offer of $7.67 a share, saying it has made a counter-proposal to the province.

Gone to Dogs

TORONTO (CP) — A report filed in Ontario Supreme Court Wednesday says it is impossible to rent suites in Rochdale College because residents keep "50 attack-trained guard dogs" on the premises.

The dogs, says a report by J. L. Biddel of Clarkson Co. Ltd., are "allowed by their owners to run loose and (there is) constant evidence of defecation by such dogs in the public or common areas of the building."

The dogs are just one reason why Clarkson, the court-appointed Rochdale receiver, wants a court order that will permit it to evict the 500 residents int he 18-storey building.

Favor Games

EDMONTON (CP) — As far as the city is concerned, the 1978 Commonwealth Games will definitely be held in Edmonton.

City residents made the decision in a plebiscite Wednesday. They voted solidly in favor of borrowing $11.8 million to pay for the city's share of $21.1 million in facilities. The rest of the money will come from the provincial and federal governments.

Report on Museums Truly Exhaustive

By BRUCE EASSON
The CANADIAN PRESS

Archie F. Key spent three years and travelled 25,000 miles preparing an official report on Canadian museums and art galleries, related to the growth of similar public institutions in Europe and the United States.

Then the Canadian Museums Association (CMA) lacked the funds to publish the report.

Publisher Jack McClelland of Toronto came to the rescue, offering to bring out the report as a book, Beyond Four Walls. The Canada Council assisted publication with a special grant.

Mr. McClelland wrote Mr. Key: "It is the sort of thing which should be supported even if it doesn't make money."

Whether Beyond Four Walls will turn a profit will depend on how many people have a vital interest in an exhaustive—and exhausting—description of the origins and growth of museums.

The book contains no illustrations and only the skimpiest description of the collections of individual museums.

Almost one-third of the volume is devoted to the development of European and U.S. museums. Mr. Key, a former CMA national director, appears most comfortable with that section.

The publisher notes Canada had 1,146 public museums and art galleries of all types and sizes in 1973 although that information does not appear in the book. Mr. Key attempts to mention them all.

They range from the National Museum in Ottawa and the Royal Ontario Museum (ROM) in Toronto to community museums, the S. S. Keno restoration in Whitehorse and the tiny Rick Forest, Que., museum of the Cercle des Jeunes Naturalistes des Plc-Dorea.

But as a reference, Beyond Fours Walls is awkward, despite its index and a separate section listing all Canadian museums and "related institutions" by provinces.

To discover the official founding date of the National Museum requires a close reading of several pages and some arithmetic.

The ROM is not included in the index and a reference to collections are passed over although it is described as "the one museum in Canada that has established a solid international status."

Mr. Key for 13 years up to 1949 was publisher and editor of a weekly newspaper in Drumheller, Alta., but the publisher of his book might have wielded a sharper editorial pencil.

The contents page lists only sections of the book, not chapters. Section IV, as an example, has 20 chapters (lacking headings) totalling 156 pages that briefly describe modern museum growth in each province, beginning with Newfoundland. To locate the chapter on Manitoba requires rifling through the pages.

Canada still lacks a comprehensive guide to its major museums and their collections. Such an illustrated guide, which also might provide a brief history of each institution, would be valuable to both the interested traveller and the harried researcher.

Beyond Four Walls: The origins and development of Canadian Museums, by Archie F. Key; McClelland and Stewart; 354 pages, $15.50.

Hospital Inquiry Commission on Employee Wages, Salaries and Benefits

The Minister of Labour has established a Hospital Inquiry Commission to investigate ways of providing the current process of hospital negotiations with an improved basis for the determination of employee wages, salaries and benefits. It is composed of R. E. Alden, A. S. Tirrell and J. S. Dupre (Chairman). The Commission is seeking the views of the public as they relate to its terms of reference.

The Commission has as its terms of reference the duty to inquire into and report on:

- The standards of compensation applicable to employees of hospitals under The Public Hospitals Act and the relationship of these standards to comparable work in other categories of employment in Ontario.
- The appropriate criteria which should be applied to the determination of such compensation.
- The desirability and desirability of collective bargaining being conducted on a level other than an individual hospital.
- The desirability of establishing a reference centre for developing and publishing statistical data relevant to such bargaining.

Submissions Invited

Persons or groups wishing to make a written submission are asked to:

- Notify the Commission by April 9, 1974 of their intention to make a written submission.
- Make written submissions as soon as possible to be in the hands of the Commission by May 6, 1974.

The Commission may request a subsequent oral review of any submission.

Submissions and inquiries should be addressed to:

VANCOUVER (CP) — Municipal red tape and delays in approving housing development are increasing the cost of land in Greater Vancouver, says contractor Larry Bourne, president of the Greater Vancouver branch of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada. He says delays are caused by municipal abuse of land-use contracts and these should be standardized by the provincial government.

Farmers Quit

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Robert Reynolds, president of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture, says returns are so bad for farmers in B.C. that more than 30% — an average of one a day — left the industry in the province in 1973. He says average annual income among 9,000 commercial farmers in B.C. has not exceeded $3,000 over the past seven years.

Ann Landers

Hard Work Kills Marriages

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to delve further into your response: Hard work never killed anybody. Maybe hard work never killed anybody, but it sure has destroyed a lot of marriages. The man who is obsessed with his job is just as hooked as the alcoholic, the junkie, or the compulsive gambler. The big difference is that the work freak is admired by society, considered a go-getter. The other guys are considered sick or bums.

Having followed your column for several years, I am well aware that you are a staunch supporter of the work ethic. From what I've heard, both you and your husband are extremely energetic and superachievers. Well, not everybody possesses that kind of drive or wants that kind of life.

More and more marriages are breaking up because husbands are spending all their time and energy piling up money. The final battle cry of the driven loon is, "Look how hard I work to provide my family with every luxury. All I get is criticism." What he didn't provide his family with was his presence when they needed him. Sign me—Ex-wife

Dear Ex: The man who puts in so many hours at his job that his family gets no time or attention is short-changing them and himself. Those dynamos pay a big price for their so-called success. Often they end up with a large net worth, a bleeding ulcer, and no relationship with a wife or child.

But not all work freaks fall into that category. Some (myself for example) make plenty of time for family, friends, worthy causes, and fun travel. I enjoy the challenge, the excitement and the opportunity for growth that my work provides. But I'm not actually working for the steak. It's the sizzle that fascinates me.

Dear Ann Landers: I wonder how many people will be killed before this letter gets printed. Please publish it as soon as possible.

My husband and I nearly lost our home and our lives because he was going to be smart and hoard gasoline in the cellar.

We had a heavy rain last week and the cellar was flooded. The barrels of gasoline tipped over and gas fumes filled the place. I smelled the fumes and called the fire department. On of the firemen said our house was like a time-bomb. It could have exploded at any moment. Please, Ann, warn your readers. Human life is more important than the damned fuel.—Lucky Us

Dear Lucky: I've already read of several tragedies because people were trying to beat the system. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Is our daughter unusual? Am I crazy or what? Linda is 18, doesn't lift a finger around the house, pulls bloody murder if I ask her to place something that she should have put away. She has a tantrum if I don't have her blouses pressed in time. If I ask her to run an errand for me, she says I'm exploiting her. I'm exhausted and disgusted. What goes?—Beat Mom

Dear Mom: Who raised that vegetable? When you plant onions, don't expect lilacs to bloom.

Confidential to Can't Get A Date: I explained in my letter what I thought was the problem based on the facts you gave me. Please don't send a picture. It won't change the advice.

Successful Living

Needs Help to Help Kids

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am calling "help" at long last. I grew up, through my teens, married and now have children of my own in their teens, being ignorant about sex education.

My mother told me nothing. I don't want to be that kind of a mother. But I just don't know what to say - where to begin.

I know my feelings about certain morals, but I don't know would like some concrete facts to help me along.

Must Educate Myself.

Dear Must: Going into marriage knowing nothing about sex might be compared to undertaking an airplane without knowledge of a single dial. You must have been frightened. I hope you had an enlightened husband!

Teen-agers will have picked up information - and misinformation - from their pals. It is desperately necessary for them to be able to look to you and their father for the truth.

They need to understand not only the physical facts of sex but the other things - the connection between physical sensation, deep-seated emotions and the making of a life. They need to know something about what families are for.

The American Medical Association turns out some booklets for 30 cents each; and my 25-cent list of books and other literature (Sex, Marriage and Birth Control) includes their address as well as additional listings.

Overcome your own timidity. Keep in mind that your young people need to feel free to talk to you. If you open up the way through sex talks, it may surprise you that they will confide in you in other areas, too.

Dear Doris: What do we do about a boy of 10 who still insists on having his mother sit with him and pat him to sleep every night? He is in good health, gets good marks at school and is popular.

Yet when his mother tucks him in and tries to leave, he coaxes and begs: "I can't sleep", until she sits patiently on the bed and pats him.

He has never been unkindly disciplined; has never heard his mother and father quarrel. In most ways, he gets what he wants.

Puzzled.

Dear Puzzled: I couldn't say, from here. He may be so accustomed to having his own way that he merely hangs on to this pleasant method of being lulled to sleep. On the other hand, there are good-natured children who bottle up deep-seated worries and crave the comfort of human company for reassurance. well into their teens.

A child care counselor needs to help the mother in sorting this out. One interview might do it, and the boy needs to unload, this will become evident.

Confidential to Worried: With your husband's medical history of duodenal ulcers, he should be the last one to resort to alcohol for comfort. His new symptoms sound serious.

Sometimes when a person fears he has a serious illness but is still walking around, he is stubborn about seeking medical help. Maybe he thinks if he ignores it, it will go away. But it won't, this time.

Such decisions should be taken out of the hands of disturbed people. Look in your telephone directory for a listing of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Racial, Sexual Bias Sifted from Textbooks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lissila J. Deluz has a quick eye spot both racial and sexual stereotypes in helping the J. B. Lippincott revise its basic series of reading textbooks.

"My basic intent is to have the books show people integrating and inter-reacting and to more adequately represent the broad range of our society," says Mrs. DeLuz, executive editor for language arts in Lippincott's educational publishing division.

An elementary school principal in Washington, D.C., until last June, Mrs. DeLuz is one of the few women executives in educational publishing and possibly the highest-ranking Negro in the field.

Textbook publishers have come under increasing fire of claim in recent years from feminists and leaders of various minorities for the existence of sexual and racial bias in their curriculum materials, and Lippincott was being sensitive to such complaints in seeking out Mrs. DeLuz.

During the last seven months, Mrs. DeLuz has been able to make a number of changes she feels are significant.

In one of the earliest books of the present reading series, for instance, a character says: "Women's advice is never worth two pennies. Yours isn't worth even a penny." That observation was deleted from the revised edition.

"It's true that the advice of the woman in that fairy tale be bad, but we cannot expect school children at that level to distinguish between that woman and all women," Mrs. DeLuz explained.

The 46-year-old editor also noted that the text of a current story was being changed to point out the reason Indians were trying to capture Buffalo Bill was "because he was killing off their food supply.

To show the extent of the changes being made, Mrs. DeLuz cited a current book that had 37 men playing feature roles—and only five women in featured roles. The revised edition gives featured roles to seven men and 30 women.

Mrs. DeLuz's editing and administrative duties are not limited to changing negative depictions of minorities and women, but she said she felt a special obligation in this area because she has had experience that none of the other editors, all white and mostly male, have had.

"When I took this job I had to ask myself if I wanted to be the token black woman," Mrs. DeLuz said. "I decided I did because it would give me an opportunity for input and that was bound to have some good effect. Besides, the next person won't be a token and things will come easier."

Another book contained a reference to a boy looking for a book to read about Babe Ruth. This was changed to have him look for a book about Hall of Fame baseball player Roberto Clemente "to show that while children can and do admire people of different ethnic backgrounds."

In a third story, a boy is told he cannot accompany his father on a trip because someone has to stay at home with mother.

"Of course the implication is that the mother is incompetent. Is more danger of harming herself and allowing the farm to go to ruin if left alone for an instant, and that a young boy is more capable of managing a farm than an adult woman," Mrs. DeLuz observed.

"It may seem harmless to build up the male child's ego as protector, but girls reading the story would get a rather different messages," she said. The revised story has the father say someone must stay home to feed the animals, "a far more rational explanation" that has the son taking over a duty that the father usually performed.

Mrs. DeLuz also noted that several stories in the series included ethnic slurs about Indians and neglected to present the issues involved fairly. She said the new series will delete speech stereotyping "which gives a comic aspect and makes the Indian seem less civilized than the white man."

Hospital Auxiliary Meets

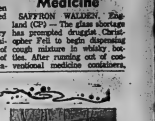
Denise Porter, representing the Belleville Chapter of the Canadian Cancer Society, spoke Tuesday at the monthly meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

Mrs. Porter emphasized the Seven Best Guards Against cancer which the Canadian Cancer Society's education program aims to promote early diagnosis and early treatment of cancer.

Cancer phobia now has become the first topic for the Society's educational program, she said. Efforts are made to stress the survival figures rather than mortality rates.

Mrs. Porter told the women that 50 per cent of diagnosed cancers are being cured.

Mrs. C. D. Ashley, auxiliary president, conducted the business meeting. Highlights of business included the sum of $1,200.99 turned into the treasury, from the Opportunity Shop's efforts, $200.99 from the Coffee Shop. Jean Nelson reported that 144 volunteers had given 1,240 hours of service for the month of February.



A new service will be initiated in the admitting area of the hospital when a coffee and beverage cart will be provided during peak hours of the day.

Mrs. B.E. Burley, chairman of the constitution committee gave the changes for the auxiliary constitution.

City Escapers Settle Into Country Cottage

"At first it was kind of an insane daydream I just kept chewing."

Lena Valnstein sits at a wooden kitchen table in a wood and windows kitchen in an 1830 stone cottage set on a river bank in 2½ acres of land outside Belleville.

Lena and John, from Montreal by way of Toronto, came from the city to the country slowly.

After buying the stone house, then in need of much restoration, they spent weekends here, sleeping on the floor in front of the fireplace on cold nights.

Later Lena moved to the house full time while John finished a commitment to the Ontario Science Centre where he designed exhibits.

Then, two years ago, the Valnsteins moved to the country full-time, spending endless hours tacking stone and filling the roof and moving walls to find, under layers of patchwork, the early spirit of a Scottish stone cottage built by a homesick mill owner.

Veteran gardeners Lena and John — now the parents of seven-month-old Kolja — are planning a planting flock and bees for honey as well as continuing to restore their home.

Finding their dream house in the country was what the Valnsteins call a "total fluke", Religiously searching for a country home for more than a year, they saw the cottage advertised in a Toronto newspaper.

They bought it the next day. "I don't think we wanted to leave Toronto so much as we wanted to come to the country," Lena says. John adds "there were things I felt were lacking in my experience."

They remember that even in Toronto, they didn't live a city life.

Still, though, there were adjustments.

"We like it more and more but we're glad we had a year of week-end orientation. We spent the time committing ourselves," John says.

"It took me a long time to be here myself," Lena says. "I thought of it as this great stone house in the country. I couldn't believe it was our home.

"We were shell shocked."

The shock has kept receding away, leaving a family more and more part of the countryside, a family fond of neighbours — "they're very special people" — to whom they go for advice.

Less and less tied by highways to Toronto, John still commutes a couple of times a month for project assignments.

They're hoping to note complete adapting proper rooms — his a loft with skylights, Lena's a floor pulling room — to allow them to work and live in a self - contained way, turning a country - life daydream into reality.

Valnstein's stone house has stood in spring sunshine for 150 years.

John, Lena and young Kolja Valnstein relax beside the bedroom fireplace.

VON Topic At B&P Club

On Monday evening the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club had as guest speaker Valerie Truax, R.N., of the Victorian Order of Nurses, who, with slides to illustrate her address, described the work of the VON and the operation of its community home nursing service.

Miss Truax stated that the Order has been helping Canadians — regardless of age, race, creed or financial status — for 70 years since it was established by Lady Aberdeen, the wife of a Canadian Governor-General. It now has 86 branches in Canada.

Patients are of all ages ranging from newborn babies to senior citizens. VON nurses are skilled in physiotherapy and other treatments needed by victims of diabetes, cystic fibrosis, multisclerosis, arthritis, stroke and accidents.

In conclusion, Miss Truax described the work of the VON as "challenging and rewarding".

In appreciation for her interesting address and slides, a donation to the VON from the Business and Professional Women's Club was presented to Miss Truax.

Following the speaker's address, the business period, conducted by president Marion McPaul, included the election of the club's money-making projects, presentation of yearly bursaries, and attendance at conferences to be held in Chatham, Vancouver and Buenos Aires.

Whelan Says Subsidy Has Produced Results

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan admitted in the Commons Wednesday that his new beef-subsidy program is not perfect. But, he assured Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), "it's certainly moved a long way in the right direction."

Mr. Horner said the minister's announcement last Friday of a seven-cents-a-pound, subsidy on beef created chaos in the cattle industry. He asked whether the government has reconsidered it.

Mr. Whelan asked whether opposition members had any suggestions to make about the subsidy and was greeted with a chorus of "Resign, resign."

Apparently undismayed, he said he "will be happy to consider them."

The subsidies, to be paid producers, are effective for a limited period on some grades of live cattle with no limit on other grades.

Turner Cool to Plea To Restrict Profits

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner reacted coolly Wednesday to a renewed New Democratic Party request for restriction on corporate profits.

The business community recorded a "inordinately excessive profits" in 1973, including an 81-per-cent fourth-quarter increase by food-processing industries, NDP Leader David Lewis told the Commons. He asked the government to take action.

Mr. Turner agreed profits are healthy but said he has told business that there is no need to pass all production-cost increases on to the public. Some could be absorbed.

Part of the profit increase could be attributed to high inventories and, much of the additional money is going into new investment, he added.

He said this produces positive results, including new jobs.

Security Increased

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (Reuter) — The United States Navy has increased security around the San Diego Naval Base where Prince Charles's ship is docked after receiving reports of Wednesday's attack on his sister, Princess Anne, in London.

Visitors were barred from the Royal navy frigate Jupiter. Cars entering the dock area were searched and all buses, including those of top officers, were closely inspected by guards at the gates of the dockyard.

An Art Form

Model Railroading Called Art Form

VANCOUVER (CP) — Model railroading isn't playing with toys, it's operating an art form.

"What's wrong with a little imagination?" asked Cec Bradwin, 74. "If a man's doing what makes him happy there's nothing on earth wrong with it."

He was working on a "prototype layout" installed by the National Model Railroad Association (NMRA) as part of a hobby show sponsored by the British Columbia Lions Society.

As he spoke, he soldered a crack in a track that earlier caused derailment of a southbound freight. The engine lay nearby where it had tumbled down a rocky cliff.

"We're authentic right down to our mishaps," said Mr. Bradwin as he ran a file over the repair on the track.

It'd rather do this than sit back and worry about growing old. Nose stand aside. We're going to get her fired up again."

Mr. Bradwin spotted two boys watching the train rumble over the repaired track and threw a switch, making the engine's whistle give two long howls as it passed the pair.

Model railroading has grown up to become an addiction of lawyers and brokers, accountants and plumbers.

The display layout is 22 feet long and 11 feet wide. Inside the 253 square feet of board and hand-carved plaster is a Lilliputian world of two-foot mountains and six-inch deep valleys, old villages, and train yards complete with a sooty look.

Everything in the project, made five years ago, was fashioned by hand and cut to the exacting scale of 3.5 millimetres to the foot.

About 50 club members worked 2,500 man-hours on the project.

There are 13,000 hand-cut wooden ties under 225 feet of track.

Some of the trains were built from kits, but most started as a flat piece of brass which was hammered and shaped until it became a copy in miniature, exact to the rivets, of some grand old steam engine.

"The old engines were living things," said Cyril Meadows, a club member who helped build the layout.

"You can't use them for anything," he said, pointing to models of boats and airplanes. "You build a lot of them and your house starts to look like a museum.

"But a train is different. You can always use a train.

"It's an art form. We recreate a little history."

There are 26,000 NMRA members in Canada and the United States who agree.

Although the hobbyists delight in showing off their work, they are extremely touchy about people who touch.

"But you really can't blame them for wanting to reach out," said Mr. Bradwin. "It looks so real."

Heart Danger

LONDON (CP) — More persons in "soft-water" areas die of heart attacks than in hard-water communities, says the Medical Research Council. But a council spokesman added that the group still doesn't know enough to recommend that residents harden their water supply if it is naturally soft.

Record Price Paid

LONDON (CP) — The world record auction price for a historic vintage motorcar more than tenfold during recent bidding at Christie's, the London auctioneers. Norwegian dealer paid $25,000 for an 1901 panoramic, wet-plate camera. The previous record price stood at $2,500.

Merrie England Is History Show

LONDON (CP) — Merrie England, bratchnell of history buff Warwick Charlton, is an attempt to present history as an exciting experience for both children and adults.

Combining entertainment and education will be a physical recreation of 15 historical periods on a 450-acre site in the Midlands.

New York Highways Collapsing

NEW YORK (Reuter) — An old chanson says that New York will be a great town "if they ever get round to finishing it."

There is serious doubt that they ever will.

Business leans along to the rhythm of calculators and tickers on the cloud-shrouded floors of the city's skyscrapers, while at ground level the traffic picks its way through a minefield of potholes.

New York City's highways are collapsing.

This winter 250 patch-up crews have been busy filling in the cracks, crevices and chasms which open up daily under the pounding of traffic and ravages of ice. But they hardly touch to cope.

Calls from the public reporting new potholes reached 500 a day during the January snowstorms.

On Manhattan Avenue—Lexington, Madison or Fifth—is free of craters. There is hardly a crossing street without heavy steel plates covering cracks and the crews get around to fixing them.

It took the sudden collapse of a stretch of arterial highway in December before it was declared treacherous and a truck driver jumped for his life as the road gave way.

The city's buses survive with shock absorbers that make them sway like ships. But private cars have been buried onto sidewalks after driver plowed into an unexpected pothole.

The West Side Highway, a six-lane elevated expressway which handles at least half the volume of daily commuter traffic into Manhattan was closed along two of its busiest sections in February.

The cars detoured through residential streets while engineers examined the structure for metal fatigue in the supports.

Atop exclusive Central Park South, paving gives way to wood as construction goes on beneath.

Transport engineers reply to accusations that they are dragging their feet on new roadbuilding by saying they want to be sure that the present is not outmoded in another 10 years.

Motorists, however, suspect more devious motives behind the city's poor road maintenance.

Cars have always been welcome in bottleneck New York and increases in the 12 toll increases at almost every bridge and tunnel into Manhattan are being considered as a further deterrent.

Illegally parked cars are towed away by police with merciless efficiency. The return of his car a driver faces a $30 retrieval fee and a further $35 fine.

A day's space in a private lot costs anywhere up to $7.

Spanning the lake will be a replica of London Bridge as it was in 1830—1,000 feet long and complete with shops, stalls and sideshows.

At one end of the bridge will be the Elizabethan period, dominated by the Globe Theatre and the Mermaid Tavern. The Globe will stage a never-ending Shakespeare with Will Shakespeare himself on view each day and with members of the audience getting the chance to jump up from the pit and declaim.

After a stroll over the bridge: stopping to watch craftsmen at work and perhaps buy a sample of their labor, the visitors will be in the Restoration period, where they can rest their feet and relax modern technology portray a parade of events starting with the death of Cromwell and including a spectacular Fire of London.

"We are going to have splitscreens, stereophonics, holographic techniques and other means of producing illusions," Charlton said.

Although this is "Merrie" England working models or actors will offer a million of beheadings and hangings, thumbscrews and public punishments such as the stocks and the ducking stool.

Literature too will have its place. To illustrate Pilgrim's Progress by John Bunyan a series of nine circular mazes has been devised, each representing a stage in the Progress.

"Unlike other mazes, this one is not flat, but like a castle, is layered, levels," said Charlton. "You will reach the Celestial City if you succeed in passing through all of them. But if you are not an exemplary Christian there will be a separate exit from each maze."

Situated in the most densely populated area of Britain Merrie England is expected to welcome at least seven million visitors in the first year, which is scheduled to be 1977. Eventually the organizers expect more than 15 million if transport facilities are improved sufficiently.

SNAKE SURVIVED

As part of studies on metabolism, researchers at the National Aeronautics Space Administration fed a snake only water for 365 days. It survived without ill effects.

Once-reluctant French Now Supermarket Fans

PARIS (CP) — After ignoring them for a long time, the French are showing a keen interest in immense American-style supermarkets and they now can be found across most of the country.

The expansion of these large commercial centres was slowed by the traditional French attachment to specialty shops and small neighborhood businesses, places where clients know each other and congregate after work.

Factors leading to their expansion included migration towards large urban centres, rural migration, refrigerators, increases in the cost of living and growing awareness of the bargains available in these immense markets where prices have been found to be about 13 per cent lower than in fashionable shops.

The number of supermarkets has more than trebled in six years, passing to 2,574 from 821. Supermarkets, with a floor area of more than 80,000 square feet and having a large assortment of perishables and non-perishables, have grown to 250 from 12.

Super and hypermarkets last year accounted for 27 per cent of the country's retail food sales, and 13 per cent of total retail sales.

They reported sales of about $2.5 billion, an increase of $2.1 billion over 1972 and $3.1 billion more than in 1968, and employ 39 per cent of the retail business labor force.

While small retailers cannot carry the cost of large-scale publicity, the giants take full advantage of the latest publicity techniques.

A large number of small retailers, who feel threatened by the growth of these large surface enterprises, are grouping together in chain stores and cut-purchasing groups. As a result they can offer their goods at prices slightly below their independent counterparts.

Others have adopted the self-service method which lowers personnel costs and allows for lower prices.

Sleeper Sickness Spreads

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Researchers are studying sleeper sickness in beef cattle to find out whether a new vaccine is needed to fight it.

Dr. Peter Little, who is heading the study, said the disease was first observed eight years ago in Colorado and reached Ontario four years ago.

"It now ranks third among deadly neurological ailments affecting feedlot cattle."

Dr. Little is associate professor of pathology at the Ontario Veterinary College (OVC), which is investigating the disease in co-operation with the provincial ministry of agriculture and food.

Sleeper sickness is thrombo-embolic meningo-encephalitis, also called TEME or thrombo.

Dr. Little said: "The cattle affected are almost all of Western Canada origin. About four to six weeks after shipping, there may be sudden deaths or signs of nagging and runny eyes and noses in the group.

"Animals observed sick usually appear stiff in the legs and neck and may knuckle over on the fetlocks. Once the animals have gone down, they're not

Official Plan Changes Predicted

City residents expressed their concern over the limited number of serviced residential lots available in Belleville during discussion following the presentation of the city's draft official plan at a Quinte Home Builders Association meeting Wednesday.

Fielding builders' questions after a brief 15-minute summation of the plan's main points was speaker Ben Kenney, Quinte Planning Board director. The draft plan charts future development in Belleville over the next 30 years.

Builders admitted that currently there is not a great deal of serviced land available, but stressed that the plan's main purpose is to delineate land-use over a 30-year period.

The plan does not affect the immediate future, he said. Rather policy decisions as to where services in Belleville could go are made by city council.

The planning director was responding to a question put by Gerald Joyce, Quinte Real Estate board president-elect of Belleville realty firm.

Saying that the lack of serviced building lots has reached a "critical situation in the city", he asked whether an exact figure for land ready for immediate development was available. Estimates of 700 acres and 1,200 acres have been "guesstimated", he said.

Mr. Kenny could not immediately give exact available figures.

Concern was also expressed that "unrealistic" restrictions made for changes to the draft official plan either through public meetings or direct submissions to the planning board be noted.

In response, Mr. Kenny said the professional staff and consultants, Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates are currently evaluating minutes from the recent public presentation of the draft plan.

In mid-April, a "knock-on-down, drag-em-out" meeting is planned for the entire Quinte to Planning Board, he said. After "final work by the staff, the director will present the draft plan to the board for final review and approval.

"There's going to be a lot of changes made," Mr. Kenny said. "There's no doubt about that. There's a lot of material that we have to ponder."

Whether the plan will be approved by the board during this meeting is yet unclear. Numerous requests for draft plan alterations may force another meeting.

Tail-end Steering—and All Automatic

Dolly Has a Mind of It's Own

Cornering problems associated with delivery of longer and heavier concrete beams will be a thing of the past for Warren Whitley Haulage and Stanley Structures (Wilton) Concrete Products' newly purchased haulage equipment.

The new equipment purchased by Whitley Haulage is four-axle automatic steering dollies that carry the tail end of the 70-foot beams manufactured by the Belleville plant specializing in pre-stressed concrete beams.

Automatic steering dollies of course are not entirely new — Whitley's now has several three-axle units — but until the development of four-axle models there have been limitations as to the weight of beams that could be handled.

Tuesday afternoon Whitley's put one of their units through demonstration paces and after negotiation of circuitous ramps on Highways 401 and 37 the report was favorable.

"It worked very well," commented Hugh Gregory. "We didn't even touch a snow guide once."

The concrete beam used for the demonstration was 102 feet in length with a weight of 37 tons.

The four-axle dolly, equipment can handle the longest beams made and weights up to 55 and 60 tons.

With the new equipment, Mr. Gregory said even the tightest right-angle corners could be negotiated.

With the automatic self-steering dollies, the rear end of the long load follows generally in the same track as the front end-tractor unit instead of cutting the corner at a sharper angle.

And if the corner is particularly tight, the driver with controls in his cab can override the automatic dolly steering.

Whitley's will be receiving delivery of five of the new dolly units at a cost of over $20,000 each.

They are built at Truck Engineering in Woodstock and presently a demonstration was believed to be the first time four four-axle jobs had been put to use under actual highway operating conditions.

The 102-foot beam used for yesterday's demonstration will be delivered to a bridge construction job west of Toronto.

More Real Jobseekers

Despite declining winter unemployment, Belleville-area employers are receiving more job applications than ever.

But, there's an easy explanation, Belleville and District Employment Committee was told Wednesday.

Stricter guidelines for justifying unemployment insurance claims have been laid down by federal authorities.

The committee was told there were 876 applicants registered for jobs with Canada Manpower in Belleville in February — a dramatic decline from a month earlier and February 1973.

But, queried one committee member, if the statistics were true, how come he'd been told manufacturers were having more job applicants than ever. One employer, advertising a single job was "swamped."

Meghan Sterrie, manager of Unemployment Insurance Canada's Belleville office said he probably knew the answer.

Those seeking unemployment insurance these days must automatically register with Canada Manpower for work.

New UIC rules require all claimants drawing insurance after 12 weeks to prove they've been "bound to the country seeking employment."

Skilled Labor Shortage Prompts Industry Survey

City industries will be surveyed in an attempt to clarify reasons and possible solutions to the shortage of skilled labor.

The study will be undertaken by the Belleville and District Employment Committee, which Wednesday night was preoccupied with the current scarcity of trained industrial workers.

The survey was proposed by committee chairman Fred Bemis, city industrial commissioner, as one way of discovering how industry and education facilities might interlock to ease the problem.

He hoped to produce the results of the survey next month.

It was the latest move by the committee which has become a community forum for debating the problem in the past three months.

The ongoing discussion to date revealed a problem as serious as its roots seem complex. Wednesday's debate again divided causes among industry, the education system, parents, students and teachers.

Just how urgently industry views the problem was emphasized by David E. Valcamp, plant manager, Mobil Chemical Plastics, one of the city's newer industries.

Mr. Valcamp warned that industry could face a "grave" long-range problem if training standards for industrial skills were not properly directed. If the education system concentrated merely on job retraining, industry could "be in a heck of a situation in five years."

Reginald Tucker, Hastings County social services director, pondered why students weren't introduced to the job market atmosphere as a part of their education. Such methods already had some approval when professions were involved.

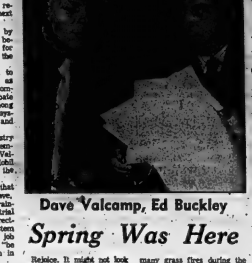
Mr. Valcamp said he welcomed the suggestion. In education, he said, the emphasis on "less been placed on professional rather than the skilled trades."

Fred Charles, Ontario labor ministry's apprenticeship branch, said on-the-job training in modern, sophisticated industry was difficult to evolve. Placing a high school student on a production line posed problems.

"I entirely agree, if we could get it to work," he said. But in the case of most industries I think you'll have to give them some incentive to take them on," he added.

"Industry is running out of skilled people— isn't that incentive enough?" replied Mr. Tucker.

Reginald Loader, Loyalist College board member said there was a tendency among students to opt for business and arts courses over technical programs. If possible, parents don't want their offspring working in a factory instead of a profession.



"Is that the fault of the parents, or is that the fault of early school guidance?" interjected Mr. Valcamp.

Jim Staveley, committee vice-chairman said he believed career motivation should be extended back to the public school level.

Edward Buckley, director of Loyalist's retraining division, suggested young people were also shying away from skilled trades because of the mental discipline demanded.

Skilled work implies precision, accuracy, and mathematical and scientific study.

They won't concentrate on the levels demanded," he said.

Employment Committee Eyes North

Potential developments in the Bancroft area caught the attention of the Belleville and District Employment Committee Wednesday.

The committee pondered possible need for construction training courses for an area some members felt was on the verge of expansion.

Among possible developments they mentioned was reopening of Faraday uranium mine, a big shopping plaza proposed for the village, and a small-million-dollar residential centre planned for the Dickey Lake area, 20 miles north.

The committee was told 21 people were now taking Canada Manpower retraining courses operated by Loyalist College in Bancroft. This compared to about 50 last year.

This led committee members to ponder recent reports the college was contemplating phasing out its Bancroft satellite campus.

Edward Buckley, director of Loyalist's retraining division told the meeting: "I'm in charge of it. I don't know anything about closing it out."

Stitching It In

In a quiet corner of her Chatterton home, Pat Mertl carefully embroiders a cushion cover. In her day, and days after, she'll work on a wall-hanging the Belleville cultural awards committee has commissioned for presentation to an unnamed individual judged to have contributed markedly to the cultural life of the city. Pat's work will be presented during the official opening of Artafest '74, April 2.

Wallhanging for Winner

In the next few days, Pat Mertl will be putting needle to yarn and both will been hard-ing as she diligently works to complete a wallhanging to be presented to the recipient of the 1973 Belleville cultural award April 2.

The wallhanging, plus a grant and commemorative plaque, will be presented to an as-yet unnamed individual during the official opening of Artafest '74, a month-long program sponsored by the Quinte Arts Council.

Initially formed in 1969, the city cultural awards committee recently commissioned the craftsman to produce the embroidered wallhanging.

The award is presented to that individual, judged by the committee to have contributed to the cultural life of Belleville. Provincial, national or international achievements commended — recognition is one of the criteria for selection. Four awards have been presented to date.

Pat plans to stitch the hanging in Persian wool yarn in earthy colors, colors she believes was the recipient would appreciate.

Sitting in her RR1, Foxboro home she spoke of her work in embroidery and needlepoint — crafts she enjoys the most.

"I've been dabbling for 18-12 years," she said. But only in the last two has she been studying under another craftsman.

"I'm pretty well self-taught. But the last two summers I've studied with Marie Aiken in Gravenhurst."

For the past seven years she has been teaching — currently at the Queen Victoria community school and through Loyalist extension courses. Teaching, however, started with the YWCA in Kitchener where she immersed herself in what she called an excellent craft section at city libraries.

After a five-year stay in Kitchener, the 33-year-old mother of two moved to her Chatterton address a year and a half ago. Her husband teaches psychology at Loyalist College.

Previously, Pat was commissioned, along with University of Waterloo head of the fine arts department Nancy-Lou Patterson, to produce a processional banner in applique and embroidery for a church in Leicestershire, England.

Point Anne Girl Hurt

POINT ANNE — A six year-old Point Anne girl was rushed to Belleville General Hospital late yesterday afternoon after she was struck by a car as she ran across Highway 2 near here.

Kathy Calloway, 6, of RR 4 Belleville, was hit by a car driven by Gary Lorne Vance, 22, also of RR 4 Belleville, as she ran across the highway around 4 p.m.

The girl is reported to be in satisfactory condition at Belleville General Hospital where she is being held for observation for head injuries.

Officers at the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police say that no charges are being laid as a result of the incident.

Garden Club Hears Experts

The beauty of the changing seasons was the topic of a slide presentation by Victor Lord of Picton at the Belleville Garden Club meeting Tuesday evening at Harry J. Clarke School. In contrast to the beauty of the Quinte Area, Mr. Lord also showed slides illustrating the destructiveness of various polluting factors and emphasized the need for constructive measures.

In response to questions shown in vegetable gardens, a panel headed by our Larry Jackson answered questions from the audience. The panel of Stan Barber, Bill Gebbecole, and Ken Gardiner suggested solutions to many of the problems encountered in the cultivation of vegetables.

Phil Dodds of Picton closed the meeting with an explanation of the plans for the new Quinte Fair and asked garden club members to participate actively in the horticultural section.

Midnight Streaker Hits Green Door

The Quinte Hotel had a bit more than its scheduled entertainment last night.

While the hotel's entertainer, Gypsy Jim was into his number, a streaker was also into his. Patrons of the Green Door witnessed the male streaker dart past the room after midnight wearing shoes and a smile.

He joins the list of other streakers in the city. On Saturday night, a streaker wearing a bag over his head, strutted his wares through the Mad Mechanic.

And the Memorial Arena was the scene of the first hockey streak as a player from the Pickering team took a turn around the ice with just his skates after his team won to the Bobcats.

For the record, the first recorded streak in Belleville occurred March 6, when a male streaker was spotted in the Smith Crescent Area.

Clerk's Party March 29

City hall employees are giving a retirement party for City Clerk Adam Stalker, who is retiring from office at the end of April. The dinner and dance will be held at the Oddfellows Hall in the Bayview area, Friday, March 29, and is open to all. Tickets are available at city hall.

Blind Skiers

Marmora native Lorne McKee and his wife Loretta, were among early participants this year in Canada's first cross-country ski program for the blind, sponsored by the CNIB in Toronto. The couple Mr. McKee has been blind since birth, his wife has eight per cent vision — two years ago went skiing in Switzerland.

Spring Was Here

Rejoice. It might not look like it, but spring is here.

Late yesterday afternoon, Belleville firefighters were called on to put out a grass fire in a vacant lot near 135 Centre Street.

Deputy Fire Chief Bob Emerson says that he believes the fire was started by children who were enjoying the last few days of their spring break.

The firefighters didn't have too much trouble handling the fire since melting snow had put most of it out by the time they got there.

Firefighters don't expect they will have to put out too many grass fires during the next few days though.

CFB Trenton weatherman say that Belleville area residents can expect between three and five inches of snow on this, the first day of spring.

The snow, accompanied by gusty winds that will range between 15 and 30 degrees, is expected to stop falling this evening.

Friday should be sunny and cold with temperatures reaching a high of 30 degrees during the day. By evening, however, the sky will become cloudy and there may be some snow flurries.

Skating Fun

This is the week school children are out on their winter break. And just so they won't miss school too much while they are on holidays, various city organizations have put on programs for them. The Quinte Kiwanis Club is sponsoring public swims at the Black Hawk pool this week while the Kinsmen Club is providing free ice time at Memorial Arena for holidaying youngsters. As can be seen in the picture, the students are taking full advantage of the offer. Tomorrow from 1:30 to 3 p.m. is the last day for free skating.

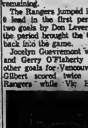
After Wings Nip Habs, Redmond Feels 'Super'

By GLENN COLE ...
The Canadian Press

On Jan. 12, 1971, Montreal Canadiens traded Mickey Redmond, Guy Charron and Billy Collins to Detroit Red Wings for left winger Frank Mahovlich.

Redmond came back Wednesday night to haunt his old teammates by scoring three times as Detroit outlasted Montreal 7-6 in one of four National Hockey League games.

But the Canadiens were able to maintain their three-point edge over New York Rangers in the battle for second in the NHL East as the Rangers beat Toronto Maple Leafs 7-5 to Vancouver Canucks. In other games New York Islanders and Pittsburgh Penguins tied 1-1 and Buffalo Sabres upset Chicago Black Hawks 3-2.



Red Wings, 7 Canadiens 6

"I feel just super," said Redmond who traveled his season's goal total to 40 with his second three-goal game of the year and fourth of his career. Redmond is the hottest scorer in the league in the second half with 28 goals in 31 games.

"Have I had a game like that before? I don't think so.

"This was one of those games. It was wide open for both teams."

Redmond was set up twice by Charron and on his third goal, with a little more than eight minutes gone in the third period, he took a drop pass from Bill Hogaboam.

Canucks 7 Rangers 5 . . .

John Gould's goal with 70 seconds remaining in the third period snapped a 5-5 tie and Denis Ververgaert added an insurance goal for the Canucks into an empty net with 31 seconds remaining.

The Rangers jumped into a 3-0 lead in the first period but Vancouver got two goals by Don Lever late in the period brought the Canucks back into the game.

Jocelyn Guevremont with two and Gerry O'Flaherty got the other goals for Vancouver. Rod Gilbert scored twice for the Rangers while Vic Hadfield, Red Sotting and Bill Fairbairn added one each.

Islanders 1 Penguins 1 . . .

Ralph Stewart's 30th goal of the season at 12:15 of the third period gave the Islanders their tie with Pittsburgh. Jean Pronovost scored for the Penguins in the first period, which featured 54 minutes in penalties including three fighting majors to each club and a game misconduct to Bert Marshall of New York.

Sabres 3 Black Hawks 2 . . .

Gilles Perreault scored twice in the final 12 minutes to lead the Sabres. Jerry Korab got the other Buffalo goal with Jim Pappin and Len Frig replying for the Hawks.

Chicago defenceman Bin White sat out the game as a result of a suspension handed him by the NHL for allegedly shoving referee Ron Wicks while disputing a goal in last Sunday's game against Atlanta Flames.

Aeros Wrap Up First In WHA West Section

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Crusaders' bid to capture second place in the East Division of the World Hockey Association was thwarted Wednesday by Houston Aeros, who completed a successful quest for division honors in the West.

The Aeros defeated the Crusaders 5-4 to clinch first place while Edmonton Oilers rallied to a 2-2 overtime tie with New England Whalers and New Jersey Knights defeated Los Angeles Sharks 8-5.

The Aeros now have 93 points and are beyond reach of the runner-up Minnesota Fighting Saints. The Oilers moved into third place in the West, one point ahead of Winnipeg Jets.

A Cleveland victory would have vaulted the Crusaders into second place, two points ahead of Toronto Toros, who "face Houston tonight. The loss left Cleveland tied for second with Quebec Nordiques two points back in fourth spot.

Edmonton Oilers meet Vancouver Blazers while the Oilers visit Quebec in other games tonight.

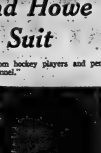
Houston 5 at Cleveland 4

Gordie Howe held 3-3 lead in the first period on goals by Don Blackburn and Tom Webster before Rusty Patenaude and Ed Joyal scored for Edmonton in the second. The third and overtime periods were goalless.

New Jersey 8 at Los Angeles 5

After a wild second period in which seven goals were scored, Terry Ho win the contest between the tall-enders in each division of the league.

Dineen and Howe Named in Suit



CLEVELAND (AP) — A Cleveland man is seeking $25,000 damages in a suit filed against Bill Dineen, Gordie Howe and Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association and the Cleveland Arena.

The action filed in Cuyahoga County common pleas court by William Petroff stems from an altercation during a game at the arena Jan. 30 between the Aeros and Cleveland Crusaders. Petroff seeks $18,000 in compensatory and punitive damages from Dineen, coach of the Aeros, Howe, their star right wing, and the team and $5,000 in compensatory damages from Cleveland Holding Corp., the arena.

Petroff alleges that Dineen "struck the assaulting area, engaged in a fight with a spectator behind Petroff and placed Petroff and his wife in fear and apprehension of their safety."

The suit also alleges that Howe left the ice, entered the spectators' area for the hockey gear and struck Petroff from behind with "deliberate, malicious and with great force and violence."

Cleveland Holding Corp., was named in the suit because of what Petroff called "inadequate precautions" to protect spectators from "attack and abuse

GORDIE HOWE
Howe said after the altercation that Petroff "started shoving me, so I took a rap at him."

Spitfires Need One To Win It

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Windsor Spitfires moved to within one victory of clinching the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League championship by beating Chatham Maroons 6-4 Wednesday before 3,200 fans.

Windsor now leads the eight-point series 3-2 with the fifth game today in Windsor.

After falling behind 2-0 in the first period, Windsor rallied on goals by Frank Bathe and John Riley, then got single goals from Mike Reade, Scott Miller, Steve Keech and Mike Sovey.

Chatham scorers were Doug Simpson, Rick Stickney, Dave Easton and Scott McKenzie.

Windsor outshot Chatham 38-34 and took six of eight minor penalties.

Foresters Nip Flyers

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Brantford Foresters, with a goal at 19:50 of the final period, edged Barrie Flyers 5-4 in the third game of their Ontario Hockey Association Senior A semi-final series.

Jim Reid led Brantford's scoring with two goals while Al Osborne, Carl Ahlstein and Mike Corbett added single markers.

Corbett scored the winner with 2:50 remaining.

Steve Sly, Corby, Adams, Paul Heron and Ron Robinson replied for the Flyers.

Brantford outshot Barrie 36-30 before 900 fans.

Barrie leads the best-of-seven series 3-1. The next game is Brantford Friday and the fifth game is back in Barrie Sunday.

Nine minor penalties were called, seven to Brantford, and a misconduct penalty.

Barrie's goaltender Ernie Miller was replaced at the beginning of the final period by Ron Waterson while Brantford's Stan Worcs played the full game.

Paille Boosts Robins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Veteran goaltender Marcel Paille gave the American League playoffs hopes of Richmond Robins a big shot Wednesday night when he spanked them to a 3-1 win over Baltimore Clippers.

The 41-year-old native of Shawinigan Falls, Que., limited the Clippers on four breaks, aways and ended the game as the Robins moved into a three-way tie for the fourth and final playoff spot in the South Division.

Paille, who broke into professional hockey in 1955, blanked the Clippers until 17:04 of the second period when Brian Murphy scored a tying goal.

Larry Wright put the Robins back in front with eight seconds to go in the period and Richard Cowick added an insurance marker in the third period. Doug Volmar scored the other Richmond goal.

The Robins, Virginia Red Wings and Jacksonville Barons each have 33 points, but the Robins have two more games left to play than their rivals.

Baltimore Clippers missed a chance to overtake first-place Hershey in the South Division. The Bears drew 4-2 to Nova Scotia Voyageurs, but remained one point in front.

Cincinnati Swords tripped the Wings 4-1 and Jacksonville Barons whipped New Haven Nighthawks 8-2 in Wednesday's other games.

Voyageurs 4 Bears 2

Pete Scultz scored the first four goals for the Voyageurs, who stretched their unbeaten streak to five games and moved within one point of the third-place Nighthawks in the AHL North Division. Jim Wiley scored both Hershey goals.

Swords 4 Wings 1

Peter McNab scored two for the Swords. Steve Richardson and Billy Inglis collected the other Cincinnati goals while Meehan Bonnar spoiled a shutout bid by Sword goalie Tim Regan.

Reds 6 Nighthawks 2

BMHA Playoffs

Peewee Minor

Sigma Unlimited, undefeated through the regular season, kept rolling along as the playoffs opened, blanking second place Kinsmen Lumber 4-0.

John Ricketts potted four goals. Bill Neis posted the shutout. Motorland Chrysler defeated Bellewood Lumber 5- 3; 7 and 2. Construction beat the Gems 5-1; Ellis Printing won from Toby's Tavern 4-3, while Tim Horton Donuts overpowered Kings 5-1.

Circle TV dumped pennant winning Belleville Glass 8-2 as Mike Gauthier bagged three goals. Billy Carson had three goals in Tilcon Steel Motors' 7-2 win over Bowes and Cocks. Bob's Body Shop hung a 7-2 loss on Ideal Vendors with John Belanger coring three times. Lou Williams edged Canadian Legion 5-3; Dairy Queen won over Bell Shaw's 4-1 and Belleville Conductors outscored Y's Men 3-1.

Melee in Bramalea

Lineman Bob Starrett cringes in the midst of this melee at Victoria Park Arena in Bramalea. Paul King, Bobcats, plants the fist on the chin of the Blues Mike Forbes (4), as Tim Yohn, Rob Foster (8) and Jim Richardson (18) all Bobcats, protect the rear. When King connected with the solid right, Blues Ted Bonham (16) decided to skate in and help Forbes. That was Bonham's first mistake. His second mistake was trying to get past Bobcat Dave Taylor who joined the fray. Bonham and Taylor ended up with fighting majors and game misconducts and King and Forbes got majors. Starrett, the linesman, got a fat lip, and Bramalea won the game 6-5.

Four Double Winners

TRENTON—The defending tournament champion and a substitute for a substitute were two of four teams to make their first day of action in the Golden Hawk Midget Hockey Tournament here Wednesday, a big success.

Ottawa Nepean, winner of the tourney in 1972, Campbellford, Oshawa Kiwanis and Brampton Legion each posted two wins in as many starts as the tournament moved through its third full day.

Nepean got an argument from both squads it met Wednesday. In its first start, the Ottawa team scored the winner with just 14 seconds remaining in a 4-3 defeat of Scarboro. Against North Bay, Nepean pulled out a 5-4 win in overtime.

Campbellford replaced Thornhill in the list of tournament entries. Thornhill had taken Syracuse, New York's place after the U.S. team backed out. And then Thornhill was unable to fill its commitment.

At any rate, Campbellford proved its worth in games with Kingston and West Ferris. It was Campbellford over Kingston 4-2 and West Ferris 3-2.

The Oshawa team edged Agincourt 2-1 and got by Aurora Majors 4-3 while Brampton outscored Smiths Falls 5-1 before nipping Ottawa West 5-4.

In other Wednesday games, Aurora Majors thanked Greenwood, Nova Scotia 8-0. The Greenwood team out of the running, filled in for Bay Ridges who dropped out in spite of offers by tournament officials to supply transportation. Ottawa West trimmed Galt 4-1; North Bay took a 3-2 squeaker from Gloucester and West Ferris edged Aurora Minors 5-4.

Tournament action continues for the rest of the week. Belleville's Lions Majors and Yardmen Miners make their next starts Friday morning.

Friday at 8.30, Lions meet Oromocto, New Brunswick and at 2.40, Yardmen hook up with Kingston Township Majors.

Trenton Quinte Ice Products team is also idle until Friday when the host club meets an opponent yet to be determined, at 1.10 p.m.

Young Swiss Rink Tops Gervais

Bern, Switzerland (CP) — Experience may be a good teacher, but it could be that Wally Ursuliak is better.

At least, that is a conclusion that could have been drawn after the sixth round of the World Curling Championship Wednesday when Switzerland beat Canada 9-3.

Ursuliak of Edmonton, who played lead on Ron Gervais 1961 world champion rink, has helped coach the young Swiss team—and boy — apparently learned a lot.

While Gervais was a world champion 13 years ago and has been curling for 25 years, his rink wasn't good enough for the Swiss, falling behind in the first end and never recovering.

In today's seventh round the games scheduled are: Ireland vs Italy, France vs Sweden, Scotland vs Germany, the United States vs Switzerland and Denmark vs Norway.

In the eighth round it is: Canada vs Sweden, Switzerland vs Scotland, Norway vs France, Denmark vs Germany and the U.S. vs Italy.

After six rounds the Swiss are alone at the top of the 15-team standing with a 6-0 won-lost record, next comes Sweden at 5-1 and then Canada and the U.S. at 4-2. Germany is 3-3, Scotland, Denmark and Norway 2-4 and Italy and France 1-5.

Other sixth-round results: Sweden 9 Italy 2. Denmark 4 Scotland 3 in an extra end, Norway 7 Germany 5, and the U.S. 12 France 7.

In the fifth round, Canada beat Scotland 3-2, Switzerland beat Germany 8-4, Sweden beat the U.S. 5-4, Norway beat Italy 8-7 and France edged Denmark 5-4.

The Swiss-Canada game received an attention of a crowd of 7,000 at the Allmend ice rink.

The Swiss crew of skip Peter Attinger, 23, third Bernd Attinger, the skip's 20-year-old brother, second Mathias Neumeckwander, 31, and Jurg Geiler, 20, stole three in the first end and never looked back.

The Canadian crew of Gervais, third Ron Anton, second Warren Hansen and lead Darrel Sutton were struggling throughout.

Line scores:

Fifth Round
Scotland	010 001 000 0—2
Canada	100 110 000 0—3
Sixth Round

Maury Shows Them How

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Dodgers are in high gear this major league baseball exhibition season, as usual.

The man who is helping keep the tradition alive is Maury Wills who set the record of 104 stolen bases while playing shortstop for the Dodgers.

Wills is coaching base runners and his prize pupil is Dave Lopes who stole two bases Wednesday as the Dodgers won their fourth consecutive exhibition game, 5-2 over Cincinnati.

California Angels and Milwaukee, Cleveland versus San Francisco and San Diego against Oakland were postponed because of rain in Arizona.

The Dodgers stole five bases against the Reds and Lopes has stolen seven of the Dodgers' 21 bases this spring. Lopes also singled in the decisive run against Cincinnati.

Larry Dierker and Fred Scherman combined to hold Montreal hitless through eight innings before Larry Lintz got a one-out ninth-inning single off Houston reliever Jim York.

Jeff Burroughs did it all for Texas against Minnesota, hitting a triple, a home run and two singles, driving in three runs.

Tax Tips Student Can Deduct Course Fee

For further information, call the District Taxation Office. If you live in a tall area, ask your long-distance operator for ZENITH 6-8000 and your call will be placed without charge.

Q. I realize I may not claim tuition fees paid to an educational institution if the fee does not exceed $55. However, last year I took several courses, each with a fee of $10 or less, but the total for the year is more than $55. May I claim these tuition fees when filing my income tax return?

A. Provided story otherwise qualify, these will now be deductible if they were paid to the same educational institution. It is the total of fees paid to the educational institution that counts.

Q. Last year I paid my brother's university tuition fees. Can I claim any of these when I am filing my income tax return?

A. No. Only the student may claim tuition fees against his own income.

Q. What receipts or certificates must I enclose with my income tax form when claiming my tuition fees?

A. You should ask the educational institution for the special receipt or certificate approved for income tax purposes. If, because you are claiming tuition expenses for the calendar year rather than for the academic year, your claim does not equal the amount shown on this certificate, specify the portion of the amount on the certificate that you are claiming for the calendar year, and the amount carried by the certificate for the immediately preceding period.

Q. What does the Guide mean when it says tuition fees claimed must be supported by attaching to the return the approved form or certificate issued by the educational institution?

A. Certain requirements must be met before the claim for tuition is acceptable. The educational institution will issue to you a tuition certificate with the necessary information for income tax purposes. Counter or cash receipts are not acceptable.

Q. I am a student at a Canadian university. How do I calculate the tuition fees allowable?

A. Tuition fees supported by the proper certificate may be claimed for any 12-month period beginning in the taxation year, which means for 1973 you could claim either on the calendar year or the academic year 1973-74.

Q. I am a student at university and have a part-time job which becomes a full-time job during the summer months. My earnings are more than $1,500 a year. I pay my own tuition fees out of my savings and understand that I can deduct these fees from my income for tax purposes. If I do this, my income will be reduced to under $1,500. Does this mean that my father can claim me as a dependent?

A. Yes, if your father supported you during the year. However, the $500 exemption is reduced by the amount that your income exceeds $1,150.

Example:

Maximum exemption $550.
Deduct income over $1,150 ($1,300 less $1,150) 150
Allowable exemption $400

In addition, a special exemption of $50 a month is allowable for full-time trainees and students attending a wide range of schools and post secondary institutions.

Opera Company Home

TORONTO — On March 31, after a marathon 17-week tour of one-night stands of Mozart's Cosi fan tutte, the Canadian Opera ballroom touring company was scheduled home.

The company wound up its tour with a performance March 23 in Massena, New York. The troupe is scheduled to arrive by bus at Toronto's King Edward Hotel at 2.30 p.m. on the 31st.

From California to Prince Edward Island, the tour played to near-capacity audiences, and the response from both the public and critics has been enormously enthusiastic.

"Fine ensemble in Mozart is an exalted state all opera companies aspire to but rarely achieve in the hurly-burly of mounting a season," said the San Francisco Chronicle. "The visiting Canadian Opera Company hit it on the button in the most tightly fitted of all operas, Cosi fan' tutte. It was a matter of watch-over precision, balanced elements and exemplary projection of the English translation, all benefitting from the same personnel perfecting their ensemble night after night on the road, as a unit."

The history of the Canadian Opera national "tour dates back to 1958, when the Canada Council asked the company to tour Maritime provinces with a chamber opera. As a result, the Company offered 19 performances of Rossini's The Barber of Seville, in 17 cities, over a four-week period. Only piano accompaniment was used.

The repertoire has since been increased by seven more operas: Nicolai's The Merry Wives of Windsor; Puccini's La Boheme; Cosi fan tutte; Strauss' Die Fledermaus; Bizet's Carmen; Donizetti's Don Pasquale and Offenbach's Orpheus in the Underworld. The acquisition of a touring orchestra was made possible in the spring of 1968 by a special grant from the Canada Council.

The Canadian Opera National Tour was established to (1) provide opera at high quality in areas in Canada and the U.S. generally lacking accessibility to live opera; (2) provide longer season of employment for artistic and production personnel; (3) provide young artists with the opportunity to work with seasoned professionals and thereby broaden their own range of experience. Many of the artists associated with the Touring Company will join the Canadian Opera for its fall Toronto season, Sept. 6 to Oct. 12 at the O'Keefe Centre.

Experimental Films Saturday

"Look at this film with your eyes open — as if you have just awakened from a dream and are attempting to recall the detail of it," director Derek Mary has said of his film, Pandora.

One of two May shorts, it will be shown as part of this month's Group of Seven experimental art films at the Corby Public Library Saturday, March 23. Admission is free for the 7 p.m. showing.

The five-minute film does not deal with the classical Greek story of Pandora. Rather, it is today's view of the myth, one in which Pandora wishes nothing worse on the world than her lines of washing.

May is represented by another film, Angel — involving a young girl making a vain attempt to fly with poke and wings, and a small dog she try.

The film explores the use of high contrast through overexposure — all is very white with occasional splashes of red-stock. Martin Duckworth provided the camera work on both May films.

A Norman McLaren film, Spare Change, Carlin, was earlier represented in the series by Norman McLaren's Walking, has a film called Lyrics; this month, Carlin tells the Greek fable through charcoal drawings on white paper. He is drawing — emerging from another, a technique common to that of Street Musique. Claude Debussy's music fills the film's track, devoid of narration.

Arthur Lipsett, whose Canadian short Very Nice, Very Nice was shown in February, is represented by Free Fall, a nine-minute film which takes a surrealistic look at mankind's fall from grace into banality.

Lipsett describes N as "a deliberate experiment in the manipulation of the accidental and the irrational."

The three other films all deal with seemingly magical shifts of color and form. Patrick Lagoda's Legend, Christopher Nutter's Garden and Bernard Longpre's Carousel.

Carousel is a story dealing with the escape of carousel horse from the circular children's carnival ride into the wide-open country-side.

EARLY ASTRONOMER

The first use of lenses to form a telescope is attributed to Roger Bacon of England, who died in 1292.

Showbiz Shorts

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Television personality David Frost had a final word here today on his reported romance with American model Karen Graham—"my brief friendship with Miss Graham was a very sweet interlude . . . end of story."

Miss Graham, a 24-year-old New York model, unexpectedly joined Australian businessman last Thursday after reports she was to have married Frost.

Frost told airport reporters today, "despite all the rumors, I have never made any public pronouncements about my friendship with Miss Graham."

"I remain a firm believer in the old-fashioned notion that, even if tempted, a gentleman doesn't comment on a lady's behavior."

The 36-year-old entertainer's plans to marry singer Diahann Carroll last year fell through when she married a Las Vegas businessman.

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuter) — American pop star David Cassidy was described as a "health hazard" yesterday at Victoria's state health minister, Alan Hamilton, after 20 teenagers suffered minor injuries at the singer's concert here Sunday.

"In such conditions as existed at his performance at the Melbourne cricket ground on Sunday, David Cassidy must be viewed as a health hazard," Hamilton said.

He said children were crushed outside the ground before the gates opened and against barriers inside.

"It is not desirable for children to be subjected to mass hysteria," he said.

TORONTO (CP) — Boris Volkoff, generally regarded as the father of Canadian ballet, died Monday of cancer at the age of 74.

Born Boris Baskanoff in Tula, Russia, he came to Canada in 1929 and started a ballet school which a decade later grew into the Volkoff Canadian Ballet Company.

His school produced two top ballerinas: Melissa Hayden, recently retired as prima ballerina with the New York City Ballet, and Patricia Doyle, who rose to the top ranks of the Radio City Music Hall's dance troupe.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four children of actor Mickey Rooney and Ava Gardner have been adopted by their mother's parents. The children had lived in California with the grandparents since 1966, after their mother, Barbara Thomason, was shot to death by a Yugoslav actor.

Rooney, 54, had joint guardianship of the children, but failed to obtain sole custody in 1972. The judge ruled that it was the best interests of the children to be served by the regularity, reliability and stability of living with the grandparents.

Adoption was granted Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Don Thomason. The children, Kelly 14; Kerry 13, Kyle 12, and Kimmie 10, will take the name of Thomason.

Rooney lives in Florida with his seventh wife.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A silent film will be reunited next week with the recorded accompaniment written by the late Richard Strauss.

The 1925 film version of the German Composer's Der Rosenkavalier, a Opan Carlin, will be shown March 29, with the Yale Symphony playing the Strauss music. It will be the first integrated showing since 1926, says John Mauceri of Yale School of Music.

Mauceri said Dr. Frazn Strauss, the composer's son technical consultant in one non-commercial performance, using a copy of the film found in a Prague archive. Strauss believes his father was also pleased with the film, said Mauceri.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore was honored Tuesday night as Woman of the Year at the 14th annual International Broadcasting Awards dinner.

More than 1,000 broadcast and advertising executives gathered at a hotel here for the dinner.

The dinner also recognized radio and television commercials around the world's best for 1973 from more than 3,-300 entries from 32 countries.

Miss Moore was chosen because the Mary Tyler Moore Show opened a new decade of television situation comedy, said Gerald Lesser, president of the society.

OTTAWA — Nine Toronto school children whose film Life Times Nine, has been nominated for an ACADEMY Award will attend the Award ceremonies in Hollywood under the sponsorship of the Film Festivals Bureau of the Secretary of State's Department.

Life Times Nine, one of three nominations selected from more than 300 entries in the Short Film Live-Action Category, is a collection of nine short films, written, directed and acted in by the children themselves. They have been described as "commercials for life" by Toronto film producer Fen Densham of Insight Productions who acted as advisor to the children.

The film was produced two years ago on a $5,000 grant from the Ontario Arts Council. It will compete against one American and one British film.

Invitations to the Academy Awards presentations are usually limited to a small number of representatives of each film nominated. An exception has been made in this case to allow all nine young artists to attend, according to Densham.

Blackout Stunts Can Be Dangerous

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: One of the spare-time activities in the dorm of a boarding school here is self-inflicted choking out. It's done by using a sock or scarf twisted tightly around the neck, cutting down circulation until blackout occurs. This must certainly be harmful and injurious to brain cells. Please comment.—E.

I'm always of two minds about mentioning this and variations of it, for fear of putting the idea into unsuspecting heads. But I think I'd be even more remiss in not warning against such tricks.

They are potential killers. The tightened scarf not only cuts off circulation to the brain, which in itself is damaging, but can put enough pressure on the carotid sinus in the neck to stop the heart.

It is as foolish as playing Russian roulette.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does washing your hair affect you while you are on your period? My mother won't let me wash my hair gets so greasy.—D.W.

Will this whiskery-old prejudice never die? No, it won't hurt you in any way to wash your hair at that time—it will only serve to keep your hair from getting greasy. If your mother won't believe me, then tell her to ask any physician. Or ask 29 of them if she chooses. It will be the same answer: go ahead and wash your hair.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I like to [illegible] rog. I am 67 years old and I would like to have a little more energy than I have now when I get down to bed.

I would like to take some vitamins if I knew what kind.

I notice some of the runners and Bobby Riggs (the tennis player) take vitamins. Could you tell me what kind would be best for me and how much?

My physical condition is good. I walk two miles in the morning plus two miles in the evening, also ride my bicycle and swim a half hour.—F.L.

To begin with, you're asking for more than a 67-year-old body, aren't you? I have no objection to good exercise, and I probably could do with a bit more of it myself.

But the simple fact is that exercise should cease where fatigue begins. Otherwise, you are defeating the whole purpose of exercise, which is, after all, to keep yourself healthy.

Now, as to the vitamins. No amount of vitamins is going to make the fact that you are 67 years old. There is no magic in vitamins. They are not going to halt the normal aging process nor will all the wild claims notwithstanding.

My advice is to scale down your exercise to reasonable amounts and maintain a healthful diet which would provide all of the vitamins you'll need to stay healthy.

If you are concerned, have a thorough physical examination and let your doctor tell you whether you need vitamins, and how much, and what kind.

Don't become an alphabet freak.

Opening lead—4 K

By Oswald and James Jacoby

There is nothing spectacular about today's hand. The contract is a humdrum four hearts which South brings home without any squeezes, coups or end plays. He does take a finesse but everybody takes finesses.

Nevertheless the hand is worthy of lots of study because the winning play requires faultless technique.

South must start by ducking the first spade. West can do nothing better than to continue the suit. South wins and it is now up to him to take an immediate club finesse. When that works he must cash his ace and king of trumps. Then he leads a club to the ace and ruffs a third club.

Now he is ready and able to try his last spade. A fourth club is led and ruffed and South has eight tricks in. The ace of spades; ace-king of trumps; ace-queen of clubs; one ruff in dummy and two in his own hand. He leads to dummy's ace of diamonds and plays the last club.

If East ruffs, South's last trump will take his 10th trick. If East doesn't ruff, that club is his 10th trick.

All very simple, but the sort of dummy play that wins in all forms of competition.

Beef and Cherries Are Involved

U.S. Says Pacts Violated

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States, charging that Canada violated international trade agreements, is seeking compensation in negotiations under way here and in Ottawa.

Robert McConnell, a trade policy specialist in the U.S. agriculture department, said Wednesday the violations depressed the price of beef in the U.S. and forced up the price of cherries to the consumer in Canada.

A decision on the cherry issue is expected out of Ottawa before the end of this month, he said, with resolution of the beef situation expected "at any time now."

The U.S. says Canada contravened section 19 of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) when it imposed tariff surcharges of six cents a pound on beef and three cents a pound on live cattle last November.

Following a U.S. protest, the surcharges were removed and later Canadian farmers and ranchers were granted a federal subsidy of several cents a pound on top grades of beef.

The protest on cherry pricing came after Ottawa placed a "value-for-duty" surcharge on that product, setting a minimum price under which sweet cherries could cross the border into Canada.

The surcharge on cherries also was later rescinded.

McConnell said that when Canada imposed the beef surcharge—up from the normal Canadian tariff of three cents on beef and 1.5 cents on live cattle—beef prices in Kansas City were depressed.

As for sweet cherries, "the harvest in the U.S. was large last year."

"There was also a large harvest in British Columbia. The Canadian government, after a plea by B.C. cherry producers to the effect that imports were driving their prices down, placed a value-for-duty surcharge.

Riots Close Quebec Camp

MONTREAL - (CP) — The main construction camp of Quebec's multi-million-dollar James Bay power project remained shut down today and 100 riot police were patrolling it after more than 24 hours of worker violence forced evacuation of the labor force overnight.

The James Bay Energy Corp., development subsidiary of the Quebec crown agency formed to carry out the $6-billion project, said in Montreal a team of experts was being sent to the area today to assess damage and determine when work can resume.

Company officials decided late Thursday to evacuate senior on-site management, about 200 persons, then called for complete evacuation Thursday night with news of destruction of the generating equipment.

Personnel were being flown out through Matagami, 339 miles northwest of Montreal and the airlift was expected to be completed today.

An airport worker was killed at Matagami during the night when struck by a propeller on a Norduir plane being used to bring out the work force. He was identified as Marcel Doyon, 35.

Thursday evening, when company officials received first word of destruction of the generators and the fires at the site, they reported the camp, known as LG-2, had been destroyed. Later information made it clear not all buildings have been burned down but the exact nature of the damage was not known.

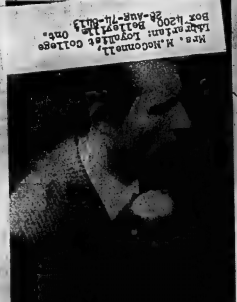
In Montreal, workers arriving from the site said the trouble was definitely linked to a contractor's decision to fire 30 men. About 180 workers were at Duval airport, near Montreal, early today.

The 30 men fired were working for Lamothe Construction Co.

"We were all backing the Lamothe guys. We showed them," said one worker who declined to be identified. Some of the workers said reports of a CNTU-CSN feud being at the root of the trouble "are false."

J. Flourde, a foreman for Bedard, Girard and Cheoin, another contractor, said:

"It was the Lamothe thing. People talked about it and they provoked each other. It's hard to say what happened, it came so fast."



Bernard Dion, assistant manager of SPDNQ, commented on said workers' discussions of the Lamothe incident soon after a general complaints session involving "all kinds of non-issues" and the fact burnings and other violent acts were "part of a show of strength by the CQ against the energy corporation."

Mr. Dion estimated the incidents would not delay work at least three weeks and "most likely" would bring a delay of six or seven weeks.

Bakers Obey Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bakery Council of Canada has agreed to limit bread price increases to amounts authorized by the food prices review board, Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray said Thursday.

He told the Commons he received the information in a preliminary report from the council although it is subject to further confirmation. The board and the council met Wednesday to discuss bread prices.

Royal Family Will Not Live In Safe Cages

LONDON (CP) — The Royal Family has "no intention of living in bullet-proof cages" despite the attempt to kidnap Princess Anne, Buckingham Palace says.

"Princess Anne has always liked meeting people and enjoying her own private life," a palace spokesman said Thursday. "I don't think this will change."

But Scotland Yard said all members of the Royal Family will receive extra protection for the next few months. Two motorcycle policemen and an unmarked police radio car escorted the Duchess of Gloucester, the Queen's aunt, to a banquet in London Thursday.

Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, escaped injury Wednesday night when a gunman forced their limousine to a halt 150 yards from the palace and pumped bullets into it. The couple's bodyguard and three other persons were wounded.

The assailant, apparently bent on kidnapping the princess, couldn't open the locked car doors, and a policeman's tackle brought him down. Three pairs of handcuffs and a rambling letter demanding ransom of 2 million ($4.6 million) for the princess were found in his hired car.

A 26-year-old unemployed laborer, Ian Ball, appeared in court Thursday on a charge of attempting to murder the royal bodyguard. He was ordered held in jail for a week while Scotland Yard continued its investigation of the first attack on a member of the Royal Family since 1925.

Police would give no information about Ball, but informed sources said they were trying to discover how he got nearly $700 worth of £10 notes that were found on him. They said the car had been reported the name of John Williams, a name used by Ball in correspondence he received at a mail-reception agency in London.

Police said the motive for the attack was not political, and Home Secretary Reginald Maudling told the House of Commons

Angry Warning Given Marchand May Try To Nationalize CPR

OTTAWA (CP) Transport Minister Jean Marchand lashed out Thursday night at the Canadian Pacific Railway for putting business interests ahead of public service, saying he will "fight like hell" to nationalize the company if necessary.

"It's not a matter of principle," he said of the prospect of a government takeover. "It's a matter of purpose . . . to ensure that the public is served."

His remarks came in response to reporters' questions after the New Democratic Party called in the Commons for nationalization of the railway and related business enterprises.

NDP Leader David Lewis said the government should take over the "entire shebang," including CPR hotels, ships, investments, trucking and communications enterprises.

Mr. Marchand told reporters that co-operation between the government and CPR officials, including company president Ian Sinclair, has been poor.

"They do not co-operate. . . . Not only that, but you feel when you meet with them that they own the country, and this I don't like. They feel they are more important than any minister or prime minister."

Unless the relationship with the government improved, "it will fight like hell to nationalize it."

He said no takeover plans have been discussed by cabinet, and indicated it will be at least two or three months before any possible showdown materializes. This was the time needed to present a new set of national transportation objectives to cabinet.

"Probably at that point, we would have to decide who is running transportation in Canada, Mr. Sinclair or somebody else. . . . If he says the CPR is first and Canada second . . . then we are into a fight."

Mr. Marchand said the CPR seems anxious to get rid of some of its uneconomic railway operations, but if the government intervenes "it will surely not be only in the sections that (Mr. Sinclair) would like to get rid of."

There is no indication what areas of the Canadian Pacific Railway and transportation may be interested in acquiring, nor did he say specifically what the government may do with back the government's favor.

Both the CPR and CPR have been criticized in the Commons recently for lagging grain shipments from the interior. Canada. Estimates of contracts lost because of late shipments have run as high as $600 million.

Mr. Marchand said the CPR president operates as a businessman and has no interest in government objectives.

The Commons debated, but did not vote on an NDP motion calling for a publicly-owned utility to develop a national transportation facilities.

Mr. Marchand told the House that if takeover should become necessary and no acceptable purchase price could be negotiated, "then we can use the instruments we have and I would have no objection to nationalization."

Mr. Lewis said the profits recorded by Canadian Pacific are immoral and the government should take it over in total.

Donald Blenkarn (PC—Mississauga) denounced nationalization as an impractical solution that would cause more problems that it would solve.

He said the CNR, which the government owns, is the best example of government activity in the business field, and called it a prime case of "poor inept socialist management."

"They don't know what end is up," he said of New Democrats who endorse the principle of nationalization.

Ethiopian Province Near Death

HARRAR (AP) — Ethiopia's Harrage province, a mountainous, semi-desert region as big as Italy, has six weeks to live, its officials say.

Without huge grain handouts and without rain, the remaining cattle will die. Tens of thousands of peasant farmers and nomad herders will starve. The eastern fifth of Ethiopia will turn into a dust bowl.

Drought is affecting seven of the country's 14 provinces, where nearly two-thirds of the 26 million Ethiopians live. Some qualified observers say 200,000 or more have starved to death, double the estimated toll left than a year ago and more than in the six-country West African drought.

Aid so far appears to have reduced the visible human effects of the drought in some areas. But a Western relief expert who has travelled widely in Ethiopia says another wave of starvation that would dwarf the 1973 crisis may develop within two months.

"Nothing has been done in Harrage although the government knew the situation 24 months ago. The government doesn't have the transport to handle even the grain on hand. It's going to have to rain wheat to save these people."

Manitoba To Double Mines Tax

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government proposed a $14-million tax credit scheme to combat inflation and a doubling of taxes on mineral production in a record $834.5-million budget brought down Thursday night.

Finance Minister Saul Cherniack told the legislature tax credits of up to $25 will be allowed on 1974 tax returns, with maximum benefits to go to senior citizens and low-income families.

The plan is to be financed largely from increased mineral taxes.

Brinco Near Takeover By Moores

MONTREAL (CP) — The main construction camp of Quebec's multi-million-dollar James Bay power project remained shut down today and 100 riot police were patrolling it after more than 24 hours of worker violence forced evacuation of the labor force overnight.

W. D. Mulholland, Brinco president, and Sir Val Duncan, chairman of Rio Tinto Zinc Corp. Ltd., Brinco's controlling shareholder, were to fly here from Montreal.

The two apparently were being to halt the Newfoundland government's plan to take over Brinco, announced by Mr. Moores Thursday in the legislature.

Mr. Moores said a bill would be introduced, possibly today, to vest the shares of Brinco in the province at the price of $7.97 a share."

The price, increased from an original offer of $5.75, was rejected Wednesday night by Brinco after 10 days of negotiations with the Newfoundland government.

The premier said the Bank of Nova Scotia would loan the Newfoundland Industrial Development Corp. the $198 million needed to buy the shares.

High School Teachers Rescind Motion to Try to Defeat PCs

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario high school teachers Thursday rescinded and softened their planned attack on the Davis government in the next provincial election.

Representatives of the 34,000-member Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) in an 11th-hour vote rescinded a motion to encourage its members to make a decision commitment to bring about the defeat of the present government" at the polls.

Earlier Thursday delegates to the annual assembly voted 126 to 119 in favor of the resolution, calling for voluntary contributions to opposition party campaign funds and active campaigning.

They retained, however, a motion setting up a "war chest" to distribute funds to political candidates supporting teacher interests.

It is the first time in the OSSTF's 55-year history that teachers have agreed to a concerted effort in a political campaign.

The conflict between teachers and he government dates back to late 1972 when teachers in 17 districts involved in contract disputes submitted mass resignations.

The government introduced a bill that would have delayed the resignations until June 30, shelving the legislation only when the teachers agreed to delay their resignations until Jan. 31 and meanwhile continue contract negotiations.

By the deadline, settlements had been reached in all the disputes except in York County, just north of Toronto, where the teachers went on strike. Last week the government introduced legislation imposing compulsory arbitration in the York dispute and ordering the teachers back to classes March 25.

The government also proposed legislation that would impose arbitration in all future teacher contract disputes and prevent teachers from striking if such disputes are not settled.

Alan Salmon of Burlington, who proposed the rescinding motion, later said he didn't want his external policy committee to be tied to agreeing to of total government opposition until the next election.

"I don't want someone to say I've got to with that plank from now until 1975."

Others contended the rescinding was a procedural matter only to be dealt with at external policy committee meeting to deal with all political matters in the interval.

Jim Forster, newly-elected OSSTF president, said in an interview the early close vote indicated the feeling of many members that the government might change its "anti-teacher" position before turning to the voters.

"It was more against the timing" than the spirit of the resolution, he said.

Damage $4,400. Driver Hurt

TWEED (Special) — A total of $4,400 damages resulted from an accident on Highway 7 Thursday at the junction of the old Flinton Road, when the tractor of a car-carrier was demolished.

The empty car-carrier transport was westbound on Highway 7 at 12:45 p.m. when it was scraped broadside by an eastbound car driven by George Lynn Stalker, 22, of Smiths Falls. The transport driver, Wesley Cox, 37, of Oshawa, lost control, crossed the highway into the east lane and hit a rockcut.

Damage to the tractor of the car-carrier was estimated at $4,000 and to the Stalker car $400.

Mr. cox was admitted to Belleville General Hospital for observation of head lacerations and bruises to his hands.

County Home Going Up

PICTON — Prince Edward County councillors this week received a progress report of construction at the new county home for the aged.

Allan Anderson, Bloomfield area municipal chairman of the social services committee, said that foundations walls are now completed and block-laying has resumed on walls that have been designed at the future residents bedroom.

The structural steel framing and roof deck are in place over the administration and activities wing.

Recently, excavation and installation of steel casing for cylinders of the hydraulic elevators has been completed. Work now is proceeding on columns and beams that will be part of the structural system enclosing the kitchen, stores, laundry and maintenance facilities.

Reeve Anderson reported that, in the near future, farmers and people of concerned for the second floor slab will begin and the speed of construction will accelerate as weather improves.

Turning the Sod?

Belleville Utilities commission chairman Gerry O'Connor was out in the PUC's new building Thursday to turn the first ceremonial sod-full of earth, but he stirred up more snow than soil at the side of the commission's $329,500 office building at the corner of Sidney and College Sts. In attendance at the snowy ceremony was Miron-Wiggers Construction Ltd. project manager John Heinen, (from left) CUPE local 1102 president Wilson, Bulpit, architect Paul Wiegand and Fronts St. office employees Marion Embery and, Beth Robertson. Work is expected to be complete by the third week in August and the building should be available for use in the first two weeks of September.

Papineau Lake Park Controversy Erupts

BANCROFT (Special) — Hastings county planning board has given a conditional recommendation on the provincial park proposed for the shores of Papineau Lake, but the controversy over the park raged on at a public meeting Thursday night in Maple Leaf.

The meeting was arranged by the reeve of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure. Felix Browne, to enable the permanent residents to voice their opinions.

Mr. Browne revealed the planning board's recommendations in the meeting. The planning board decision was handed to the reeve Wednesday after a planning meeting indicated that the park fits in with the recreational and economic goals of the recently completed official plan. The board also recommended Papineau Lake as a good location because of the excellent quality of the beaches.

Along with the recommendation, the planning board set several conditions the ministry of natural resources will have to meet if it goes ahead with the park.

They are the presentation of the planning board's recommendation Mr. Browne said council "is not in the position to say yes but only what we go there". He added that the planning board is "a body of men outside our area and has the very impartial".

The planning board's recommendation was prompted by a township resolution passed Feb. 13 requesting the study. Several members of the Papineau Lake Cottagers' Association, along with MPP Clarke Rollins, and representatives of the ministry of natural resources attended the February meeting council session. During that meeting Reeve Browne said he would go along with the planning board's recommendation, but last night he said he intended to back the residents of the township.

After being questioned by a ratepayer, the reeve said, "I intend to serve my people the best way I know how."

"And if we don't want the park" questioned a ratepayer.

"As reeve I would not go along with the park — I would back you," Mr. Browne said.

Among the planning board's conditions are:

The park must conform to official plan policies: adjacent cottage property must be adequately protected by relocating roads; cottagers in the immediate park site must have a choice of being "expropriated now or left alone; no power boats be licensed from the park on Papineau Lake; garbage disposal and sand maintenance must be arranged to the municipality's satisfaction.

There must also be a decision on "ultimate disposition" of now vacant Crown-owned lots on the same side of Papineau Lake which are now used as parkettes.

The province must reach satisfactory agreement with the township over a shortfall in grants in lieu of property taxes.

During the meeting it became apparent that the majority of the permanent residents in the township are opposed to the provincial park because of the Davis land, the influx of people, and the possible pollution of the lake. One member of the council took an opposing stand. Thomas Buckley, a veteran councillor and former businessman, said he has been promoting Papineau Lake all his life.

"When this proposal for the park came up I was very enthusiastic," he said. "More people enjoy it — they don't abuse it, but enjoy it."

Mr. Buckley added that he had voiced his support of the park to the council, the county and the ministry.

The main controversy over the park continued. Harold Carrothers, protested on behalf of the cottagers; the Davis family maintained its refusal to sell the property while municipal council remained the mediator.

Some of these medicines are identical, some differ slightly in chemical structure and many are combinations of drugs. But, one thing is for sure, that your physician and pharmacist have to keep up with a tremendous number of products that are available to help fight illness.
And, each drug product has an identity all its own. The place it is stored, the container that it is kept in, how long it remains potent, its relation to other medicines, how it must be handled, regulations guiding its use and many other factors. Being your family pharmacist is a full-time job.

Drop-in Centre Seeks New Trenton Location

By STEVE CAMPBELL
Staff Correspondent

TRENTON — "Fresh Start", a drop-in coffee house located in the basement of Trenton's Orange Hall, has reached a dead end.

The Orange Hall was the third location for the coffee-house which began two and one half years ago. Due to renovations in the Hall, "Fresh Start" opened for the last time Friday night.

The coffeehouse, open three nights a week, served as a drop-in center for people of any age or background.

It began with a small group of people interested in teaching Christian faith and helping others with problems.

Free coffee and entertainment in the form of films and live music drew crowds as large as 150 people in the past.

Young people in particular were attracted to the coffee house where they met others of their age group for discussion and entertainment.

The coffee house meets a need in Trenton" said Jack Stam, one of the original workers in the project.

"The young people are searching, empty, looking for a goal," Mr. Stam said.

"They want a direct approach."

In an informal atmosphere, the volunteer workers talked with many of the young people about their problems. Drug hangups, parental problems and identity crises were some of the subjects concerning Trenton young people. The youth have a need for someone to talk to and someone to listen.

The name of the establishment stems from the Christian ideal of re-birth, the beginning of a new life with Christ. The project began and grew with spiritual emphasis, offering help to people of any age or religious background.

Financed by voluntary contributions, the "Fresh Start" idea will continue with other projects. Dances, films and an evening with "Sweet Spirit", a Toronto-based rock band, are planned for the future. The "Fresh Start" coffee house will not enjoy a "re-birth" until a new location is found.

Pot Grower Fined $100

PICTON — A Carrying Place area man, Richard Neal Shoebridge, was fined $100 in provincial court here this week after pleading guilty of the possession of cannabis marijuana.

The court was told that a few marijuana plant had been discovered growing in a plastic pail in a Carrying Place area residence. A further police search of the premises revealed a plastic bag containing a marijuana substance, a canvas pouch with traces of marijuana and a tin box of marijuana seeds.

Judge W. W. Wills commented that the individual, by growing the plant, probably saved a certain amount of money.

Chopper Searching

TRENTON, Ont. (CP — A Canadian Armed Forces helicopter left Trenton as early today to aid in the search for a missing Trenton Air Force pilot, a spokesman at the rescue co-ordination centre here said.

The search for Capt. Robert Rumbeli, 34, of Trenton, Ont., by when his F-104A jet aircraft is found in a heavily-wooded area of New York State, about 50 miles southeast of Cornwall.

The pilot was reported missing from the aircraft, indicating he was able to eject before the plane crashed, a U.S. Air Force official said.

The spokesman here said the helicopter arrived at the crash scene this morning and is assisting in the search for the pilot.

Bata Development Plan Is Approved

Sidney council has given Bata Industries Ltd. planners an enthusiastic go-ahead to draw up a detailed plan of subdivision for approximately 60 gross acres of quality housing on company-owned land north of Batawa.

The nature of the subdivision was unanimously approved in principle by council Monday after Bata representatives outlined the development, in the works for the past six months.

Speaking in support of the Bata plan, councillor Reg McCurdy said, "To say the least it's fantastic. If it works out, it'll be a terrific development."

The subdivision calls for 220 houses — a mix of detached single family dwellings, attached patio housing and garden apartments 2 storeys in height. Over 50 per cent of housing would be detached — 56.3 per cent with road frontages of 60 feet.

In presenting the preliminary subdivision design standards, planners said work on the redevelopment scheme would be staged over five years from the time of an executed construction plant in 1975.

Planner Donovan Plaket said the proposed 60-acre tract would boost Batawa's population from it's present 300 to 1,300. Collector roads, a 1-½ acre village green, a baseball diamond, a soccer pitch would be built.

Wartime housing on the east side of Fraser Dr. would be torn down and replaced by a treed area. Homeowners would have the opportunity to relocate at housing to be built roughly north of a westerly extension of Sidney township concession road four.

Considered the first stage in a 10-year plan, the subdivision is part of a scheme to transform a total of 1,500 Bata-owned acres in Sidney and Murray townships into a residential haven and recreational greenbelt for harried metropolitan dwellers. In the process, Batawa and Frankford would be molded into one community of approximately 2,500 people along the west bank of the Trent River.

Cost of proposed housing has not yet been fully investigated.

In requesting council for approval in principle of preliminary plans, Gordon Hanna, Royal Trust industrial consultant, said work on the scheme has reached the stage at which provincial approvals for a registered plan of subdivision will soon be sought.

Council's approval would allow planners to start work on detailed plans, he said. Negotiations and housing market testing could commence.

Another meeting is planned for review of the draft plan before it is forwarded to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

That Tops It

Once capped this newly installed stainless steel vessel at Domtar Packaging Ltd. should drastically reduce the effluent into the Trent River. The 200,000 gallon container, built at a cost of about $150,000 should cut effluent wastes by one-half, said a company spokesman.

Expropriation Last Step Says Authority Spokesman

TRENTON — Expropriation of property is being considered as a last resort by the Lower Trent River Conservation Authority.

Recently the authority announced plans and the conceptual study of a greenbelt area that would border the river as it flows through Trenton. Total capital cost has been set at $700,000.

This summer the authority intends concentrating its efforts on the land between the CPR and MacDonald Bridges.

Three properties are being looked at currently and, according to Trenton representative Paul Tripp, the three parcels will be picked up this summer.

All the properties have been appraised and according to Mr. Tripp, "We may have to expropriate if we can't come to terms."

"We don't want to get involved in expropriation unless there is no other way," he said.

In one case, following the authority's offer, a realtor's counter offer was "wildly extreme," says Mr. Tripp "and it appears expropriation is the way we are heading."

Before any firm action can be taken in connection with the land assembling, the executive committee of the authority will meet March 26 to discuss strategy.

Mr. Tripp says about 300 feet of river frontage is contained in the three negotiations in which the authority is offering "fair market value."

"After all, we're playing with taxpayers' money," he said.

Handicapped at Work In Community Project

MADOC — With nine people already actively involved, COPE — a community work project to help the handicapped — is moving ahead steadily.

Right now, six people are at work producing ceramics. Also involved are a project manager, stenographer and instructor.

Colorful vases, ash trays coffee-mugs, piggy banks and miniature flowerpots are among articles produced to date. One unique item still in process is a chess set.

COPE is being funded by the federal government's Local Employment Assistance Program for three years at a cost of nearly $238,000. The grant permits a total of 13 to be employed, and project manager Bill Gordon says there are enough applications to meet the maximum.

Other crafts scheduled for the future include screen-printing, weaving and furniture restoration. COPE's fulltime: Constructive Opportunities for Progressive Employment.

Trenton Gets a Break On Electricity Rate

TRENTON — PUC subscribers here "get a break immediately with the news from Ontario Hydro that costs did not escalate as much as expected for the delivery of electrical power.

In a three-page letter to the Public Utilities Commission, Ontario Hydro explained that while inflationary trends continued across the province, the same trends were not as evident in its budgeting.

Because the commission pays for power on a forecast arrangement that can flourish, the commission is faced with a $7,000 credit. This will ease the year's escalating hydro bill.

According to veteran commissioner and current chairman of the PUC, Charles Hipkins, the taxpayer may be getting this little bonus now only to feel a real bite next year.

Trenton this year received a credit payment of slightly less than $78,000 as a return on equity for the town's contribution to the capital improvement of the province's power system.

This return on equity deal began in the 1950s and recently the province has announced that in six years the return bonus will be extinct and individual municipalities will relinquish ownership of parts of the electrical system.

By next year — when the first phasing begins, about 15 per cent of Hydro-power's return will have to come from other sources as the province cuts back the equity payments.

Commissions across the province, including Trenton, have balked at this arrangement, particularly as the province is gearing up to take over Ontario Hydro as a power corporation.

In a letter to Trenton's commissioners chairman, The Ontario Municipal Electric Association argues the province is taking over something to which it has not contributed "one red cent."

Further to this, the OMEA requested and received approval from the Trenton PUC to apply pressure to the provincial government to provide a broader base for representation on the new board that will govern electrical services in Ontario.

As for the return on equity, the OMEA is asking the province to pay for the capital works owned by individual municipalities plus the current rate of interest, or issue voting stock to all municipalities in accordance with the percentage of the system each community owns.

In this way the OMEA believes Ontario taxpayers will retain some voice in the administration and delivery of power.

At the close of the letter: "This matter be taken to the courts if necessary to obtain satisfaction."

Frankford Water OK

FRANKFORD — The municipal water supply in this community has been declared safe once more for drinking.

Villagers were cautioned a week ago to boil or chlorinate water after the communal well was found contaminated.

Dr. C.R. Penk, Hastings and Prince Edward counties public health officer, issued the warning after tests revealed a high coliform content in the well. Dr. Lenk attributed possible cause of contamination to surface runoff.

PICTON — The Prince Edward Children's Aid Society will hold its annual meeting Wednesday, April 3, at 8 p.m., at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Hall.

The general public is invited to attend.

The showing is sponsored by an adult painting class conducted under the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

Hotel Parking

Two or three years ago we suggested that a triangular area of land next to the CP rail tracks and across from the Flyer Seasons hotel might lend itself to development for recreational purposes: say a children's playground, or perhaps a garden.

Being isolated from Zwick's Island proper and bounded also by poplars remaining from the Bay Bridge road's old days, the remnants of which provide access for the hotel, the ground begged for some such purpose.

Now a decision has been made, but it is not of the kind described above. Rather the area will provide additional parking space for the hotel. So be it: council's vote was 8 to 3 — but in doing so it went against the recommendation of the Parks Board. According to board chairman Paul Russell the decision militates against development plans for the area. He mentioned also that there is unused parking space at the rear of the hotel.

Parking in the area under review can scarcely be regarded as an enhancement of the environmental aspect of the area, but if this is what Council wants, we can only regard it as nature's loss and materialism's gain.

Whither Foreign Aid?

It has long been one of the functions of the church to help the poor and needy in far-off lands, in times of disaster in particular, but also on a continuing basis as funds permit.

No one can deny this is done in the spirit of Christianity and, for the most part, in an unselfish and unquestioning manner. Nowadays however the political aspect of such giving enters into it more and more.

Is it right for instance, that Canadians, whether through government tax dollars, or private church contributions, should be supporting, however indirectly, liberation movements in some parts of Africa?

Where there is drought and famine, yes, and we have drawn attention to this in recent days; but what guarantee is there that western aid does not get into the wrong hands in other situations?

In the current appeal of at least one church denominations in Canada it is indicated that medical aid, education and legal counsel go to what are described as "victims of racism in Southern Africa." Who are these people and does "Southern Africa" mean the republic of South Africa, or the Portuguese colonial territory of Mozambique where guerrilla warfare, supported currently are very active, with strong support from the Communist world.

Do these "victims of racism," for instance include the 847 civilians killed in more than 2,000 incidents and the 8,000 plus abducted by guerrillas since operations started in Mozambique, according to figures released in January? This report, quoted by The Globe and Mail, noted that most of the 284 villages and 15 hamlets raided during 1973 had been shelled by Soviet-made heavy and automatic arms fire before the guerrilla had moved in. In addition 47 trading stores had been ransacked and 7,700 head of cattle stolen.

In addition there are allocations from Canadian churches for Chilean refugees — professed left-wing individuals and families who already have received financial aid from Ottawa, first for the flight to Canada and now for continuing basis while they seek employment here.

Canadian churches therefore, whether by accident or design, are becoming involved in areas of international controversy and liberalism movements backed by the Communist world are inextricably mixed. Is this the kind of situation in which Canadian funds should end up? We should think not.

Gutter Language

Judge Clendenning may have been correct in concluding that a Belleville youth's language, directed toward police, was no more than that which has issued from school locker and army barrack rooms from a long way back.

Consequently a charge in provincial court against the youth was dismissed. Let's make it clear however that this is the language of the gutter. The fact that young men use this term in school, servicemen and so-called ladies and gentlemen of mature years use it, does not alter this fact.

The English language is blue-pencilled by officers of the truth in that especially the pase with the four-letter word which was the subject of the police complaint.

Army Shows Dissension

Portugal's Future in Africa Creates Domestic Uproar

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The future of Portugal in Africa has created a domestic crisis within this European nation, not a political one as many have anticipated, but within the Portuguese military.

This has surprised observers of Portuguese affairs who have gone to be last few years have been making on Africa and not on the homeland in any case.

Most had assumed the army was impossible about its role in Portugal's African territories as the unswerving guardians and defenders of the centuries-long Portuguese rule in Africa.

For the junior officer especially, for combat life young men in all armies, the continued guerrilla campaigns in Portugal's three main African territories of Guinea, Angola and Mozambique, have been sophisticated battle experience to say, American cases in Vietnam.

The seat of discussion within the army centres of all places around Gen. Antonio de Spinola, recently fired as deputy chief of the joint defence staff and the former military commander in Portuguese Guinea, called Guinea Bissau by the local rebels.

Spinola is a popular officer, even in the hall-hole of Guinea, which clings to Portuguese rule largely because of his success as a military commander in the bush-war in the future methods.

At the same time Gen. Spinola was apparently appalled at the possibility of endless and inconclusive warfare of this kind as the solution to future peace for Portugal in Africa.

His proposals for a way out have appeared to perhaps the best-selling book in Portugal in decades. It's called Portugal and the Future and its basic thesis is that Lisbon must reach some kind of modus vivendi with the various African territories, that the revolutionary movements of Portugal is to have any kind of long-term presence in Africa.

The general who has helped keep the Portuguese in Africa with tough military responses, has apparently come with not work.

Gen. Spinola's breach of military discipline to put his ideas in print and on bitter radio as well, apparently encouraged dissent among younger army officers to attempt a coup against the Caetano government.

A judgment has been made that like Spinola, they are no solving the basic problem of a Portuguese future in Africa substantially different from her contemporary present.

Although reports are not yet too clear, it would appear the bulk of the army, and the three topple governments, have penetrated the Portuguese Army as well (in spite of Caetano's ruthless resistance and open declaration of loyalty of the hard-fast generals and admirals).

Gen. Spinola and the younger African officers who led the attempted coup at Africa has find a new solution to stay in Africa. In this estimate, Premier Caetano cannot ignore their views.

Transport Policy Admitted Mess

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Writer
Thomson News Service

Men on the moon, and now this—Canada's transport minister admitting that our transportation policy is a mess!

Jean Marchand deserves credit for having recognized frankly the major failures in transportation policies that have developed during the Trudeau government's term in office.

He also deserves part of the blame for the results of those policies. The results are immediate and critical in the case of the railway industry, more remote but just as critical in the field of air transportation.

Under policies stemming from the 1967 Transportation Act, as well as the 1967 Crow's Nest Pass Agreement, Canada's railways have been deprived of what they would consider reasonable return on grain shipments.

(Figures recently published by Statistics Canada show that 1973 wheat and grain movements were 16.3 per cent lower than in 1968, with cerealboard down 20.2 per cent.)

As a result, they have not invested as heavily as they should have in the type of rolling stock was to be maintained at a rate sufficient to handle grain shipments.

Also contributing to today's spot shortage of box cars and grain hopper cars is the inadequacy of government policies, Canadian Ottawa's estimate of the number of cars needed to move export grain by ports fell far short of the actual requirements.

What means that farmers have not been able to move their grain from their land to the jam-packed grain elevators. Even when they want to sell and they don't deliver, their incomes are cut as a result.

Other food producers suffer in other ways. One example: Eastern Canada's fish producers face a shortage of feed grains for their stocks, and consequent price increases.

The transport minister has also admitted that the planning of giant new international airports near Toronto and two large cities might have been different if the government had correctly foreseen new rail-transportation techniques that are being developed.

In the case of one of those documents — Mirabel-Malton, near St. Scholastique, Que.— Jean Marchand's leadership is probably too late to be of much help to travellers.

Construction of that project, which is to supplement Montreal International Airport, is already far advanced—and the public that uses it will face long, tiresome trip on congested highways when travelling to or from Mirabel.

There is still time, however, to avoid the present ($1.5-billion to $2-billion) blunder of a sprawling new airport at Pickering, north of Toronto.

Both new airports would force a large proportion of air travellers, living outside the two metropolitan centres, into time-consuming, baggage-laden journeys to and from the old airport to catch connecting flights.

Overlooked?

By JIM WATERS
Toronto Bureau
of The Intelligencer

TORONTO — Conspicuously absent from the recent report of the Task Force on Policing in Ontario was any sort of policy recommendation for dealing with the more than 200 private security agencies operating in the province.

As early as last October, the government recognized the conflict brewing between public police and private security guards. Michael Warren, then Provincial Secretary for General, noted the concern expressed in briefs to the 17-member task force and suggested firm guidelines were on the way.

However, in its report tabled last week by Solicitor General Clarence Wells, the task force outlined the most troubling issues involving security firms, but offered no remedies.

Rather it called for the government to commence a specific and comprehensive review of what has been discontentously labelled the rent-a-cop industry.

Others have legislation dealing with the private police organizations, and "proprietary security firms", reports Mr. Kerr, "and we hope to look at that legislation carefully."

Specifically, revisions to the Municipal Act are said to be being considered to tighten licensing procedures and to give the authority of plain clothes guards and make liability insurance compulsory. Also considered are uniform standards may also be introduced for the first time.

But the task force was particularly concerned by the foreign ownership influence. It acknowledged the considerable information gathered by private security personnel is forwarded to the head offices located, in many cases, across the United States.

"Is this an appropriate arrangement in view of the sensitive nature of much of private security work?", it asks.

Another area of the individual's rights to information gathered on him by organizations currently exist to allow him access to such intelligence reports, in matters involving his credit rating.

Probably the most tersely-worded pronouncement in the report on private police and security services suggested untrained, irresponsible private guards, investigators, police officers in uniform only, are giving provincial and municipal forces a bad name.

"The task force is concerned that public contact with lesser qualified private security personnel may create the kind of mutual respect we see to be so essential," it states.

That attitude suggests considerable caution should be given to the delegation of responsibilities to the hired patrol. The task force, however, is headed by urban planner Edward Hale, urges distinct rules on when, under what circumstances, and with what training requirements, private personnel should be allowed to use firearms and other weapons.

A spokesman in Mr. Kerr's office said the recommendation for a departure review will be discussed at the next few cabinet meetings. A review will likely be undertaken since the task force deemed the subject essential but not precisely within its terms of reference.

"No principles for policing in modern Ontario is fully comprehensive unless private security personnel and private quasi-police are covered," it states.

Press Gallery Privileges Debated

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thompson News Service

There is a fight brewing across Canada between the country's parliaments and its press galleries.

It is perhaps, in fact it is probable, no more exciting to you than a Sunday school tidy-winks match.

But there an underlying reason why it is important, and at least should get some public explanation.

An explanation if only because you may have an impression that your tax dollars are being spent to spray the press with cologne, which is a feeling that could be taken from the argument so far.

This argument essentially centers on the fact that Canada's parliaments supply working space, phone service and other facilities to report on the activities of the parliaments and governments of the country and its provinces.

Opponents claim that this is subsidy. That it is coddling the press. And that any media which want to report on government should pay for their own space and facilities.

The controversy broke out in Ottawa a few years ago, at that time a special press building was established by the federal government and space rented out (at a low rate). It recently emerged there again when it was shown that the federal government was still spending more than $100,000 for services, stationery etc. for the press.

Now the debate is on at the Ontario legislature gallery at Queen's Park, where certain representatives, mainly from the large metropolitan press, have complained about the $75,000 annually the government spends.

1945—The Venezuelan Republic was restored.

1832—Germany's poet Wolfgang von Goethe died, whether government is unnecessarily, or irresponsibly, spending his money.

And really the whole issue boils down to one strong argument that it isn't.

This argument is that there is a distinct responsibility on government and parliament to provide communications facilities.

For communication is very much a basic component of our political system. In fact a good case can be made that it is partly as important to the system as the parliaments and legislatures themselves.

For the essence of this system is choice. Choice requires a knowledge of what there is to choose between. This means information. As much information as possible. And the only practical approach to providing this information is through the media.

Which in turn means that it is incumbent on parliament to provide facilities for the media to supply information; just as much as it is incumbent on it to provide the facilities for its own members to do their jobs.

The whole controversy, again, is one in which you probably don't have too much interest.

But as you read about the wrangle in the press, and it undoubtedly will carry on, you should be worth remembering.

Inflation Like Weather

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Inflation is like the weather, everybody talks about it but nobody does anything.

Governments and politicians regularly promise things we cannot afford. To make good on these promises monies are spent far in excess of what can be collected from taxation. As long as governments can spend money this freely, we are going to have inflation.

I am getting tired of hearing the Government blaming the unions, business corporations and outside world conditions for our problems. It is time they started accepting responsibility for the problem. It is also time that Canadians make sure that safeguards are put into our system to protect us against inflation.

A committee of economists should be appointed to report to parliament annually on the economic stewardship of the Government. This committee would study the causes and causes of inflation as they relate to government policies. They will act as a sort of auditor general of our economy. At least this way, we will have the truth.

Controls should be established to ensure that a government cannot spend more money than it can ultimately take in through taxation. Only in cases of national emergencies such as wars and disasters should the government be allowed to spend more.

The Throne speech and the spending estimates indicate that the Liberals are planning on increasing the rate of inflation. While millions of Canadians suffer, David Lewis continues to support the Liberals. By doing so he not only is making a mockery of the political philosophy of his own party but is helping to damage the whole country. One gets the feeling that Mr. Lewis is enjoying the power of his position too much to want to risk losing it in an election.

Inflation damages us socially, morally and economically. In addition, no country with an annual inflation of more than 20 percent has been able to remain a democracy. We have too much at stake to allow this problem to continue.

Indians Want Ipperwash Back

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — The days of constant drilling and artillery fire are gone from Camp Ipperwash, 30 miles northeast of here, but the Canadian forces remain.

The members of the Kettle Point Indian reserve, who once farmed the 2,400 acres of military camp want the land returned to them.

Band administrator Dave Henry said the government "appropriated" the land from the Indians when the camp was established in 1942 and years of negotiations with Ottawa have yielded nothing for the Indians.

He said the camp is not used to its capacity now and the federal government was to return the land at the end of the Second World War.

But military officials said Camp Ipperwash still is needed as a training centre for regular troops, cadets and reserves.

Maj. C. D. Darling, base administrator at CFB London, the headquarters for southwestern Ontario, said return of the camp to civilian use would be a loss to the military.

"It's one of the largest cadet summer camps in Ontario," he said.

There is only a rifle range near Chatham as the next-closest training ground. After that, it would involve trips to a tank range near Owen Sound or CFB Barrie.

Maj. Darling said the 1,100 regular military personnel, 7,000 reserves and 6,000 cadets that come under the jurisdiction of CFB London find themselves in training at Camp Ipperwash at some time of the year.

The camp, which employs 22 civilians year-round, is also used by the provincial police for weapons practice.

Indian spokesmen say about 12 families inhabited the camp, which includes about two miles of Lake Huron shoreline, before the government took it over.

Chicken Manure Yields Oil, Gas and Filters

CLEVELAND (Reuter) — In 1972, a lot of people snickered when A. D. Miller began producing oil and gas from chicken manure.

That was, before the energy crisis. Miller may have the last laugh.

The 76-year-old consulting engineer said he has developed a process using manure that yields oil, natural gas and a coke-like carbon material which can be used as a filler in water treatment. A ton of manure, he said, yields 32 gallons of oil, 15,000 cubic feet of gas and 614 pounds of filtering material.

An estimated 900 million tons of organic matter is produced each year in the United States, including garbage and human and animal waste. Miller said this represents a vast untapped source of energy.

Miller said he began working with chicken manure as part of a project at Pennsylvania State University to develop fertilizer. The university researchers were having trouble separating feathers from the manure.

Chain Saws Make Cleanup Easier

Any homeowner knows that home and yard maintenance is a never-ending series of projects which can be costly in terms of time and money.

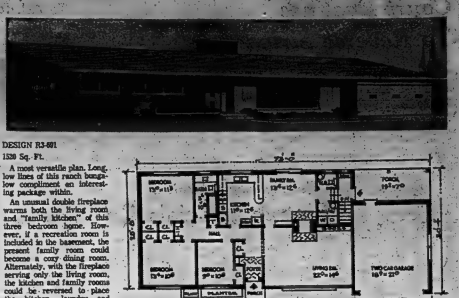
Experienced home-owners know it is important to group their projects on a seasonal basis for the best buys. Also, having the right tools will save both time and money.

The efficient home handyman will get his early spring chores out of the way before those first warm days when the lure of a sweet smelling spot checker or sparkling trout stream becomes overwhelming.

The owner of a lightweight chain saw can follow a simple checklist of early spring cleanup jobs that will give him plenty of free time for recreation later on.

It's a sure bet that trees and shrubs will need some attention after winter's storms are past and before new growth begins. This is the best time of the year for pruning and for checking for limbs which may have been damaged by heavy winter snows or winds.

Lightweight, high performance chain saw spring pruning" a quick, easy process in any yard.



In addition, a lightweight chain saw can be a big help on repair jobs. fence boards damaged or weakened during the winter can be cut and replaced in a few minutes. A chain saw is a most versatile tool for cutting lumber for any construction or repair a job.

And after using his chain saw to maintain the value and usefulness of his property, a homeowner can turn to hobby projects. With his chain saw, he can quickly cut wood for a backyard swing set for the kids or a gazebo for Mom.

Patios can be covered and rustic furniture can be made. Ingredients: wood, a chain saw and a weekend afternoon.

Stumps can be carved to serve as decorative planters rather than undecorative eyesores. And the adventurous hobbyist can sculpt large pieces of driftwood into tables, shelves or other useful forms.

In many areas of the country, the price of a lightweight chain saw can be saved by cutting just one cord of firewood. Then the home and yard maintenance jobs are a pleasant bonus.

DESIGN R3-891
1320 Sq. Ft.

A most versatile plan. Long, low lines of this ranch bungalow compliment an interesting package within.

An unusual double fireplace warms both the living room and "family kitchen" of this three bedroom home. However, if a recreation room is included in the basement, the present family room could become a cozy dining room. Alternately, with the fireplace serving only the living room, the kitchen and family rooms could be reversed to place the kitchen, laundry and wash room together.

Even before furnishing, the living room is a picture of excellence. Measuring 22 by 14½ feet, it is naturally brightened through wide, deep windows and set off with the fireplace and built-in bookshelves. Ample room is afforded for a wide variety of furniture arrangements.

A full bathroom is close to all bedrooms, while a powder room, ground floor laundry and small room are all conveniently located close to the side entrance and basement stairs.

An exterior of brick veneer with vertical boards reflects the attractiveness of the interior. Extended by the two-car garage, the front elevation is accented by a stone planter and windows designed to contrast with the expansive living room windows. A truly versatile plan!

Plans for Design R3-891 cost $35 for the first set, $11 each additional set and are supplied by return mail. Two new books "Home Designs for Canadians" are available for $1.00 each by mail (see the coupin). Book 1 presents designs for homes up to 1600 sq. ft. for 1 storey and split level, 1625 sq. ft. for one and one half and 2 storey. Book 2 includes larger homes and vacation homes. Court Declines To Reverse Sirica

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has moved the House of Representatives judiciary committee a step closer to access to a secret grand jury report on President Nixon's role in Watergate.

In an opinion Thursday, the court rejected requests that it reverse U.S. District Judge John Sirica's order sending the grand jury report to the committee.

The appeals court delayed delivery of the report until 4 p.m. EST Monday to give lawyers time to take the case to the Supreme Court.

President Nixon did not oppose sending the report to the House, a fact cited by both Sirica and the appeals court.

But lawyers for H. R. Haldeman, former White House staff chief, and Gordon Strachan, a former Haldeman aide, opposed sending the report to the House on the grounds its contents probably will be made public and result in publicity that might make it impossible for them to obtain a fair trial.

Haldeman and Strachan were among seven former administration aides or campaign aides indicted March 1 for allegedly trying to block Watergate investigations. The grand jury gave Sirica its sealed report and a satchel filled withevidence at the same time it returned the indictment.

Lawyers for Haldeman and Strachan said they were undecided on whether to ask the Supreme Court to overrule the appeals court.

The appeals court, which heard oral arguments earlier Thursday, said in its decision: "We think it of significance that the president of the United States, who is described by all parties as the focus of the report and who presumably would have the greatest interest in its disposition, has interposed no objection in the district court's action."

As for the statements that there might be a leak that would generate prejudicial publicity, the appeals court said they were "at best, a slender interest" and added, "it appears to be premature at the least" to make the claims before any such publicity has occurred.

After Strike Too Late To Ask for Job Back

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Labor Relations Board ruled Thursday that a striking worker has to ask his employer for his job back while the strike is continuing, to be eligible for automatic reinstatement under a new section of the Labor Relations Act.

The board ruled that the Artistic Woodwork Co. Ltd. did not have to reinstate six workers who asked for their jobs back the week after the 15-week strike ended last Dec. 1, because they were not then "engaging in a lawful strike."

The board found that because the legislation is phrased in the present tense, the strike would have to be continuing for the legislation to apply.

At the end of the strike it resulted, Artistic management agreed to reinstate all striking workers except those who had charges pending against them as a result of incidents on the picket line.

Some workers who faced charges were reinstated after the charges were withdrawn or dismissed in provincial court.

The board ruled that because the employees involved were not on strike when they filed their application, the legislation did not apply to them.

The amendment to the Labor Relations Act states that an employee engaging in a legal strike shall be reinstated by his employer if he makes an application for unconditional reinstatement within six months of the start of the strike.

Aiding Apartheid Assailed

Church Officials Grill Alcan

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of numerous church groups from Canada and the United States grilled officials of the Alcan Aluminium Co. Thursday in a bid to examine the morality of the company's operation in South Africa.

"We in Canada often deplore the exploitation of our resources by outsiders and here we see a Canadian company doing the same thing in Africa," John Bidout, a spokesman for the Anglican Church of Canada, told the company's annual meeting.

"And it is doing it to their most valuable resource—their people," said Mr. Bidout, who is a member of the church's unit on public and social responsibility.

Nathaniel V. Davis, company president, denied the allegation, saying: "The company has gone on record as disagreeing . . . where human rights are not respected."

"But we should not go into a country and exercise political influence. We train labor, try to get wages up and attempt to raise the standard of living—which I believe is the best process in the long run."

Mr. Ridout said the company was planning to extend its operations in South Africa by allowing its South African subsidiary to take part in the construction of a silicone-smelting plant in an area bordering on "apartheid-imposed" territory.

"Our shareholders . . . are supporting the apartheid policy of the South African government," he said.

How, he asked, "will the message that Alcan disagrees with apartheid policies?"

James V. Cameron, an executive vice-president of the company, said the company was satisfied Alcan's projects in South Africa would bring a higher standard of living for black Africans.

Rev. Don Morton, a spokesman for the United Church of Christ in the United States listed repressive measures which he said the South African government imposed upon its citizens, including church organizations.

He likened the regime in South Africa to "a police state on par with Nazi Germany."

Church representatives questioned officials on numerous phases of the company's operations in South Africa—each returning to the central theme of whether it was a moral act for Alcan to "maintain a blind eye" while continuing to reap profits at the expense of black Africans.

CP News Roundup

Aid Asked For Pension Recipients

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was asked Thursday to protect persons in private pension plans by extending legislation to cover cost-of-living escalation.

Stanley Knowles, New Democrat pension spokesman, told Finance Minister John Turner in the Commons that present protection is inadequate.

His statement was a renewal of suggestions he made late last year when the House was considering a cost-of-living clause for the Canada Pension Plan.

Passed by Parliament, the clause provides for regular increases in old age pensions to cover increases in living costs.

Mr. Turner replied that extended protection for private plan participants is one of a number of proposals being considered by the government.

Immigration Shows Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration, aided by a greater influx from Britain and a special program to legalize the status of unauthorized residents, climbed 31 per cent to 184,200 last year, government figures showed Thursday.

The total included 117,733 newly-arrived immigrants and 66,467 who were already in Canada and were granted approval to remain permanently, the immigration department said.

Phoney

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — William Landry, 32, of Vancouver, an unemployed laborer, was sentenced to 30 days in jail Thursday after he admitted charging three long-distance calls to a Toronto telephone number.

Judge A. A. McLean was told in provincial court that since Oct. 22, Landry had charged 55 calls, costing $496, to the same Toronto number.

Bishop Named

REGINA (CP) — Rev. Hush James Allan is the new Anglican bishop of Keewatin following his election Thursday by a special meeting of the provincial synod of Rupert's Land.

The diocese of Keewatin, with headquarters in Kenora, covers northern Manitoba and northwestern Ontario.

May Strike

HAMILTON (CP) — McMaster University's student union voted Thursday to call for a campus-wide strike against classes within 24 hours unless a special, open meeting of the university senate is convened to consider student-faculty parity on that body and in all McMaster departments.

Duplex Razed

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — A fire marshal's office investigator Thursday gave a preliminary damage estimate of $200,000 in a Tuesday explosion that destroyed a duplex under construction and injured three men.

The cause of the explosion has not been determined but a natural gas line erupted before the blast.

Pick Premier

BRUSSELS (AP) — King Baudouin appointed Social Christian Leo Tindemans premier designate Thursday and asked him to form a government "at the shortest notice because of the national situation," a palace spokesman said. It was the first major step towards a solution to a crisis prompted by the inconclusive March 10 general election. In the election, the Social Christians made the largest gains with five new seats in the house of representatives but no party won enough seats to rule on its own.

Hockey Player Guilty of Assault

PRESCOTT, Ont. (CP) — In what was described as a possible precedent-setting decision, Judge Bruce Hunter of provincial court Thursday found the captain of Morrisburg Lions of the St. Lawrence Junior B Hockey League guilty of common assault during a game.

Charged was Ian Gould of Chuck Irvine as the result of an incident involving Gerald O'Brien of Cardinal, Ont., Broncos in a game in Cardinal Jan. 26.

Testimony before Judge Hunter indicated no penalty was called on the alleged spearing play by referee Ken McLeod of Vankleek Hill, and that O'Brien suffered only a bruised stomach.

Testimony also showed that the charge was laid by Cardinal police chief, Walter Kolodechuk, at the instigation of Cardinal Reeve A. D. Casselman and other interested parties, several participants in the game declining the referee.

Chief Kolodechuk was not at the game.

Inflation Spoils Aid

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Senate Leader Paul Martin said Thursday Canada's foreign-aid is being frustrated by galloping world inflation.

Mr. Martin told an audience at the YMCA/YWCA that current wheat prices will allow the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) to donate one-third of the wheat shipped in the past.

"CIDA sent 730,000 tons of wheat, flour and rapeseed overseas in fiscal year 1972-73 at a cost of $76 million," he said. "The same assistance today would cost $175 million."

Although Irvine was given a conditional discharge, defence lawyer William Conrad of Morrisburg said the conviction probably would establish a precedent and make it possible for any fan to lay a charge against a player in a game such as hockey over a play the fan thought drew red.

Turner Asks Business To Fight Profiteering

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner Thursday urged the business community to fight against charges of profiteering.

Referring to the "corporate rip-off" attack launched by the New Democratic Party, Mr. Turner said in an interview "it is up to big business and small to give the facts on themselves."

The NDP has repeatedly charged since the 1972 federal election campaign that many corporations are amassing unfair profits.

Earlier, the finance minister told the Royal Council of Canada that he welcomes the improvement in corporate earnings as essential for maintaining economic growth.

One of the main aims of federal corporate tax cut measures last year was to strengthen the manufacturing and processing industries so more jobs would be created.

There were strong indications that a major portion of increased corporate earnings was being plowed back into new capital investment rather than "feathering the nests of shareholders."

But there was a point where profits could go beyond financing new capital investment and providing a fair return to shareholders. He repeated his view that profits now are sufficiently healthy that it is no longer necessary to pass every increase in costs on to the consumer.

Whelan Passes Hint Of Subsidy for Hogs

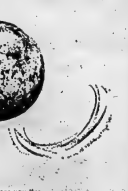
OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan hinted Thursday that the government might implement a subsidy program for hog producers who are losing money.

Replying in the Commons to miscellaneous estimates committee to Gaston Clermont (L—Gatineau), Mr. Whelan said the majority of Ontario hog producers "are in favor of some kind of program."

Mr. Clermont said many Quebec hog farmers are losing $11 for each animal marketed. He asked if it would be feasible to implement subsidies for them similar to those announced for cattle producers last week.

Mr. Whelan said it would be relatively simple to subsidize hog producers because of the orderly hog marketing system in most provinces.

"Something must be done, but it's going to be done the way they want it."



The cattle subsidies, announced by Mr. Whelan last Friday, are designed to protect producers losing money because of depressed prices brought about by heavy imports of United States cattle.

SOME STORIES ABOUT STAMPS

Only be it understood
It shall be no trespassing
If I come again some Spring,
In the grey disguise of years,
Seeking ache o fmemory here.

—Robert Frost: "On This Side of My Farm."

"Did you know that Robert Frost's portrait appears on a new stamp in the American Poets series?" writes an American correspondent enthusiastically. "Also did you know, at Derry, New Hampshire (where he wrote some poems at his home on a nearby farm) the new 10-cent commemorative is coming out on March 26, the 100th anniversary of his birth?

"What's more. If you wish first-day-of-the-issue cancellations, send self-addressed envelopes, with remittance to cover the cost of the number of stamps to be affixed on each first-day cover, to Frost Stamp, Postmaster, Derry, N.H.03038".

Our correspondence letter continues, in part:

"Really, I think he is my favorite poet, using everyday kind of words, with remarkable disciplined evasion, writing about little everyday things, making him akin with everyone somehow.

"What sharp observations and how he matched them with the exact word: how when swimming the buck pushed the "crumpled" water; how wagon wheels "freshly sliced" the April mire; how ice crystals snapped away from the frozen birch and west "avalanching" over the snow. Little wonder he was awarded four Pulitzer prizes!

"While his poetry, seeming a simple, imitation of the speech of New England, is most complex.

"Said this master of the meter: 'A poem is never a put-up job ... it begins as a lump in the throat, a sense of wrong, a homesickness, a loneliness. It is never a thought to begin with. It is at best when it is a tantalizing vagueness.

"'Poetry,' he said 'is the act of having a thought' and 'different thoughts about commonplace things' were its ingredients. The material for poetry should be common in experience, uncommon in writing.'

"I like what one critic said of him: 'His poems touched a well-spring of longing in an urbanized America for the world of nature and its landscapes and its denizens, for a world of the universal and the forever.'

Two roads diverged in a wood and I-

I took the one less traveled by,

And that has made all the difference.

These are famous lines. By the way, the design of the vertical stamp is from a pencil drawing of the poet by Paul Calle, beneath which, in three lines are: "U.S. 10c." "Robert Frost" and American Poets".

He died on Jan. 29, 1963, at the age of 88."

We shall look forward to seeing this stamp. Perhaps we shall persue further stamp stories at a later date.

Record Reached

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city permik and licence department says the value of building permits issued in 1973 hit a record of more than $360 million, nearly 33 per cent higher than the previous Vancouver high of $136.6 million in 1971. Mayor Art Phillips said earlier the statistics reflected the general growth of the city.

'Ladylike' Fashions Return

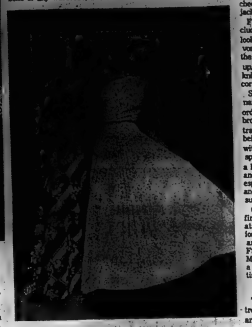
By MARGARET NESS

TORONTO (CP) — A return to lady-like dresses and clean-cut classic styles, the backbone of any wardrobe, is evident in spring collection of Hugh Garber shown in Toronto.

The Montreal designer believes firmly in the suit look in a two-piece dress, mostly with pleated skirts. However, there are a number of true suits in his collection, one a natural linen window pane check in shirt and sleeveless jacket with brown shirt.

For evening Garber includes the one-bare-shoulder look that many designers favor for spring. There is also the other, extreme in a cover-up, floo-length white sweater knit dress with embroidered coral bead sash.

Spring colors tend to be natural ti linens and knits co-ordinated with black or brown. Garber is fond of neutral shades such as desert beige, camel, cafe au lait, with paprika as the bright spark. His collection includes a lot of satin-faced gabardines and printed or knit polyesters, especially in pongee weights and also in qiana chiffon and surah.



Garber joined the Montreal firm of Margo Dress in 1958 at the age of 24. With a fashion background including an art college in London and the Fashion Arts Academy in Montreal, he gives the line a Garber touch that is as distinctive as a trademark.

STYLE ADVANCED

The style of Habitat in Montreal—built for Expo 67—still is architecturally advanced in comparison to other mass apartment building concepts in Canada.

EARTH'S WEIGHT

The earth's atmosphere weighs an estimated 5,300 trillion tons.

For Evenings

The one-bare-shoulder look returns to spring collection by Hugh Garber of Montreal for evening wear. Dress (left) is in black-and-white printed cotton jacquard with one side slit. White trevira jersey is used in gown (right) with tortoise shell embroidered bodice. (CP Photo)

MAGIC LADY

By Connie

This week a Pot pourri of the odd MIXED. I came home last night and the vacuum was running, radio and set, bodies. What an awakening, disquieting feeling to come home to. Where is the rest of your family, the friend of your friend, your fellow comsat horse?

ON DEPRESSION: Put yourself outside your home and look in. Be the fly on the wall. Be the mouse in the hall of the household. The kids are ever criticized for small annoyances, habits haven't really changed. Things that wrong last week, criticized, are still wrong. Everything is soaking in cracked corn trying to keep the peace. They're powerless to do anything about it, except what they try to do and they've made up their minds to marry and no one is going to change it. They're "stuck" with whatever mood you choose" to be in, happy or unhappy.

WOMEN'S LIB! I believe that women have to give (or earn) more than men. This is fact whether we like it or not. It is life. It is why we make the best of it. I'm tired of constantly being out of sorts because we feel some great injustice has been done to us, by God, by Man, by Life. My suggestion to back it. Let's have a little sympathy, being "aware" of the mood of our mate, then we can adapt to the situation. I'm not asked that the situation will never solve anything. The only difference we have is knowing about Sir Isaac Newtons law on gravity. Your gonna fall down in a positive and negative direction, or opposite direction." This are by the way, is as precise as the Law of gravity. Your gonna fall down in a positive direction, or negative. Now or positive. Why not try it positive and our rewards will be many. Another word to be MAGIC Lady.

Cross-country Skiing

Matchless Family Fun

OTTAWA (CP) — Are you looking for a family activity? Something outdoors that the family can do together?

You've probably considered various things but found the cost prohibitive or because had to be left behind.

The experts say cross-country skiing provides a matchless opportunity for family activity and even they children can go along, provided someone on the dog pulls a sled.

And although it may lack the speed and excitement of downhill skiing, cross-country skiing has several advantages:

—Equipment is much less expensive.

—There are no ski-tow charges or line-ups.

—The risk of accident is reduced.

—The season is longer because the snow lasts longer on wooded trails than on exposed slopes.

There are two main types of cross-country or Nordic skiing—racing and touring, with specialized equipment for each.

Nordic skiing came from the touring type—wide and strong—to pure racing skies that are narrow and light and so strong. And there are several variations of each.

Richard James, national president of the Canadian Youth Nordic Federation, operates a Ski-Max ski shop that specializes in cross-country equipment. He says there seems to be a trend away from the heavier touring equipment but many newcomers feel more secure with the broader touring ski.

"The option remains to switch to lighter equipment at a later date when the skier is more experienced," he says in Canadian Consumer, the monthly magazine of the Consumers' Association of Canada.

Most skis are made of laminated wood and are available with or without hard edges. Soft edges of harder wood cost $6 to $15 more.

Although softer woods hold wax better, hard woods such as hickory are the best buy where wet, slushy, icy or crusty conditions often occur.

Skis with hard edges are important where conditions are toughest. All wooden edges become rounded with wear, but skis with hickory edges on a birch base or lignostone on a hickory base retain their edges longer and enable the skier to maintain better control.

Laminated glass fibre and metal cross-country skis are on the market and yet to be fully evaluated, generally are more expensive.

A no-wax ski is also available in two basic types. One has a plastic base covered with overlapping scales. It grips well but slides poorly compared with a well-waxed wooden ski, Mr. James says.

A second type of base has an overlay of mohair strips that point backwards to provide grip but be flat to allow easy forward movement. The strips wear out quickly but can be replaced.

Metal or synthetic skis do not hold wax as well as wooden skis.

You'll also need cross-country poles, with an angled tip sharper than the downhill type. These give you a grip even in icy conditions and are easily fitted from the snow.

Boots and bindings are also required. Downhill bindings are not suitable for cross-country skiing because they hold the heel fast against the ski. For easy cross-country skiing it is essential to be able to lift the heel.

All that equipment will cost you about $100, unless you take advantage of spring sales when reductions are offered.

"If you intend to take up cross-country skiing find out something about skiing and the equipment you need before buying," Mr. James says.

"Locate a club or a cross-country ski retailer who sponsors a film and lessons in skiing. You may even want to rent equipment initially. Decide whether you prefer touring or light touring equipment.

"Expert opinions differ, so first listen to the experts, then decide for yourself."

Successful Living

Husband a Loner

Doris Clark

Dear Doris: How do you live with a hungry man? I am very selfish man We have survived 19 years of marriage with four children grown up now.

I'd like more companionship with my husband, but after working all day he has farming chores which he considers his hobby. I offered to help but he has always been a loner and does not want his help.

My place was in the home. Now he objects to my working part time and makes things so miserable I quit.

Even if you could suggest some reading matter about all this, I'd be grateful: You are a very kind, considerate person. The world could have more like you to make easier living in these hectic times.

God Bless.

Dear God Bless: What a waste of life to have a partner who will not share thoughts and work and fun! Now is the time when you both have more freedom and could enjoy leisure together.

A "loner" like your husband must have an overpowering need to prove himself a capable person. He has not even thought about your needs.

So you must do your own thing your own way. Completely ignore his objections to part-time work, even if it takes months for him to stomp over them. Gather around you friends who will spend an evening working on a hobby or playing bridge or reading and reviewing books with you.

This takes gumption. But you have many years left to you, and you want to keep sane and serene, don't you?

Right now your husband hardly realizes that women are people - you least of all!

Dear Doris: In our city we have just recently seen advertised topless dancers. To me this is not the best kind of entertainment.

For example, my sister-in-law was raised by a family with no moral principles. At 15 she got pregnant and her mother kept the child. One year later she got married, had another child, got V.D. and a divorce.

She lived with one man and then some others: talked about sex in front of the children just as if she was telling them a bedtime story.

Recently she turned violent and her husband took her to a psychiatrist. I think her main trouble was that all along she was trying to impress her father, who never did like her.

I like my sister-in-law and with that more parents would realize the way they can hurt their children. She now has a really loving husband and with the help of the psychiatrist may find herself again.

Dear No Name: Even as a child your sister-in-law had no rules to go by, did not And when we lose moral standards it can make chaos and tragedy. In her case the tragedy is bound to affect her children.

I do hope that the present husband is a strong character who can help her get back on the rails.

Dear Doris: About 18 months ago a young couple with two little girls moved into our district. At this time we had never met in our family so neither was any other neighbor gave a welcoming party. Now I feel we'd like to do something.

Would it be a Very Welcome Party? Should I forget it? For some reason I feel guilty every time I see them.

Doubtful

Dear Doubtful: Any excuse for sociability suits me - and I will visit them! Why not have a private talk with them; explaining how things were when they arrived and that you want to get a few folks together now.

Why call it a Welcome Party? Just a party, because you like them and are glad to have them around. It will make a richer friendship for all of you.

(Talking it over helps. Write to Doris for help with your dilemma, care of this newspaper.)

Ann Landers

Honesty Needed To Control VD

Dear Ann Landers: I agree with your advice to the East Chatter who had a bad case of VD. However, as a medical officer of health department, I think you should make it clear that most local departments have the authority to enforce examination of friends with whom the infected person has been intimate.

Only when people realize the importance of naming all their contacts do we stand a reasonable chance of gaining control over VD, which now has reached epidemic proportions. Please, Ann, print this letter and urge co-operation. It is desperately needed.—Owen Sound, Ont.

Dear O.S.: I have repeatedly urged my readers who learn they have VD to co-operate with the health authorities and reveal the names of everyone with whom they have been intimate. Thank you for reminding me to do so again.

VD, unless treated, can cause serious and permanent damage—even death. Moreover, an infected person, who is unaware of it can spread the disease to an alarming number of unsuspecting victims.

I repeat for the umpteenth time. If anyone who reads this column suspects that he or she has VD, please go to your city or county health department at once. You will be examined and, if necessary, treated without charge. Your parents will not be notified, regardless of your age. (Thank the good Lord that law has been changed.) And, when the health officer asks you to name your contacts, level with him. This is not fishing on your friends. In fact, you will be doing them an enormous favor.

Dear Ann Landers: I noted with interest that when a reader asked you what you would do if you felt about being called "Ma," you made it abundantly clear that you don't care for the handle.

A recent poll revealed that over 75 per cent of the women between 30 and 40 who were asked the same question didn't wish to be called "Ma," either! So what's new? Any poll-taker should know that a Miss who becomes a Mrs. has something that a Ma, probably does not have—and that's a husband.—Call Me Madame

Dear Madame: Thanks for the info-but I didn't mean to imply that I see anything wrong with wanting to be called "Ma." I believe if a woman signs herself "Ma," she should be addressed that way—but not until or unless.

Dear Ann Landers: For 22 years we've financed everything under the sun for my in-laws. They have never had the decency to say "the cheque arrived"—not even "thank you."

There are nine children in the family and my husband has assumed some responsibility for all of them. He has even gone to the bank and borrowed money (on which he had to pay interest) to help them out.

From the day we married, his parents have had their hands in my husband's pockets. I am sick to death of it but he says he can't refuse them. His father gulls will probably triple and his mother will lean on him even more.

I know they are all sick, but what can I do? If his mother would just tell him she loves him it would help, but she's a far from it.

Lethbridge Agricultural Research Station Vital

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — The federal agriculture department's Lethbridge research station has been an inseparable part of agriculture development in southern Alberta since the beginning of the century.

The station had its beginning as a Dominion experimental farm in 1906, shortly after Alberta became a province. Irrigation development in the Lethbridge area had just started and brought with it a rapid influx of settlers.

Ranching and irrigated and dryland farming in a new and untested territory posed a variety of agricultural problems for which solutions had to be found. A major problem was soil erosion caused by chinook winds.

The result was the Lethbridge experimental farm, which amalgamated with the science service laboratories in 1959 to form the Lethbridge research station.

From the day of W. H. Fairfield, its first superintendent, the station has won the trust of district farmers and has grown into the country's second largest agriculture research facility after the central research station in Ottawa.

Located on the eastern boundary of Lethbridge, the station occupies 1,100 acres of dry and irrigated land and has a staff of 200, including 70 scientists conducting 140 research projects into the various problems of agriculture.

The station serves an area of great ecological variability, from the black soils and rather high rainfall of the foothills to the brown soils and low rainfall at the rangelands in the southeast. The area includes highly productive grainlands and nearly a million acres of irrigable land.

The research is organized in six sections: animal science; crop chimology, plant pathology, plant science, soil science and veterinary medical entomology. Over the years the station has produced numerous eminent scientists, and is a top choice for visiting scientists on exchange programs or sabbatical leaves.

One recent find at the station was a method to prevention of feedlot bloat, a major cause of death in feedlot cattle, and proper irrigation of rapeseed fields to increase yields by 150 per cent.

Other projects included insect control, development of cold-resistant crop varieties and new breeds of cattle.

A $1-million expansion of the station now is under way to house new administrative offices and laboratories, as well as the Lethbridge offices of the federal and provincial agriculture departments.

Station director Dr. J. E. Andrews said that when completed in 1975, the addition will have 200 civil servants in the agricultural field under one roof and should provide better, co-ordinated service to the region's farmers.

Yellowhead Highway Gains Popularity

EDMONTON (CP) — Long ignored by all levels of government, the Yellowhead Highway across the northern west has in recent years developed into a real alternative to the Trans-Canada for motorists seeking a change of scene.

From its leaping-off place near Portage la Prairie, Man., to British Columbia where the highway branches off into western and southern legs, the Yellowhead today serves a larger population living on or near the route than does the Trans-Canada. And although the southern route still is more popular for tourists, the gap is narrowing, says Ted Sample, executive director of the Yellowhead Interprovincial Highway Association.

Mr. Sample can afford to look back on 1973 with considerable satisfaction. Following years of prodding by his association, the federal government finally gave the Yellowhead and Trans-Canada equal prominence in markings on its official highway maps, and the highway now is being marked on official provincial maps in the four western provinces.

In addition, 1973 was the year, following a brief presentation to Prime Minister Trudeau at the Western Economic Opportunities Conference in Calgary, that Ottawa announced a major upgrading program for the Yellowhead, to bring it up to Trans-Canada standards. The program, to be undertaken in co-operation with the departments of highways in the four provinces, is expected to get under way this year.

Already recognized by tourists and commercial truckers because of its gentle grades through the Yellowhead Pass and its numerous passing lanes, the highway improvement is expected to add new glitter to the route through a program of road straightening and widening where required.

Some of the continuing problems involving the portion of the highway between Prince Georges and Prince Rupert are to be discussed with British Columbia officials during the next few weeks, said Mr. Sample.

At that time, the association will also recommend the extension of Yellowhead Highway 5 in B.C. through the Coquihalla Pass between Merritt and Hope, shortening the Vancouver-to-Edmonton trip by 50 miles.

The prospect of becoming an active part of the Yellowhead Highway has so fired the imagination of the community of Merritt that it has applied for and been granted special membership status in the association.

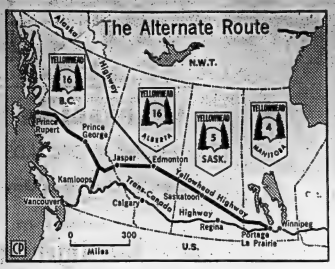
The northeast B.C. community of Dawson Creek, although not on the route, also is an associated member with a special instrument of three cents per capita, half that paid by the association's 31 regular member cities, towns and villages.

Dawson Creek's application was made in recognition of the work being done by the association to publicize the town's position as Mile Zero of the Alaska Highway, reached off the Yellowhead via Alberta Highway 43.

The Association, formed in 1968 by northern communities in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, is proud of the size and influence of major cities along the route, and of the many national, provincial and regional parks located nearby.

The largest city, at 499,000 population, is Edmonton, site of the association's head office.

But equal attention is paid to the smallest members — Fielding, Sask., which recently paid its full 1974 assessment of $1.80 for 30 people.



The traveller will see some of the loneliest scenery in the country, particularly on the prairies, and will travel through remote B.C. mountain passes.

The Yellowhead serves a greater concentration of people than the more heavily-travelled Trans-Canada Highway.

With the inclusion of Winnipeg and Vancouver in each total, since both routes affect both cities, latest population estimates of urban and rural residents are 3,075,900 along the Yellowhead and 3,014,145 on or near the Trans-Canada.

If these population considerations, together with the need to serve the northern port of Prince Rupert, that have led the Yellowhead Association to adopt "The Trade Route of the Future, in Western Canada" as one of its slogans.

Another is "Canada's Happiness Highway," aimed to describe the road in brief terms for the tourist, trailer-buff and picture-taker travelling along this scenic route.

Another Road West

The Yellowhead Highway from Portage la Prairie, Man., to Kamloops and Prince Rupert, B.C., serves a larger portion of western Canada's population than does the Trans-Canada highway further south. The Yellowhead is a real alternative to motorists seeking a change of scene. (CP Newsmap)

James Bay Camp Reported Burned

MONTREAL (CP) — Evacuation operations still were underway early today at the main camp of the James Bay hydroelectric development following contradictory reports of confrontation and destruction.

A spokesman for the James Bay Energy Corp. said officials are "still in the dark" because of contradictory reports out of the LG-2 construction site, 630 miles north of Montreal, where 700 workers have been staging a walkout and occupation since early Wednesday.

A statement issued by the corporation head office in Montreal Thursday night said "it is reported that all the camp at LG-2 has been burned and a large part of the equipment sabotaged."

However, a corporation spokesman said later some witnesses have reported that only the camp tavern and community centre, which includes a bank, post office and general stores, were burned down.

He said evacuation of personnel from the site began Thursday after a generator was knocked out, leaving the camp without light or heat. Six chartered airplanes were transporting personnel to nearby Matagami.

Fifty provincial police men and 39 officers from the James Bay police force were flown to the scene Thursday, he said, to try to restore calm and protect contents of the installations.

Officials at head office here said the site manager phoned Wednesday and said all workers at the camp, including members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Quebec Federation of Labor, had gone on strike and were occupying management headquarters.

Radio-telephone communications were then cut off, officials said, as it was not until Thursday that communications were restored for a while and officials were told that a generator had been destroyed by a bulldozer.

It also was learned "that tension was rising at LG-2" following a takeover by workers of communications facilities and fuel supplies.

The decision was then taken by officials in Montreal to evacuate the camp "because there is no heat, light or food" and temperatures in that area generally dip to around 20 degrees below zero at night at this time of year.

About 113 supervisory personnel arrived in Montreal Thursday, officials said, aboard the daily Nordair flight.

The strike is believed to have started because two laborers belonging to the CNTU were laid off by a contractor carrying out drilling operations. They were immediately hired by another site contractor but his employees, who belong to the QFL, refused to work with the two CNTU men.

Both Marcel Pepin, leader of the CNTU, and Louis Laberge, president of the QFL, refused to comment on the disruption.

Government spokesmen were not available for comment.

Phone Service Planned For Indians in North

TORONTO (CP) — A reliable telephone service for roughly 8,000 Northern Ontario residents, most of them Indians, will be available for the first time by 1977, the Northern Ontario Remote Area Communications and Transportation Conference was told Thursday.

"Trees and, for all, the communication remoteness of the communities of Northern Ontario will be ended," said Ontario Transport Minister John Rhodes.

Mr. Rhodes described the $15-million project, to be undertaken by Bell Canada and the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission, as the biggest of its kind ever attempted in Canada.

"For the north, and because of its importance to the eight communities affected, the Ontario government will pick up one-half of Bell's capital cost in establishing the network, Mr. Rhodes said.

Lewis Urges PCs To Ignore Dentists

WELLAND (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, said Thursday the provincial government should stop seeking the approval of Ontario dentists before it acts to change existing legislation governing dentistry.

Mr. Lewis told a news conference he is tired of the provincial government "paying homage" to the dental lobby.

If the government is considering amending the legislation, why is "prosecuting" individual denturists and at the same time thinking of granting the right to denturists are seeking? Mr. Lewis asked.

The present law requires denturists and dental technicians to work under supervision of a dentist.

Mr. Lewis called the government's attitude "hopelessly irresponsible" and said he answer to the problem is simple—amend legislation to allow denturists to be licensed and require their clients to obtain certificates of oral hygiene.

Mr. Lewis said a guarantee that dentures will not cost more than $180 should be written into the legislation.

Hees Sees Lack of Confidence

OTTAWA (CP) — Poor market reception of the government's latest bond issue is not a sign that Canadians have lost confidence in the minority Liberal government, Finance Minister John Turner told the Commons Thursday.

The suggestion of a lack of confidence came from George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings), who said the $350-million issue has fallen flat on its face."

Mr. Hees said the Bank of Canada has had to salvage the issue by buying most of the bonds. The government had "ground unheralded" on the issue.

The central bank agreed Tuesday to take a minimum of $225-million of the issue, open as to maturity.

Mr. Turner said the issue has had "broad distribution" and is selling well.

Issued Monday, the two-part bond offering consists of $225 million at 8.5 per cent and the balance, $325 million, at seven per cent.

The $225-million part of the issue is due in three years and was sold at 98.65 per cent of face value to yield 9.01 per cent.

The $325-million part of the issue, maturing in five years, sold at 98.75 per cent of face value for an average annual yield to maturity of 7.59 per cent over 10 years. These bonds are exchangeable for eight-per-cent bonds for a further five years at maturity.

Proceeds of the issue are designed to retire $405 million in bonds that mature April 1 and will add $545 million in new funds to federal coffers once the entire issue is sold.

Buy Diesels

MONTREAL (CP) — CP Rail has placed a $26.6-million order with General Motors of Canada Ltd., London, Ont., for 50 new 3,000-horsepower diesel locomotives, it was announced Thursday.

Death Penalty Is Advocated

OTTAWA (CP) — Gilbert Rondeau (SC—Swefford), citing the attempted kidnapping of Princess Anne, called Thursday for restoration of the death penalty in Canada.

Existing laws pamper criminals, and they should be strengthened to prevent similar terrorist incidents in Canada, he said in the Commons.

Aid Asked

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand said Thursday in the Commons he will ask airlines to consider special fares for handicapped persons.

He was replying to a suggestion by Stan Deriing (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka), that the handicapped are entitled to the same lower fares allowed persons younger than 12 and older than 65.

Mr. Marchand said the idea has "a lot of merit."

Gordon Mullin Hired For $16,500 UCS Post

United Community Services directors Thursday revealed that Gordon Mullin, currently working as professional division administrator for the Federated Appeals of greater Montreal, has officially accepted the $16,500 post of agency administrator-fund raiser vacant for over seven months.

Virginia O'Rourke, agency president, received a letter indicating Mr. Mullin's intentions just prior to the UCS meeting yesterday.

In a telephone interview today, Mr. Mullin said he is enthusiastic about coming to Belleville, a community he has passed through during his travels in Ontario.

The basic reason for my move is that I think I have something to offer to the community," he said. "What I got from the community is a lot."

When he will be able to come is still up in the air, he said.

"I have submitted my resignation but it has not been accepted. I'm going to have to play it by ear."

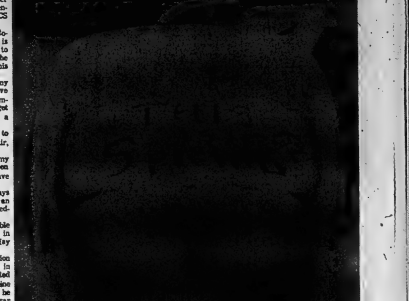
At present, he is three days away from the start of an April campaign for the Federated Appeals.

He expects to be available to locate permanently in Belleville between mid-May and the month's end.

Prior to accepting a position with the Federated Appeal in 1969, he worked with United Red Feather Services for nine years, from 1923 to 1932, he held the posts of registrar with the Montreal Boys Association and assistant director of the Society for the Protection of Women and Children.

Born and raised in Montreal, he was educated at Sir George Williams University where he received an arts degree. He is married and has a 18-year-old daughter.

Mr. Mullin succeeds Isidore Cooperman, who resigned as executive director in August 1973.



An employment agreement between Mr. Mullin and the UCS provides for a $16,500 annual salary to be reviewed upon the anniversary date of hiring. Relocation expenses are set at $720. Pension plan contributions are paid by the UCS A month-long vacation is allowed for.

No long-term contract has been signed but provision has been made for a two-month notice of separation.

His duties, as outlined by the board's personnel committee include a heavy fund-raising campaign in October. It will perform administrative work and serve as consultant to the board and standing committees.

Fact-finding surveys to determine social and welfare needs in Belleville will also fall under his supervision.

Mr. Mullin will be dealing directly with the community to broaden public awareness and understanding of the function and services of the agency.

Spring?

You wouldn't know it to look around but we're now into our first few days of spring. Yes, the season arrived at 7:01 p.m. on March 20 according to the almanac. But already we've had over five inches of snow. The message written in snow on this bug seems to tell it all. Ah, well, it can't be too much longer before the first robin and crocus make their welcome appearance in Belleville.

Nurse Killed

TWEED (Special) — A Belleville General Hospital nurse died instantly Thursday when the small Japanese car she was driving was struck by another car on Highway 37 at the northern limits of Tweed village.

Dead is Nancy Ann Mary Williamson, 23 of Belleville. Her parents live in Matane, Que.

The fatality occurred at 8.30 p.m. Thursday when Miss Williamson's northbound car was struck broadside by another driven by John Robert Gunter of Rt. 4 Tweed. Mr. Gunter was uninjured. Both cars were write-offs.

Coroner Dr. R. S. Berry conducted an autopsy at BGH this morning.

Rear-ender Cost $2,700

A rear-end collision on Highway 14 at Foxboro resulted in $2,700 damage and sent a 52 1 Foxboro man to hospital with minor injuries Thursday.

Cornelius Vanderveide, 54, was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital yesterday.

Belleville provincial police said the vehicle driven by Mr. Vanderveide was southbound on Highway 14 and had stopped to permit passage of a northbound telephone trailer before making a left hand turn into a gas station.

Another southbound car, driven by Ralph Edward Bateman, 30, of Rednersville, Shirley, collided with the stationary vehicle.

Damage to the Bateman vehicle was estimated by police at $2,000 the Vanderveide vehicle at $700.

A police spokesman said the road surface was heavily covered with snow and ice and no skid marks were evident.

Police blamed a total of 10 minor property damage accidents Thursday on the snow and ice covering Quinte area roads.

Car, Plow Collide

A Montreal woman remains in Belleville General Hospital today in satisfactory condition following a car-snowplow collision on Highway 401, 13 miles east of Belleville Thursday.

Tina Korman, 72, passenger in a vehicle driven by her husband, Joseph Korman, 67, of Montreal, suffered injuries to her face and fractured her left arm in the accident Thursday afternoon.

Driver of the ministry of transportation and communications snowplow, Alexander Tucker, 37, of RR 1 Marysville was unharmed.

Belleville provincial police said both vehicles were travelling westbound near the Salmon River bridge when the Korman vehicle ran into the snowplow. No damage estimate is available.

Budget Deadline May 1

United Way participating agencies will be required to submit estimated operating budgets for 1975 to the United Community Services prior to May 1 deadline this year.

The move, approved by UCS directors Thursday, would give the board an earlier and better picture of agencies will be required to ing year.

A letter informing the 12 agencies will be in the mail in the near future along with copies of a standardized budget submission form. All agencies will be required to use it.

Agencies submitted budget estimates on various forms, previously. One included only expenses in its budget report last year and failed to enclose an estimated breakdown of revenues expected.

This made comparison by the agency review and allocation committee time-consuming and cumbersome, said board president Virginia O'Rourke Thursday.

The exact nature the submission form will take is under study by two specially appointed members of the board of directors.

On Course

Works superintendent for Marmora, Les McKeown will attend an environment ministry course in Toronto March 18-22.

Puppets are Fun

The youngsters had a treat yester day when the children's section of the Corby Library presented story telling, films and a puppet show for their amusement. The children sat enthrall ed through the films and a story told by children's librarian Jean William s but were most fascinated by the puppet shows of Peter Rabbit and a clown act. Here, three-year-old Edward Fisher watches in awed wondermen t at the clown puppets.

Bata Workers Back on Job

BATAWA — The 200 workers of the extensive department of the Bata Shoe Company who stopped work Tuesday returned to their jobs Thursday awaiting the outcome of a conciliation board meeting in early April.

Robert Kidd, president of Local 1788, International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers said: "We had a meeting with the company Wednesday and everything is OK for a while, at any rate.

"Everybody is back to work and we expect the conciliation board to meet on April 3 or 4," he said.

The situation started on Tuesday when 19 workers walked off their job two hours before finishing their overnight shift.

They were joined by workers from the night and afternoon shifts. Reason for the work stoppage was to protest a walkdown to continue talks between the company and the union. Main differences revolved around cost of living bonuses.

Final Payoff

Former board treasurer of the defunct Belleville Citizens' Bureau, Jane McNicol, has given a $114 cheque to United Community Services to partially offset debts incurred by the consumer aid group before it closed down in September 1973.

The money, held in trust by the Citizens Bureau board of directors, had been donated by various companies and individuals to support the consumer aid project once funds ran out.

Late in the fall of 1973, a board decision called for the remainder of existing funds to go into UCS coffers.

The bureau, initially funded by a Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grant, folded when federal funds were cut off. At that time, outstanding debts amounted to $1,833.

As sponsors of the program, the UCS was under contract with the federal government to make good the overexpenditure by the bureau. The debt was paid from UCS funds. The sum cannot be recovered from Ottawa.

Bureau Suggested As Ombudsman

An inquiry by Alderman Jean Smith concerning the possibility of creating a citizens' assistance program under the United Community Services' name brought a promise from agency president Virgina O'Rourke Thursday aldered within the month.

During a regular board meeting, Ald Smith asked whether the UCS could fill the need of city residents in a manner similar to the Citizens Bureau, currently operating in Trenton under a Local Initiatives Program grant. The latter, she suggests, would be provided through selected volunteer workers supervised by the newly hired administrator.

The board of directors will deal with Ald. Smith's proposal through the social planning committee, Mrs. O'Rourke. The alderman would be informed of the board's decision before the city budget is brought down.

Originally formed in Belleville in 1972, the Citizens Bureau moved to Trenton under the sponsorship of the Quinte District Labour Council several months ago.

Monday of this week, a labor council representative requested a grant from Belleville council in anticipation of federal funds drying up in mid-summer. The bureau, with the grant, would bring its operation back to Belleville.

The possibility that bureau funding will cease prompted Ald. Smith to inquire whether its consumer assistance could be somehow provided by the UCS, she said.

"I don't like the service to the community dropped," she said. "The need for a bureau has been proved."

During discussion, Ald. Smith repeatedly stressed she was acting only for her own information and not as a representative of city council.

The former United Way campaign chairman said there would be little point in paying out two grants if city council could get away with paying one. If the UCS could assume some current bureau responsibilities, another agency, with another board of directors, would not be created.

Both the UCS and the Citizens Bureau have requested a $12,000 grant from city council.

However, directors argued that taking on the role of citizens' advocates would alter the agency's role as an information and referral source, and behind-the-scenes initiator of community action.

Part of the need could be fulfilled, but not to the extent performed by the Citizens Bureau.

"Advocacy — that s the genius of the Citizens Bureau," said Mrs. O'Rorke. An individual's problem is handled almost entirely by bureau staff.

Due to other commitments, the UCS executive cannot be not be adequately performed by a paid administrator and volunteer staff,she said.

Woman Guilty Of 15 Charges

A 19-year-old Mississauga woman, Lori Denis Lohman, was found guilty of two charges of theft, one charge of possession of stolen goods and 12 charges of fraud, involving a total of $581.64. when she appeared in provincial court here yesterday.

Miss Lohman was found guilty of stealing items from the wallets of two Belleville receptionists on Feb. 13 and Feb. 20. In both cases she took a small quantity of cash and some credit cards from the receptionists' purses.

Seven of the fraud charges stemmed from incidents in Kingston, Feb. 20 to Feb. 22, in which she used the stolen credit cards to fraudulently purchase food and lodging and some women's clothes.

The other fraud charges were laid in Toronto where Miss Lohman used a stolen credit card to obtain lodging and to purchase some clothes. Between Jan. 22 and Jan 23. total value of the goods purchased in Toronto was $265.71, the largest item being $201.84 worth of clothing from the T. Eaton, Co.

Miss Lohman also pleaded guilty to a charge of knowingly having some stolen credit cards in her possession. The stolen credit cards had been used in the five other fraud charges.

Judge J. L. Clendening reserved Miss Lohman in custody until April 8 pending the preparation of a pre-sentence report.

UCS Reorganizes

Reshuffling of committee composition to include greater public representation should increase community participation in United Community Services affairs, agency president Virginia O'Rourke told directors Thursday.

In a series of appointments — some yet to be confirmed — the president named UCS board members as chairmen of four newly reorganized committees. Other than the chairmen, each committee would be composed entirely of citizens, all would be elected volunteers.

"The objective is to involve the community more," Mrs. O'Rourke said during the agency's board meeting. "I expect each of these chairmen will solicit community participation in these committees."

Three committees will be allotted funds to increase independent action. It is hoped this would decrease the number of less important matters the full board will need to deal with.

At present, should the lock on a door require replacing, the matter must come before a board meeting, she said. Since a quorum was lacking, no allotments could be made.

Committees open to public participation are: campaign, house, personnel and nothing-ating, and budget and admission.

The campaign committee will be responsible for all United Way fund-raising activities throughout the year. At the time of the annual drive, it will take on the task of finding a campaign chairman.

The house committee will supervise maintenance of 349 William St., property owned by the agency.

The third committee is charged with matters dealing with paid staff. It will also screen individuals prior to forwarding a recommendation of a new director to the board for approval.

A new committee, budget and admission, will review budgets submitted by the 12 UCS participating agencies prior to the October fund drive. It will also review applications made by organizations that desire inclusion in the United Way.

Province Will Contribute

PICTON — The ministry of agricultural resources will contribute toward the reconstruction costs of East Lake Road because of its wide usage as the approach to Outlet and Sandbanks provincial parks.

Prince Edward County engineer Donald, Clark this week told county council that the ministry now is preparing an agreement and other papers for consideration in connection with the financing of the road's reconstruction.

Director Says Planners Scarce

Numerous vacancies and the resultant sudden demand for senior planners has created a shortage of experienced personnel across the province, Quinte Planning Board director Bert Kenny said Thursday.

Second formation of several new regional municipalities in Ontario and the new provincial ministry of housing has created a large number of new jobs, he said, in many cases, these municipalities had not had planning boards prior to Jan. 1.

At present, they provide a large job market for senior planners and other supervisory personnel, Mr. Kenny said. Newer planning boards and private consulting firms are drawing their personnel from already established boards.

Mr. Kenny said he came to this conclusion following a three-month survey taken late in 1973. It revealed that approximately 65 positions were available across the province for an individual with similar qualifications to those the board required.

The Quinte board, in which Prince Edward, Frankford, Sidney and Thurlow townships participate, has been without a planner for six months, attempts to fill the vacancy and continue with work now held up have been fruitless.

Demand for planners has forced salary records higher than the board expected to pay.

"There are fantastic jobs flowing around," he said. "We find realized that salary was a problem.

Currently, the director is preparing a salary schedule he expects to submit to board of directors within a week. He said if a revised schedule is unacceptable, other avenues may be investigated to fill the vacancy created when Richard Dansieer left for the Kitchener-Waterloo board.

No replies to advertising in metropolitan dailies and the Town Planning Institute of Canada newsletter were received when the salary, first offered in October 1973, was below $12,000.

Further advertising, offering a salary range of $11,500 to $13,500, produced 12 applications. Of these, eight were from planners without the two to five years' experience required.

In all, four separate advertising campaigns were authorized by the planning board. Of those who replied, six in dividuals of 17 were experienced. Only two of those six were interviewed but both proved unsatisfactory for the position, said Mr. Kenny.

All-weather Picketing

Production workers at Union Carbide have been on strike for almost two weeks now since manning picket lines outside the plant March 11. And while the 200 workers on strike do their four-hour stints, the weather is something that just has to be tolerated. A makeshift hut with a canvas cover and a blazing wood fire inside provides warmth for pickets. Albert Young takes a warming rest.

Shut Out By Bruins 7-0

St. Louis All But Out of It

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

St. Louis Blues are playing their way out of a Stanley Cup playoff berth for the first time since they joined the National Hockey League in 1967.

On Jan. 30, St. Louis had an 8-point lead over Montreal with 30 games and six ties and a firm grip on first spot in the West Division. Since then, the Blues have had three wins, 14 losses and four ties and are in fifth spot, six points behind Atlanta Flames.

St. Louis has only a one-point edge over sixth-place Minnesota North Stars, who have two games in hand, and a three-point lead over seventh-place Pittsburgh Penguins.

In Boston Thursday night, the Blues dropped their 13th straight game on the road as the Bruins won 7-0 to assure themselves of at least a tie for first place in the East Division.

In other games, Atlanta Flames tied New York Rangers 2-2, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Vancouver Canucks 3-1 and Los Angeles Kings stomped California Golden Seals 6-3.

Bruins 7 Blues 0 . . .

The Bruins now have 105 points, 16 more than second-place Montreal Canadiens and each team has eight games to play. Boston could clinch first with a win or a tie Saturday night in Atlanta against the Flames.

Bobby Orr scored three times to lead Boston to its fourth win in five meetings against St. Louis this season. Orr now has 30 goals—the fourth time in five seasons Montreal defenceman has reached that plateau. Last year, he missed 15 games and wound up with 29 goals.

Goalie Gilles Gilbert faced only 26 shots as he chalked up his third shutout of the season against St. Louis, half of his season's total.

The Blues play in Montreal Saturday night against the Canadiens who have managed to make everyone look good in the last month or so.

Rangers 8 Flames 5

Defenceman Pat Quinn's second goal of the game with 1:32 remaining in the third period gave Atlanta its tie with New York.

Bobby Leiter with two and Al McDonough got the other goals for the Flames.

Flyers 3 Canucks 1

Rick MacLeish scored two goals for the Flyers to bring his total to 32. Bill Barber got the other Philadelphia goal. Andre Boudrias scored for the Canucks.

Vancouver goalie Gary Smith turned back 40 of 43 shots while his team-mates smothered only 22 drives at Philadelphia's Bernie Parent.

Kings 6 Golden Seals 3 . . .

Rogie Vachon made the save for the Kings and Juhl Widing, Bob Berry, Mike Murphy and Bob Nevin added singles. Stan Gilbertson, Ron Huston and Hillard Graves replied for California, who are at home to Toronto Maple Leafs in tonight's only game.

Spitfires SOJHL Champs

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Defenceman Gary Armstrong's second goal of the game with 5:21 remaining gave Windsor Spitfires a 4-3 victory over Chatham Maroons Thursday night and their first Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League championship.

The Spitfires swept the final three games of the best-of-seven series.

A crowd of 5,117 saw Windsor erase a 2-0 deficit for the second consecutive game as Armstrong and John Riley scored 56 seconds apart midway through the second period to counter a pair of goals by Ken Lefaver of Chatham.

Ken Campbell put the Spitfires in front for the first time early in the final period but Dave Eaton's goal on a powerplay evened the score and set the stage for Armstrong's winner.

High School Student Has Arrived

Wayne Dillon Powers Toros

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When Toronto Toros opened their 1973-74 World Hockey Association campaign, they considered Wayne Dillon to be a future superstar.

Dillon, who graduated from Toronto Marlboro juniors and is the only active high school student playing professional hockey, hasn't cracked the top ten in the individual scoring race, but Thursday night he scored four goals to lead his team to a 6-3 victory over Houston Aeros.

Those four goals may be the most important ones of the season for the Toros in their battle for a playoff position in the WHA.

Dillon's fourth goal was his 27th of the season and he has 39 points for a respectable total of 59 points.

The Toros, who have been performing inconsistently recently, took sole possession of second place in the East Division. Although the race is still close, the victory gave them the breathing room as Chicago Cougars tied 5-5 with Vancouver Blazers and Quebec Nordiques also played a 5-5 tie with Edmonton Oilers.

The Nordiques are tied with Cleveland Crusaders for third place and, two points behind the Toros, Chicago is in fifth place four points behind the Toros.

Veteran goalie Les Binkley is back in left knee in the third period and had to be helped from the ice, tempering the Toros' triumph before 9,355 fans in Ottawa.

Houston's Gordie Howe assisted on one goal for his 1090th point of the season, but he was the victim of an old injury to his left foot and he did not play in the third period.

Toronto coach Billy Harris said after the game that the injury to Binkley looked bad but the extent of damage wouldn't be known until today.

"It's an old injury and he got rammed hard on the knee again tonight."

Harris said his team capitalized on mistakes by Houston.

"They weren't sharp. We got a lot of goals from their mistakes. Bill Dineen, Houston coach, said his team was "sluggish and tired from the heavy road trip."

Howe said that he was disappointed in not being able to finish the game, but he said his foot just hurt too much and that he needed time for it to heal.

Edmonton 5 at Quebec 3

Pierre Guite's second goal of the game—his 13th of the season—with less than three minutes remaining lifted the Nordiques into a deadlock with the Oilers. Chris Worthy was brilliant in the Edmonton nets blocking 52 shots by the Quebec team.

Vancouver 5 at Chicago 5

The Blazers rallied in the third period on goals by Don Burgess and Don O'Donoghue to tie the Cougars. The Cougars missed several opportunities to score in overtime, after twice blowing two-goal leads in regulation time.

Petes Perk Up, Win Big

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes showed no signs Thursday of the suspected infection they contracted during a visit to the Soviet Union in January as they rolled to a 7-4 victory over Sudbury Wolves in one of two Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A games.

In the other contest, St. Catharines Black Hawks spoiled London Knights an early 1-0 lead but came back with six unanswered goals for a 6-1 win.

Giardiasis, which doctors say is a rare ailment contracted from drinking water, causes diarrhea, nausea, vomiting, weight loss and tiredness.

The players have been given medication for the ailment, which has been blamed for their recent slump. The club has lost 15 of its 30 games since returning from Leningrad.

Red Laurence paced the Petes with three goals. Dave Jarvis, Jim Scammurra, Bill Evo and Jim Turkiewicz scored once each for Peterborough which was outshot by the visitors 36-29.

At St. Catharines, Ron Zanussi gave the Knights a 1-0 lead at 10:32 of the first period. However, within 27 seconds, the Black Hawks had a 2-1 lead on goals by Gary Mcadam and Terry Casey, the first of two for each player.

Greg Craig and Rick Addoono got the other goals for the Black Hawks who outshot the Knights 36-22.

In games tonight, the Petes and Knights meet in London, Ottawa Nats play host to St. Catharines, Oshawa Generals face the Rangers in Kitchener and Sudbury meets Hamilton Red Wings in Niagara Falls.

Hawks Rip Royals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Soviet Black Hawkes got three goals from Robert Ritchie Thursday night to defeat Cornwall Royals 11-6 in a Quebec Major Junior Hockey League game.

Meanwhile, Laval Nationals defeated Sherbrooke Beavers 8-1 and a game between Trois-Rivieres Draveurs and Drummondville Rangers was postponed because of the snowstorm.

Jacques Cossette, Firmin Roussel and Pierre Larouche had two goals each for the Black Hawks and Michel Bergeron and Michel Deslel added single.

Bob Chase scored twice for Cornwall with singles going to Gary MacGregor, Allan Wagar, Doug Chase and Kevin Treoy.

Claude Dupuis scored twice to lead Laval. Jean-Pierre Vezina, Yvon Vautour, Mike Bossy, Gaeten Potvin, Jean Trottier and Bernard Noreau got the other Laval goals with Marcel Dumais scoring for Sherbrooke.

Let's Go, Bobcats!

A capacity crowd is expected at Memorial Arena to-night when Belleville Bobcats play host to Brampton Bluer in Game 4 of the Metro Junior B Hockey league group final.

Bobcats, with their pride hurt after suffering two straight setbacks to the Blues, will be out to prove to their fans and the opposition that the old Belleville spirit may have dimmed temporarily but is about to be rekindled.

Cats also have that great home-ice streak going for them. They've lost only once at home all season in league and playoff action. And with a full house to back their efforts, the feeling is Moe Hunter's skaters will snap out of their ill-timed slump and rebound with a bang.

Drop-pucks and polish which carried them to first round victory over Peterborough Lions and semi-final series defeat of Pickering Panthers, Bramalea will get a battle.

The Quinte Hockey League semi-final playoff series was forced to a ninth game when Stinson Construction nipped Cornerstone Builders 3-2 in Game 8 Thursday, at Memorial Arena.

Al Walker's goal on a set-up from Don Goodfellow kept Stinson's alive in the Thursday night thriller, His counter squared the set at 3-3 with two games tied.

Kevin Kelrstead fired two Kingston goals in the win over Yardmen. David Archibald had the other marker and earned two assists.

Belleville's goal was scored by Tony Meagher who connected on a pass from Bob Thompson to narrow the score to 3-1 late in the game. Winston's insurance counter came with 14 seconds left.

Lions advanced to the B quarter-finals by edging Ormonoto, Bowmanville Jr. C 2 this morning. Rick Barbeau led the Belleville team's attack with a two-goal effort, including the winning counter.

Ed Grills had the other Lions' goal and Gord Male earned two assists.

The New Brunswick team got both its goals from Mike Zirpolo.

In spite of the fact Oromocto was short-handed through a penalty, the team pulled its goalie and managed to apply the pressure but Merrill and his mates were equal to the task.

Newfoundland Joins Alberta in the Lead

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Alberta and Newfoundland were tied for the lead with 6-2 records Thursday after the eighth round of the Canadian Legion curling championships.

Bruce Cameron of Gander led Newfoundland to the lead by edging Alberta 5-4 in the seventh round Thursday morning. Cameron's quartet took a 7-3 win over the Quebec rink, skipped by Brock Blackhouse of Montreal, in the eighth round.

Alberta's Al Lautsch rink from Pincher Creek stayed in contention with a 6-4 win in the eighth round against Frank Hoar of Truro, N.S.

Trailing Newfoundland and Alberta were New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Manitoba, British Columbia and Saskatchewan, each with 4-4 records. Quebec and Ontario are 3-5, and Prince Edward Island at 2-6.

Earl Glover's Vancouver rink had an easy eighth-round 10-5 win over the New Brunswick rink skipped by Lou Dugas of Chatham.

Saskatchewan took a 5-3 victory over the Earl Assie rink from Trenton, Ont., playing without skip Burley Townsend, who was sidelined with the flu. Townsend left the ice during the seventh draw, putting the rink in the hands of third Nels Arbuckle.

Zeke Nowosad's Manitoba-northwestern Ontario rink from Flin Flon downed the P.E.I. rink skipped by Ron Brown of Summerside, 7-3.

In other seventh-round games, Nova Scotia edged Ontario 11-10, Manitoba knocked off Saskatchewan 13-9, P.E.I. took it's second win with a 7-2 drubbing of New Brunswick, and Quebec overpowered B.C. 10-4.

Hec Gervais Watches U. S. Curlers in Earlier Action

Swiss "Near Perfect" — Gervais

BERN, Switzerland (CP) — Peter Attinger of Switzerland has been curling for only four years, but in the last two years he has beaten two of the best curlers in the world.

Today he skips the only rink at the world championship that has a perfect record—eight wins and no losses.

Thursday night he led his crew to a 13-5 decision over Scotland and today he shouldn't have any trouble with Denmark in the final section of the round-robin tournament.

In other eighth-round games, Canada beat Sweden 5-2, France beat Norway 12-7, Denmark beat Germany 7-6, and the United States beat Italy 9-2.

Seventh-round results: Switzerland 5 the United States 4, Canada 8 Italy 4, France 6 Sweden 5, Germany 5, Scotland 3 and Denmark 5 Norway 4.

Standings going into the final eighth round: Switzerland 8-0, Canada 6-2, Sweden and the U.S. 5-3, Denmark and Germany 4-4, France 3-5, Norway and Scotland 2-6 and Italy 1-7.

Attinger, 23, beat Bud Somerville of Superior, Wisc., Thursday, less than 24 hours after he downed Canadian champion Hec Gervais 5-3.

Don Duguid of Winnipeg, a former world champion, says he thinks the Swiss will win the championship.

Attinger, asked how he felt about beating Gervais and Somerville, two of the world's best curlers, said:

"I am astonished. I'd still say, though, that the Canadians are the strongest because Gervais plays something new on each end. . . . I have to beat more experience."

The Swiss rink, which practised three hours a day all winter, has been coached by Wally Ursuliak of Edmonton.

Attinger said he was nervous in the game against Canada because of the big crowd—a world championship record 7,000—and he didn't unwind "until after I had thrown my final rock."

Gervais said the expected sell-out crowd of more than 8,000 for the semi-finals Saturday will put pressure on the Swiss.

"When you are 9-0 the odds are that you'll lose one."

In beating Gervais, Attinger and his brother, Bernd, 33, and Walther Neuenschwander, 21, at second, and Jurg Geiser, 24, a lead, curler have veterans, seldom missing half-rock takeouts and making the draws when necessary.

"When they're hitting like that there's not much you can do," said Gervais. "They played a near-perfect game."

Miller Back in Form

HILTON HEAD ISLAND S.C. (AP) — "The rest was good for me," Johnny Miller said.

"Right now my game is very similar to the way it was after I took that time off in December then came back at the Crosby," Miller continued.

The U.S. Open champion won a record three tournaments in a row after that December layoff and, after a three-week rest, returned to action here with a four-under-par 67 that gave him the first round lead Thursday in the $300,000 Heritage golf tournament.

"I don't have any weaknesses in my game now," said Miller, who had a stroke advantage over Allen Miller, no relation.

John Mahaffey, twice a runnerup this season, rookie Ben Crenshaw and Larry Ziegler followed with 68s.

Larry Watkins headed a group at 70. Australian Bruce Crampton was in another bunch at par 71 and the rest of the game's big guns were strung out further back.

British Open champion Tom Weiskopf had a 72, Arnold Palmer 73, defending titleholder Hale Irwin 74 and South Africa's Gary Player a disappointing 75. George Knudson of Toronto also shot 75 with nine-hole scores of 39-36.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Billy Casper and Robert Green, a two-time winner this season, are not competing in the classic for a $40,000 first prize.

Miller dropped off the tour a month ago in an effort to cure a nagging cold that had plagued him all season.

But a thought of sweet remembrance stays,
Memory of her and memory of her loves ever devotion,
Of those who think of her.
—Lovingly missed by Blondie and the McCready Boys.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of our dear daughter, Vicki, who died March 22, 1972.
Memories kept in our eyes do not glisten,
And our tears are not always sad.
There is never a moment, dear Vicki,
We don't think of the daughter we had.
It's hardly have without you,
But we do, and we always will.
For it is not the years we miss,
Since you were called away.
—Lovingly remembered, Mom and Dad.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of a dear sister, Vicki, who died March 22, 1972.
Sweet memories are all we have,
To call us to see us yet,
Memories of you are nothing hearts,
But memory we keep.
—Remembered by Dale, Connie and Jeremy.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of our dear granddaughter, Vicki, who died March 22, 1972.
Every hour we cherish her,
Sadly do we feel our loss,
Memories of her are sweet but bad,
Sad to know, to bear the cross.
—Remembered by grandmother Hazel.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of our dear sister, Vicki, who died March 22, 1972.
Thank you God for the many memories of Vicki,
Memories of her smile, her laugh,
Memories that she was a friend.
—Lovingly remembered by brother Larry and sister Julie.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of a dear niece, Vicki Thompson, who died March 22, 1972 and sadly missed.
Sweet Vicki, soon is silent,
And the smiles cease to flow,
Still God moved the pattern,
And called you home.
We can't blame Him, though,
We only thought of selfish love,
For the pattern which He planned
Was perfect from above.
—Sadly missed by Aunt Ruth, Uncle Stephen, Lori, Chris and Kim.

CARD OF THANKS

WOOD — We wish to thank our friends, neighbours, relatives during their many acts of kindness during the illness and passing of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Earl R. Wood. Special thanks to Reverend Barry, Mrs. Curtis for the lovely music, Dr. Curtis and the staff at Bonnie Funeral Home for their kindness and consideration. Sincerely appreciated and will not be forgotten.
—Family

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, March 23

Aries (March 21-April 19) Be patient with new projects you begin today. Conditions and persons won't be in harmony as yet.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) It's not a good time to take on more than you can handle either financially or workwise. Stay within your limits.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You're better off to not involve yourself today with a new group where you know but few of the people. You'll feel out of place.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Be on your best behavior when with others. Even a small antisocial act will leave a poor lasting impression.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't try to impose any new ideas you have on someone else. If you find they're not receptive, back off. Try later.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone you don't know too well will have a tempting proposition. Look before you leap. It's not as good as it sounds.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be wary of new alliances at this time. You may find yourself involved in an association that offers nothing but problems.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is not a good time to make important changes in your work or career, though you'll have a strong impulse to do so.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extra-patient and kind with loved ones today. If you are angered, don't say things you'll later regret.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Outside pressures will be a bit heavy for you to take it out on the family. Leave your problems at the doorstep.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Stay away from persons whose ideas conflict with yours. Whether you know it or not, they've got a chip on your shoulder. Harsh words come easy.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) It's important at this time that you stay well within your means. Impulse buying will prove more than your budget can handle.

Inflamed Muscle Called Myositis

By G. C. THORSTEDON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A member of the family has not been able to work for five months. His trouble was diagnosed at first as myositis, which we had never heard of, and later as fibrositis with a possibility of myositis.

Please explain this, and what are the chances of good people of returning to work? The last time he had an EMG test, would you explain that test?—M.K.A.

Myositis is inflammation of muscle. Fibrositis is inflammation of fibrous tissue, that is, tissue surrounding muscle or joints.

The two have very similar symptoms, which is not surprising. They result from similar causes, and when they occur together, the condition is known as fibromyositis.

Acute attacks can result from infection, strain, injury or exposure to irritating chemicals.

Ordinarily with treatment comprising rest, heat, and painkillers the trouble is short-lived and the patient fairly soon returns to work and other activities.

However, in certain cases, as in this one, the disorder can become chronic, and when that occurs it is wise to start looking for some focal infection in the body—infection in the gums, at the root of teeth, and in the prostate gland are typical offenders. If no infection is found there, you go on and explore other areas.

In these disorders there usually are trigger points—sites of great tenderness—and they can be injected with cortisone to relieve misery.

An EMG test (electromyograph) is a recording of muscle response to electrical stimulation.

In this particular case there are a lot of questions I would ask you if you were right here: whether there was any injury; whether the patient had worked with materials that could be irritants; whether a search had been made for sites of infection; what the patient ate, and so on.

With such information I might be able to explore more specific aspects, but I think the answer above will at least give you some guidance as to the nature of the problem.

Opening lead—♥Q

By Oswald and James Jacoby

In spite of all the violent crime we read about today, the holding of the bridge table is not only perfectly legal, but it has the approval of all successful players.

South analyzes the opening lead and notes that West has led the danger-suit. Any other opening would have given South time to knock out both enemy aces and make sure of scoring at least nine tricks. As it is the defence can set up heart winners against him.

South can knock out the diamond ace and come to nine tricks with a successful club finesse, but he sees a much better play. He can make his contract if hearts break 4-3 in which case he will lose just two hearts and two aces so he can make it against any heart division unless both aces are in the hand with the long hearts.

Therefore, South should let West hold that first trick. West can do no better than continue the suit. South wins and then goes after diamonds. East takes his ace and can't find a heart to lead and South has time to knock out the ace of spades. Eventually South tries the club finesse in an effort to score an overtrick.

Shrine Tourney

Visiting Teams Strong in Goal

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Preparations for the Belleville Downtown Shrine Tournament are still going on from an organizational standpoint as far as the teams participating in the three day event March 29-30-31 are concerned, they are prepared and ready to produce a well deserved Grand Champion.

The winner of the Tournament two years ago, Toronto Blues will be back again this year and are hoping to recapture the title they lost to the Don Mills Flyers last year.

"We had some trouble early in the season." said Blues trainer, Ken Isacomb. "We lost our first nine games in regular season play. The problem was we were losing them by one and two goal margins. The guys just couldn't put the puck in the net."

The Blues have broken out of their scoring slump though, and in the last 10 games they have scored over 50 goals. They're out of playoff action in the Toronto area now, but it seems they are playing better hockey than they have all year.

They have only lost one of the last 10 games and two of those wins were against the top Peewee hockey club in St. Louis in exhibition play.

Despite the Toronto club's poor won-lost record over the regular season they have one of the better goals against averages in the league, at just over two goals per game. The Blues are also considered one of the tougher backchecking clubs with a good solid defence.

They have already won the Niagara Falls Peewee Tournament this season and behind the goaltending of Glen Wagg, who has a pair of shutouts to his last two starts, hope to add the Shrine Tournament title to their list.

While on the topic of goalies, the Ottawa Voyageurs will be in the running for Belleville's, Tournament honors behind the goaltending of Denis Girouard.

"He's made a fantastic comeback" said Ottawa's manager, Lionel Trudeau. "He's just a great little kid and a great little goalie."

Last August, Girouard was playing with a B.B. gun when it went off and the pellet bounced off a tree into his left eye.

The pellet penetrated five millimeters and the eye had to be removed. Nevertheless, Denis returned to hockey and made it with the Voyageurs. Around the team he is known as Mr. Courageous.

Throughout regular and exhibition games this season, Girouard and Alain Labelle have combined less than a 3.00 goals against average.

Denis has made the adjustment with the help of a goalie's mask from lacrosse so that he can see more with his right eye.

Jean Pierre Leveux brings the defence together in front of the Voyageur netminders, playing 45 of 60 minutes in many games.

The 94 pound defenceman, "is the best puck handler on the team," added manager Trudeau.

Along with recording 18 wins, two ties and no losses in the regular season, the Voyageurs have won Championships at the St. Maurice, Noranda, Three Rivers and Brockville tournaments. They were runners-up in the Gatineau tournament and quarter-finalists at the Quebec International.

The Voyageurs are looking for their first Championship at the Shrine tourney.

Goaltending appears to be the key to success for several teams this season.

Brampton Warriors are getting a lot of good mileage out of Mark Thompson," said team manager Gord McCullough.

The Warriors aren't a high scoring team, but they rarely get whomped by the opposition. They are noted for their heavy forechecking.

The boys aren't very big," observed McCullough, "but they're peaky. They sign a lot of teams in their own end before they get a chance to set up. "We've had a good deal of success with our forechecking. Between that and Thompson in goal we should do all right at the Shrine."

Thompson captured the most valuable goalie award at the Oshawa tournament, while his team was beaten out in the semi-finals.

In 1971 the Warriors won the A Championship of the Shrine Tournament.

Oshawa Kinsmen are one of the top contenders for Shrine honors this year. The Kinsmen lost only three of 18 regularly scheduled games this season and have only been shutout by oppositions teams once in the past two years.

The Oshawa club won the A Championship at the Quebec International Tournament for the second time in three years, the Richmond Hill — Rosedale tournament for the second time in three years and their hometown Peewee tournament for the third consecutive year.

"We have a good, strong, well balanced hockey club," commented team official Garth Campbell. "There are no individuals on the squad just a team of 17 boys."

Campbell's team backed up his statement through their showing at the Quebec Tournament. There, the Oshawa club racked up 40 goals in six games and only allowed 16 against.

Tight Security Greets Royalty

LONDON (AP) — The Queen returned home today from her state visit to Indonesia and found Heathrow Airport bristling with paratroops in one of the biggest security operations ever, mounted for a royal arrival.

Scotland Yard and the British Army were taking no chances after Wednesday's kidnap attempt against Princess Anne near Buckingham Palace, in which four persons were shot and wounded.

Army marksmen were posted on the roofs of airport buildings and scores of uniformed and plainclothes police mingled with the crowd. Motorcycle patrolmen covered all roads leading to the airport.

Another security clampdown was under way at Cirencester Park in Gloucestershire, where Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, were completing today in the Amberley horse trials.

Anne was out early in the morning exercising her horse as police guarded strategic points in the wooded landscape.

Police sources said today an unidentified person or persons hindered Princess Anne for several days before the kidnap attempt.

They said Anne's car was often followed to and from Old Grove House, her home at Sandhurst Military Academy where Mark is an instructor.

Once, a man waited in a car outside the house for 24 hours before being moved on by a policeman. He told the officer he was "waiting for a friend."

The shadowing was disclosed only after the attack, when the Royal couple's neighbors, mostly military families, remembered seeing the same car around the Phillips home on several occasions.

Scotland Yard said detectives still believe the attack was the work of one man acting out of a sense of personal grievance against the Royal Family. Ian Ball, 26, an unemployed labourer, has been charged with attempted murder of Anne's bodyguard in the shooting.

Police refused to say immediately whether the man outside the home of Mark is an instructor.

Meanwhile, detectives discounted a letter received by The Times of London in which the previously unknown Irish-Anti-Internal Activity Revolutionary Movement claimed responsibility for the attack and warned of more violence and "revolution in October."

A Yard spokesman said the letter "was typed in an attempt by a fringe group to gain publicity."

Police continued to search an eight-room house in Fleet, about 10 miles from Sandhurst, where they suspect Anne would have been held if the abduction had succeeded.

The house was rented three weeks ago by a man who gave the name as Van der Flats and said he worked in advertising. Neighbors said they heard a shot from the house last week, and said the tenant disappeared a few hours before the attempt to kidnap Anne.

A neighbor, Shirley Leggett, said the man never tried "to smile or speak. One of the few signs that anyone was there at all was the sound of light classical music played very loudly and frequently."

Police also searched a room in a boardinghouse in London's Paddington district, where an unconfirmed press report said a tenant's rent record bore the name "Peter Ian Ball."

Police said a white sedan used by the attackers was rented under the name John Williams and a ransom letter found in the car was written on a typewriter rented by J. Williams.

A shop assistant, shown part of the letter by police, reported it said "unless £600,000 ($850,000) is paid ... Anne will be shot dead." Earlier reports put the figure at $2.3 or $4.6 million.

Anne, her composure apparently unruffled by Wednesday's ordeal, accompanied Mark Phillips today to his home village of Great Somerford to accept a belated wedding present. They were married Nov. 14.

Toilet Paper Shortage Real

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The toilet paper shortage in the United States is real, industry officials say, and the only solution is sharp price increases.

Robert Sapp, a Scott Paper Co. sales manager, reversed Friday previous industry announces that a shortage was the temporary result of panic buying.

Sapp told a group of building owners and managers here that since that statement was made in January, several smaller companies have folded.

As a result, he predicted a two-per-cent shortage of paper products in the remainder of 1974 if the industry is not able to increase its present production levels.

Scott, Kimberly-Clark and other major companies simply have not been able to meet the demand for paper products, Sapp said, because of low profits, inflation and increased operating costs.

The Cost of Living Council lifted wage and price controls from the paper industry several weeks ago after getting written pledges from the companies that they would limit price increases to 10 per cent until August.

However, Sapp pointed out costs have increased as much as 72 per cent.

Postal Workers To Resist Change

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of about 18,000 inside postal workers say they will ensure a $90-million automation program in the post office will fail unless the government makes concessions on working conditions.

The declaration is included in a paper presented to the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) executive council earlier this week by Jim McCall, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, on behalf of the union executive.

Mr. McCall said Friday in an interview that the statement is "a declaration of principles rather than one of tactics." The union was not advocating revolutionary acts, he added.

Several union officials have predicted widest strikes this year as the post office extends its postal-coding and mechanical letter-sorting program into cities other than Ottawa. These current centres runs until Dec. 31, 1974.

Ottawa was the first city to have the machines, but Toronto and several Prairie cities including Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary are due to get new letter-sorting equipment this year.

The paper says the government must give higher classifications to all workers involved in mechanization, shorter work hours and earlier retirement, make full disclosure of government plans, do research into the effects of mechanization on people, make de-categorization of jobs that removes work from the bargaining unit and give a guarantee of no electronic supervision of workers.

The union is seeking support for these positions from the CLC. If the post office does not make those guarantees the union promises problems.

SLA Letter Published

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — A biweekly San Francisco newspaper has published a lengthy communication it says may have come from the terrorist kidnappers of Patricia Hearst.

The San Francisco Phoenix says it was not able to confirm the letter's authenticity. But "we consider it a distinct possibility" that it is from the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA).

Neither the FBI nor the Hearst family would vouch for the validity of the report.

In a previous issue, The Phoenix had posed 20 questions to the SLA. The letter was purported to be the answer to most of the questions.

It dealt mostly with the philosophical goals of the SLA, which the FBI says has only seven members.

At one point, the letter read: "You ask if Patricia Hearst has learned political consciousness while she has been with us and the answer is yes; she has grown a great deal and we are hoping that it will not be necessary to execute her."

Miss Hearst was kidnapped Feb. 4. The last confirmed word from her kidnappers was March 10.

CP Resists Takeover

MONTREAL (CP)— "We do not believe nationalization of CP Rail would serve the best interest of Canada," a company spokesman said Friday.

He was replying to Transport Minister Jean Marchand's statement that government takeover of the Canadian Pacific Railway company is a possibility.

CP Rail refused to elaborate, except to say the company is doing the best job it can.

Mr. Marchand had said Thursday unless CP Rail's cooperation with the government improves, "I'll fight like hell to nationalize."

However, he said Friday: "I'm not looking to nationalize them; maybe they'll co-operate."

Mr. Marchand has been under fire lately from the western provinces because of the slow rail movement of grain.

The CP Rail spokesman said "we've been through a very bad winter, the worst in a couple of decades.

"We've conceded that we're behind in grain deliveries but we have stated that we do expect to meet Canadian wheat board requirements for this current crop year."

Private Pickup Breaks the Law

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of Canadian Bioblocks say they are preparing to lay charges against the owner of a truck and his two employees who the borough alleges picked up bundles of paper for recycling from the lawn of Borough Transportation commissioner, Bruce Brunton.

Mr. Brunton said the charges may be laid some time next week.

Maximum fine under the borough's garbage bylaw, which prohibits private citizens from collecting paper for recycling, is $300.

Bioblocks collects about 50 tons of paper a week for recycling and sells the paper for $45 a ton. Last year the borough made a profit of $90,000.

Unionists Suspects In James Bay Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — Company spokesmen say they have seen evidence that a fire which destroyed more than a quarter of a million dollars in the northern James Bay area was set by workers belonging to the Quebec Federation of Labor.

An inspector employed by a construction firm on the site in Fort George has been given provincial police photographs of men "revolting" in buildings in the camp, 600 miles north of Montreal.

"The men in the photos definitely were from the QFL," a spokesman for the site construction firm.

Police of the James Bay Energy Corp. said Friday night they have identified some of the workers photographed while setting fire to the buildings.

Construction began for the multi-million dollar project on the La Grande River were the James Bay Energy Corp. said Friday and officials of the energy corporation are compiling estimates of damage after the revolt by workers Thursday.

Officials said the damage included the partial destruction of three electrical generators and sections of the workers' living quarters.

The generators were destroyed Thursday as workers doused them by some workers plowed through them, leaving behind 1,000 workers in the LG-3 camp site without electricity or heat.

Air Canada Employees Settle

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Air Line Employees Association membership has ratified a new contract with Air Canada, the airline announced Friday.

The new three-year contract is retroactive to Oct. 1, 1973, the day after the last contract expired.

It provides more than 2,200 workers with an immediate board five-per-cent wage increase, a 22-cent-an-hour increase and $10 a month for the first year.

In both the second and third years, workers will receive a further five-per-cent wage increase and a cost-of-living allowance every three months.

Negotiations were completed in Vancouver last weekend after a series of crippling strikes at Air Canada installations in this country and abroad.

Quizair Wins Sweeps Race

DONCASTER, England (CP) — Quizair won the Irish Sweeps Lincoln Handicap today.

Somerseyway was second and Anak Malaysia third in the one-mile race.

Holders of Irish Sweepstake tickets who put Quizair in the draw won the £113,000 (about $270,000) first prize.

The second prize will now exceed £20,000 ($48,000) on Somerseyway and 10,000 (about $24,000) each.

Quizair was rated a 25-to-1 shot by the bookies. Somerseyway carried odds of 20 to 1 and Anak Malaysia was 10 to 1.

Major Rolo, runaway favorite at 3 to 1, never showed among the leaders and finished somewhere near the back of the 26 runners.

Farmers Promised A Raise

OTTAWA (CP) — Dairymen can expect more money for their products when federal dairy policy is announced next week, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan indicated Friday.

Despite cash receipts of $1.4 billion last year, up 18 per cent from 1972, the country's 115,000 dairy farmers say they need "further increases in returns ... to offset rising costs."

"I agree with them," Mr. Whelan told the Commons.

He was speaking during debate on a Conservative motion seeking a $2 increase in the price paid for 100 pounds of manufacturing milk, the type used to make cheese, butter and skim milk powder.

Agriculture officials indicated that farmers likely will be given such an increase when the policy is announced. But they refused to say how a $2 increase, which would cost about $250 million, would be split between increased subsidies and increased retail costs.

The dairy industry currently is the most heavily subsidized in farming, with manufacturing milk subsidies worth about $150 million a year. Additional subsidies of about $106 million are provided for fluid milk, farmers under last fall's agreement, aimed at keeping consumer prices down.

Trent River is Named 'Forgotten Industry'

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The majestic Trent River will be the site of seasonal revival as top Quinte county attraction.

As such, it's been called the forgotten industry, contributing much to the area's economy.

Once, it was obvious that the river was an industry.

It wasn't much more than 230 years ago that Etienne de Champlain and his band of Huron guides came across the Trent. About two hundred years later a noted agitator and reformer, Robert Gourlay, was fostering a canal scheme for a water link between Trenton and Rice Lake.

The imperial government of the time agreed with the concept and it was decided a toll system would be arranged.

But the link wasn't to be. The Welland Canal took precedence. It wouldn't be until the middle of the 19th century that post-war steps would be taken and surveys of civil engineer N. H. Baird put to use.

The heavy traffic foreseen for the waterway - ranked as one of largest in the country - would not come to pass.

The irony of the Trent waterway came in the form of bristling lumber trade that brought settlers to Trent Port, a community of several hundred people at the river's mouth.

Pioneers stripped the countryside of its lumber and made no attempt to reforest the land for a continued industry.

At the turn of this century those mills that still survived were producing only 19 per cent of the boom business of 30 years before.

Because there were no environmental protection techniques, Trenton had been worked out of the lumber business. The river returned to a quiet waterway for light traffic.

Environmental protection, after a century of virtual idleness, has brought the river back into the limelight.

Pleasure boats have replaced log barges and cruise the river and its lock system in numbers that increase annually.

The river is renowned for its fish resources and has become a breeding ground for tourist industry in recent years.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent by Trenton and the country's senior government to acquire greenbelt property along its riverfront urbanization.

Jack Wilson, manager of Trenton's chamber of commerce refers to the Trent as the "forgotten industry."

"It's one of the biggest industries in the area, generating huge business each year in tourist traffic," he said.

Subdivision Goes Behind Doors

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — Prince Edward County councillors disappeared behind closed doors Tuesday night to discuss a 60-lot house subdivision proposed by developers as the 'Waring Estates'."

The privacy of the discussion was not at the request of the developers. Mrs. Ruth Denton, a Prince Edward County native, is a member of the Fred Cooke Realities firm. Her father, Lloyd Hicks, also a former county resident, recently has spoken with press representatives and several municipal officials in the county to explain his subdivision proposal. Maps of the Waring Estates were provided and Mrs. Hicks expressed hope that reporters would be in attendance when county council reviewed the plan.

Keith MacDonald, Prince Edward warden and reeve of Hallowell, favored an open meeting, but councillors voted unanimously to bar the press from the discussion following Tuesday's regular session of county council.

Since the developers have fully described their plans for the subdivision west of Picton, council's retreat behind closed doors seems questionable.

The proposal involves 300 acres of farmland at Waring' Corners. Already $30,000 has been spent by the developers on plans and surveys. It has been estimated that about three-quarters of a million dollars would be involved before the actual project could get underway.

Picton's representative to the Prince Edward planning board, Wally Evans, discussed the subdivision at a town council meeting earlier this month. With him was Roy Wight, chairman of the planning board and Warden MacDonald.

Since a great deal of information already has been released in connection with the proposed development and its possible conflict with Prince Edward's draft official plan, why not continue discussions in public?

If the proposal is greeted by a "thumbs down" by county council, then residents of Prince Edward should know why it was rejected.

Ironically, during Tuesday's council session, one councillor complained that a committee report was too brief and referred to material he had not been given. The only information available to him was the committee's ultimate decision, not its reasoning.

A short time later county councillors repeated this particular type of omission by voting to exclude the press from its meeting with developers.

Named Principal

A one-time Trenton resident, Stewart McFarlin, has been appointed principal of Cypress Hills Community College, Swift Current, Sask. In Saskatchewan since 1968, he was formerly a United Church lay minister and with the province's continuing education department.

With fur flying and his teeth clamped onto an arm in a grip that could easily break it, Sabre, the OPP police dog isn't everyone's idea of a good buddy. But, for PC Ted Arthurs, of Belleville, Sabre is a close friend and a family pet. PC Arthurs has been Sabre's handler for nearly four years and together they have participated in numerous search and rescue operations as well as performing their regular property check duties.

Sabre, Devil or Saint?

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Devil or saint — those appear to be the two categories most generally used to classify police dogs — unless, of course, you are Ted Arthurs, the Ontario Provincial Police constable who handles, trains and lives with Sabre, the magnificent German Shepherd assigned to the Belleville detachment of the OPP.

For Constable Arthurs, Sabre is simply a buddy — a buddy who, at the age of five weighs in at a terrifying 100 pounds and has a jaw full of teeth that can exert well over 1,000 pounds of pressure when they clamp down on an arm or a leg.

Trained to track humans, attack humans and even to sniff out narcotics, Sabre is more than just a violent creature harnessed to assist the police in handling a violent society. He is a creature, gifted with remarkable powers of concentration, stamina and perception, who, when teamed up with his trainer provides a police force with a highly competent law enforcement unit.

Purchased by the OPP at the age of 1½ years, dogs like Sabre are quickly and thoroughly trained in the arts of tracking, guarding and attacking.

Assigned to one handler, only, the OPP dog spend the first five or six weeks of a 15-week training period in just getting to know their trainers and learning rudimentary obedience skills.

After the initiation period is over, the handler and the dog work together and learn the principles of attacking and tracking humans.

When the training is finished, they have been welded into a unit that no one else can break or control.

"The handler is the only person that has any control over the dog at all," says PC Arthurs. "Through his commands the dog gets his motivation. The handler has to know his dog. When they track someone, they do it as a team. A handler has to know when his dog is tracking or when he's got you out for a merry walk. If the dog loses a trail, then the handler has to be able to retrace their steps and set things right."

The relationship between dog and handler is an intimate one.

"After a dog and his handler have gone to work together, the relationship that develops between them is far more personal than most people would think," PC Arthurs continued. "Sabre is my constant companion. Everytime I go to work, he goes with me. At home he is just a great house pet. He is a great buddy. He loves to play and he loves to work for me."

Sabre is a hard worker.

When he was just a youngster, one day out of his training course, he made his first arrest.

An escaped convict from Collins Bay Penitentiary had been spotted near Belleville, after he had taken a hostage at knifepoint.

Driving along Highway 401 and a number of back roads in the Frankford — Glen Ross area in a Volkswagen, the convict and his hostage tried to elude police who were trailing them.

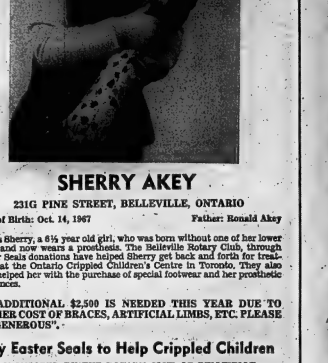
However, the convict hadn't counted on Sabre being called in to help in the search. When he jumped from the car and hightailed it into the bush Sabre and PC Arthurs weren't far behind. Within a matter of minutes, Sabre had the convict cornered and convinced him to give himself up.

On another occasion, PC Arthurs and Sabre were called out to chase three armed bank robbers, who had held up a bank in Russell, Ont., near Rockland.

During the initial chase, the three bandits had fired at police before being forced into a pie shaped section of bush land.

The next morning the OPP brought in two canine teams — one of them made up of PC Arthurs and Sabre — and the handlers and their dogs went to work combing the bush for the dangerous criminals.

After traversing the area Sabre found the three men hiding in a roadside gully. One man immediately gave himself up, after he saw Sabre. Another bandit, however, — the one with the gun — turned to run and may have tried to shoot at PC Arthurs, if Sabre hadn't convinced him otherwise.



"The Rockland incident was just one case where the dog managed to help his master," PC Arthurs said. "If it hadn't been for Sabre, I might have had to duck lead."

Devil or saint?

The problem of classification only bothers those who just aren't sure what side of the law they are on.

Some Have Second Thoughts

Energy Crisis Brings About A Spate Of Barter Deals

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Second thoughts are already taking place about the big barter deals which have followed the increase in world oil prices as the Arab embargo on Middle East crude imports.

Many of them are coming from the very large private corporations, the leading multinationals in effect, which would have to implement the billion dollar deals which have been signed by governments.

So far Japan has signed three with Iraq, Iran and Algeria, the British a major one with Iran as has West Germany and the French with Abu-Dhabi, Saudi Arabia and Iran.

All of them but two total about $5 billion in promised deals plus two strictly barter agreements between France and Abu Dhabi (Crude oil for 15 Mirage jets) and Saudi Arabia (200,000 barrels per day against the promise of the French building a new 80,000 barrel per day refinery).

Caution is stalking West Germany and Japan in particular where world-wide corporations are wondering how they could ever allocate their resources to meet these deals, given the vague nature of future oil prices and the manner of either the oil-producing countries or their own governments would pay for their services.

As a result the German government is changing its mind about a long-term scheme of the Shah of Iran to expand an existing one-million-size refinery into an integrated industrial complex.

Both the minister and the top bureaucrats in Japan's Inspectorate MITI (ministry of international trade and industry) are very worried about the ability of Japanese multinational companies already over-extended around the world, to wait out their role to fulfil these large barter deals.

Japanese statisticians have found out that Japanese barter and bilateral deals signed to date will bring the country only 60 per cent of the crude she needs. The rest still must come from the international oil companies.

Moreover the terms of all these long-term deals are far from conclusive, being mainly letters-of-intent to be finalized. And since multinational companies have the largest number of long-range planning functions in their corporate operations, (more efficient than those of governments these days), they have reported to their national governments that such hastily agreed-to bilateral deals could mean extra expense for everyone.

Prior to the energy crisis and the sudden opportunity of the Arab oil-producing nations to grab banks of Western technology as a result of it, many Europeans, U.S. and Japanese companies have been willing participants in these countries for years.

John Brown's on the Clyde-bank, the great shipyard which built the two Queen Marys and the Queen Elizabeth, received a $30-million order to build pipe for the domestic facilities of Algeria's state oil and gas corporation. That was in the late 1960s.

Simon Carves Ltd., one of the largest British engineering consulting firms has been busy on its own for years or with consortia of related private firms in all the oil-producing countries.

Its study of the facilities and future outlook where anglo-norman Thompson has a refinery and formed a consortium consisted of PEMEX (Petroleos Mexicanos — Mexican Petroleum — Mexico's 26-year-old state oil and gas corporation), Simon Carves and Litwin Engineers.

Public opinion could enter the scene somewhere. Private firms, where highly-sophisticated Mirages jets will be cynically shipped off in two Arab countries with no oil pilots and no air forces, all French taxpayers response in the long run.

Dental Hassle

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The making of a hero:

For the last two years I've been following the development of a very unusual cold war: the Ontario Dental Association against the Dentorist Society of Ontario.

Soon after a few raids the army of ODA was increased by the addition of the Provincial Government and the Ministry of Health.

The ODA has been fighting for standards more than economics, while the DSO has been the other way around.

Money comes first for their members who refuse consistently to set the standards.

A year ago the government agreed to incline the pleas, putting itself at the side of the dentists and by passing a bill, created a hybrid called denture therapist. This was supposed to be the ideal solution for the headaches of the Ministry of Health. The dentorists refused to take any exam because that implied the supervision of the dentists.

And then came into this war another body, a very strong body which has the power to control the public opinion, and is called the Press "Staff writers" who in their efforts to fight the establishment and the dental racket, made a hero out of this law breaker, the so called denturist.

In the eyes of the public who reads the neatly written articles, he is the victim of an injustice bigger than the pyramids: he is the good rebel, the Robin Hood of the Ontario's health forests, the symbol of prosperity in a sick dentured world, the Messiah who promises savings and who is delighted in being crucified with raids in exchange for a full first page of free advertising.

The dentists were asking for more than standards, they were here by the means of a highly technical exam to identify therapists. However, the dental profession refuses to let a new member of a weak group on the grounds that it is not affordable for the public (economical fact: dentorists who have made a study of the techniques and feit that the therapists were a great idea are dentists who very seldom or never do denturist work.

In the city of Belleville there are three denture therapists willing to work under the control of the dentists are put out of the scene, and none of them has been able to find a dentist's job.

Should they be allowed to deal directly with the public. After all they are qualified. It would be more than interested for some staff writers to find out that the enormous difficulty examination complies with the standards of the dentists. It set by dentists and the examiners are dentists. Can they find better standards? If not, the price, a denture therapist can offer dentures at the same price as denturists.

A bill has been passed and a law exists. Whoever does not comply with the law is an offender. Not in the sense that makes a hero out of a law-breaker, but in accordance to what is certainly not the mission of the press.

JOHN ORTI

Tourist Boom

Tourism the world over has been enjoying tremendous growth and Canada, as one of the few countries relatively untouched by the energy crisis, may expect one of its best years in the spring and summer period just ahead.

Britain too, as a favored nation in the tourist field, and one which now more than ever needs foreign capital, is looking ahead with optimism. If anyone believes British is on its knees to be unaware of the true economic facts and unaware of the advertising by companies like British Airways aimed at bringing the tourist to the British Isles as usual.

The artistocracy are losing no opportunity to cash in either. In the van of tourist pickings since taxes made it untenable more and more are opening their stately homes, they have a spokesman in the United States at present in the person of Sir Francis Dashwood.

Sir Francis has been saying he just had to dispel the notion that Britain was at such a low ebb as to be not worth even a visit. With a stately home of his own at West Wycombe, a Buckinghamshire estate much favored by Benjamin Franklin in his day, Sir Francis wants to see as many Canadians and Americans as ever.

Harold Wilson's party government meanwhile seems to have a strong hand on the helm, and this also is what Britain needs right now. How it handles the country's manifold problems must be left for passage of some more time, but at least the miners' strike is over and the road ahead is a little brighter.

Life And Death

The death of CBC announcer Bruce Marsh, who had been awaiting a heart transplant in California and the disappearance of expatriate Eugene (Jim) Lenko from Russia are events that reflect sadness on the one hand and happiness on the other.

Our memories of Marsh are of a courageous man who lived life right up to the end despite the ailing heart which he knew would not sustain him for much longer. At 48 he could have had a lot of living left — if only the transplant could have been possible. Reports say a heart did become available shortly after his death, compounding the irony of what might have been but was not to be.

For Lenko, a native of Quebec, who was brought to Russia by his Ukrainian parents at the age of about 16 life is starting anew. In these stages of 1960 Canadians there is the evidence of an end and a beginning and reminders that this is a finite world for those who live in it.

European Car Imports Can Expect Keener Competition

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Every industry has its peaks and valleys. Today, Canada's automotive industry is going through one of those valleys.

Some 10,000 automotive workers have been laid off in this country, as have about 125,000 in the United States, while the industry struggles to sell off its top-heavy inventory of big cars and to convert its emphasis to greater production of small cars.

The industry's troubles arrived suddenly last year with the sharp shortage of gasoline in the United States, and the sharp increase in gasoline prices in both countries.

The gracious decision of the Mid-East oil producers' cartel to lift (temporarily, at least) its embargo on oil shipments to the U.S. will ease but not solve the U.S. gasoline-supply problem.

As for gasoline prices, the outlook is not for more reduction but for further increases.

The leadership of the car-manufacturing industry, despite its many detractors, has been a good judge of public buying preferences over the years.

It can be expected to react positively to today's consumer mood, by continuing to increase production of intermediates, compacts and sub-compacts — and also increase the range of high-profit luxury options on them—while cutting back the output of the less popular gas-guzzling road locomotives.

Along the way, the North American car makers hope to provide even tougher competition for their overseas counterparts.

Foreign-exchange rates used to favor the sale of imports when the dollar was riding high. But with the steady weakening of the U.S. dollar, and the closely linked Canadian dollar, from about 1971 to 1973,

Figures just published by Statistics Canada show that the price of the average car increased 10.3 per cent from the previous year's 62.2 per cent, and the decline in the Japanese share to 13.3 per cent from 24.2 per cent.

Last year proved to be a tremendous one for the small-car segment of our automotive industry, because of sharply higher U.S. demand for economical cars.

It was much less pronounced for some other segments. Canadian manufacturers of some parts, who would like to displace imports at least to the extent of reaching a 50-50 share of the Canadian market, saw the trend going against them.

Our deficit in auto-parts trade, with the U.S. and other countries rose to $1,347-million last year from $1,345-million in 1972.

Taking all automotive products together—cars, trucks, snowmobiles, parts, tires and so on—1973 Canadian imports exceeded exports by $80-million.

In 1972, our deficit in automotive trade had been $285-million and in 1971, $77-million. In 1970, we exported $97-million worth more than we imported.

The Canadian government will have to fight hard to prevent further deterioration, in the face of mounting U.S. political pressure to protect American jobs by restricting the import of Canadian-made cars and parts into the U.S.

Precautions Against Kidnapping Threat

By AL COLLETTI
NEW YORK (CP) — The prevention of kidnapping has become a serious problem in the United States, Anatties — increased following the seizing of Patricia Hearst and Atlanta editor Roy Murphy. Many prominent Americans are now become fearful for their own safety.

Private detectives report more requests for personal protection for wealthy persons. Others have installed alarms or armed their chauffeurs. Others have changed guards and constantly change their routes to their offices.

The problem for many of these persons is a fear that the Hearst case will be the typical. The kidnapping of Miss Hearst a result ago is a classic example of how difficult it is to protect an entire family, says a lawyer who studied the problem in South America.

Editor Murphy, held for 48 hours, was freed after payment of $700,000 ransom. Police captured two suspects and recovered most of the ransom.

In contrast is the case of Miss Hearst. Although her father launched a $2-million program to feed California's poor, as demanded by the kidnappers, members of the Symbionese Liberation Army, and promised 4 million more if the girl is released, there has been no word from the captors for almost two weeks.

FBI figures show that alleged kidnappings rose to 1,556 in 1972 from 1,181 in 1969. But the FBI says the figures reflect a decision that are not always well reported. And the problem is not where the targets are not the wealthy and the prominent. A lot of cases cover attempts by a parent to foil a court order in a custody battle by taking a child from a separated or divorced spouse.

But these FBI explanations do not appear to be restoring confidence among some privileged groups. The unsolved Hearst case appears to be having the opposite effect. Many prominent persons are assuming low profiles.

For example, the wife of an oil company executive asked society-page editor not to publish her picture. A big steel company stopped using home addresses of executives in press statements. Some prominent persons keep their family trips secret.

The climate of fear has made a number of prominent persons interested in financial protection in partial compensation for the lack of confidence in police deterrence.

Kidnapping insurance is available, although it is one of the least publicized insurance services. And it is expensive, with reports of premiums running to 20,000 and $40,000 a year and more.

Lloyd's, the London underwriters organization, acknowledges an increase in "this kind of operation." Those who pay the premiums are undoubtedly aware this form of protection won't stop the kidnapper although it may cover the financial price of a ransom without the victim going broke.

Citizens' Bureau Gets An Earful

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am prompted to write this letter because a surge of sympathy for the infantile thinking of some of you out there in the void has suddenly taken hold of me.

This came about because only a few minutes ago, I received an anonymous telephone - just one of many. I answered with my usual courtesy only to be greeted from the other end by a series of laughing jackass noises. My first re-action was one of admiration. The noises were so real that they projected that which I am sure must have been intended. I almost admired a laughing jackass at the other end of the line. It must have taken practice to do this so well. But, what a pity. What a waste of time. The joke was on me. It is on the other guy. I couldn't care less.

I must admit that such calls waste a bit of my time too, but I feel that I contain enough humanity and humility to help the other fellow reach for happiness and satisfaction if this is his only method of obtaining such. God love him. Bless you fun. Remember though, I'm laughing.

You see, I belong to the Citizens Bureau staff. We are trying our very best to do a good job and, I believe, we are succeeding. You wait to see Joe Public get a square deal. To this end, it is necessary to write to our co-operative editors now and again to advise the public of something we have found taking place which should be known by the public. We write as individuals expressing our personal views, not as members of the Citizens Bureau staff. We have the courage to sign our own names, making no effort to associate the Citizens' Bureau with our comments.

That we are becoming recognized more and more, even if we sometimes must use these calls from the lower order of the species as a guide. Keep it up though, I assure you we are around.

I would ask one thing though. Please, Mr. Editor, let the language a bit when you call. Even the ladies. We, the staff, are all fairly well educated and although we are qualified to use the language of the street occasionally, I must confess we are at a loss here and there to fully interpret some of the choice words and expressions you use. Some are classics. I wish I could but I cannot repeat them here.

Keep it up though. We don't mind. Just keep it in mind - You're the Patsy - not us.

Vocabulary As Blue As Uniforms

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

Belleville learned this week that you can call a police officer names as blue as his uniform.

A city youth was acquitted of creating a public disturbance by using obscene language after he used a familiar four-letter epithet beginning with "f" in describing two policemen.

Judge J. L. Clendenning ruled that the language used in the incident does not run contrary to prevailing moral standards.

Well, maybe our standards are going down.

Few people, with the possible exception of umpires and referees, come under more public scrutiny or receive more abuse in the course of performing their jobs than policemen.

Of course there are bad cops, just like there are incompetent attorneys and fumbling surgeons. There may even have been an imperfect newspaperman.

But recent years have witnessed a tremendous concentration on training of police force prospects so that, even in smaller centres, the calibre of the individual constable is noticeably improved.

If there is something wrong with the policeman in society today it is partly our fault for casting him in a stereotype no human being could fit.

A good cop isn't supposed to lose his temper — or even have one. If he places a firm grip on a wildly-flailing suspect, he may hear a "police brutality" outcry and find himself up on the carpet.

He is supposed to be devoid of emotion.

A man was recently convicted of assault, but granted an unconditional discharge in a city court. He had punished someone in the face, but the judge ruled the assault had been provoked by obscenities.

But it could cost a policeman his job if he responded in the same fashion.

Chief Douglas Crosbie says he is less concerned about people calling his constables blankety-blanks than he is about the principle of the thing.

"There's no law against calling a policeman names — or just about anyone, for that matter. But I don't think the general public wants to hear certain types of language on the street."

Despite his concern for the public's tender ears, it is doubtful Chief Crosbie is not very aware that such incidents represent an erosion of respect for the long arm of the law.

* * *

Nobody's suggesting a solution as naive as the unlikely district "law and order" clamor of the Nixonian variety.

What is needed is more dialogue between the policeman and his fellow citizen.

And that doesn't mean cops should go to the other end of the spectrum, with every cadet a prospective Toma, wearing sweatshirts and shades, and hanging around with an unsavory crowd to show the town what a good guy he is.

A 17-member task force studying Ontario police forces tabled a report in the legislature this month that emphasized the need for police to take more initiative in community involvement.

"Easy and open channels of communication between police officers and the public should be recognized by all police forces in Ontario as a critical requirement of the police role," the report noted.

Basically, the report suggests a greater rapport between the public and the policeman. The man-in-the-street needs more education about the cop's job and the men in blue need to think more in terms of working WITH their community than AGAINST some of its members.

But sometimes it must get pretty tough, what with all those "prevailing moral standards."

Tax Collectors Far From Popular

By JOHN LENSEN
Belleville District Taxation Office

Taxes have been called the sinews of the state. They have been called the tribute we pay for a civilized society and, inevitably, taxes have been called inevitable.

Similarly, a number of things have been said about tax collectors, many of them quite unprintable.

While modern society camouflages the inevitable encounters with a veneer of politeness, it is quite obvious the tax man is not a candidate for the "most popular citizen" award.

The Royal Commissioners on Taxation made the point this way in their 1966 report:

"Obviously, no one wants to pay taxes; and almost everyone is prepared to argue that his taxes are too high relative to those paid by others. There is an inevitable and endless conflict of interest among taxpayers that cannot be completely resolved."

In the olden days it was held that the primary role of taxes was to pay the cost of government. However, since World War Two, secondary purposes have emerged and the level of taxation has become an important instrument of economic and social policy in modern countries.

Taxes have been introduced, abandoned or varied to produce effects often quite unrelated to the need for revenue. In the case of personal income tax, the level of tax directly affects an individual's spending and can thus restrain or stimulate his ability to pay for goods and services.

Taxes can even influence a wedding date, or how a person invests his savings. When it comes right down to the crunch, most Canadians admit the justice and logic of paying taxes, and often boast proudly of the benefits which result.

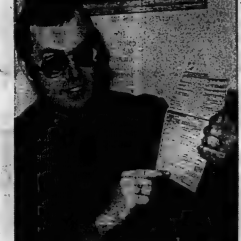
The modern tax man relies on a sophisticated array of electronic data processing equipment to perform his job. While computers he carries out essential tasks with a degree of economy and efficiency never before possible.

Remember, his main task is to collect taxes. The more accurately the tax man can introduce into his work, the more equitably the system bears on all Canadians and the less expensive the job will be.

National Revenue, Taxation, does not decide how much income tax Canadians shall pay. That power rests with Parliament.

Canadians have adopted a self-assessment tax system. Taxpayers volunteer the facts about their incomes and deductions and our department's main function is to ensure that the tax laws are being observed in all parts of the country.

In 1964 the Information Services Department was created to introduce modern communication techniques to a swiftly-changed Department. The new Public Relations approach has been endorsed by Management and the policy is:



1. To provide information to taxpayers in order to improve compliance.

2. To continue treating taxpayers fairly and firmly, courteously and considerately, and

3. To gain the public's acceptance of operational procedures and understanding of the role of the tax assessor and collector.

To date we have had at the Belleville District Office over 15,000 queries either by letter, personal interview or telephone with respect to this year's filing.

We are not trying to be candidates for the most popular citizen of the year award, but like yourself, we are taxpayers and get great satisfaction in assisting the public with the yearly difficult task of filing their returns.

The Taxman

John Lensen, of the Belleville District Taxation Office, knows that taxes, like death, are inevitable . . . but not necessarily as painful.

Kids Speak Out

Sides Split On Bus Issue

Newspapermen dream of the type of response Intelligencer staff reporter Colin Brunce got from a column suggesting children were being pampered and traffic unnecessarily snarled by the existing schoolbus system. In all, 24 Grade 4 and 5 students of Mrs. Dunn at Bayside Public School registered their opinions. Here are some of them, out of the mouths of babes:

Dear Mr. Bruce:
Kids should not be babied and driven everywhere, and should walk if they have permission and are close enough. I live about three-quarters of a mile away from the school that I go to, and I walk every day with snow, sun, and rain.

It takes me twenty minutes at the most. I have walked to school ever since I started, and I think it's fun. Buses are okay if you need them, but I like walking better.

Yours sincerely,
Brenda Reive.

Dear Mr. Bruce:
I don't agree with you because I live about 15 miles away from the school that I go to. And I like it the way it is — that is, getting a ride on a school bus.

Yours sincerely,
Michael Benning.

Dear Mr. Bruce:
My teacher read your news article and I don't agree because if you were a child you would not say that. I have about two miles to walk. I walk to the bus. I walk.

On a winter day it would be cold and I have to be here at nine o'clock, and I'd be frozen.

Yours sincerely,
Bernice Rutgers

Dear Mr. Bruce:
I agree with what you said. We should not have buses because we can hoe gos as fast as you can say cowboy Joe. We should walk to school because we can get exercise.

Yours sincerely,
Chris Delbo.

Dear Mr. Bruce:
I would like to tell you I disagree with you a lot. You see I live about three miles away in the country from our school and it would be very cold coming to school on a blizzardy morning.

Without buses I think people are going to get very mad about them. So I think that you need buses. Thank you for reading my letter because that's what I think.

Yours sincerely,
Lori Hamilton.

Dear Mr. Bruce:
My mother and father are always saying I can't go on the highway because I am too young.

I am ten years old. I believe that a kid about seven shouldn't be allowed to do anything which could be dangerous but I have learned most of the things in life and after all I am a person. I want to do things like that that I should be allowed to.

Yours sincerely,
Beth Dell.

Dear Mr. Bruce:
I think the children who live close should walk to the school but the children who live far should be picked up by the bus.

Wars Hiked Income Taxes

By WILLIAM HOCKLEY

Should income tax replace all other forms of taxation? As all taxes are paid out of income of one sort or another, at first glance, it might appear to be so.

One stumbling block is that this country has no statutory definition of income under Canadian law. The notable difference between income and other forms of income has to be determined on an individual basis.

The encyclopaedia "Canadiana" defines income tax as "a tax payable on the basis of accreditation to the wealth of an individual between two periods in time." Perhaps the definition means that period between the cradle and the grave.

The blame for implementing the first major successful taxation of income tax lies with Sir William Pitt, who used this method to finance the war against France in 1798.

Income tax in Canada commenced at the municipal level and saw substantial development around the time of confederation and did not end until 1941. The provinces got into the act in 1935 when British Columbia entered the field.

For almost three decades, provincial revenues in Canada was confined to monies received from the exploitation of natural resources, license fees, and the proceeds from the sale of public land. Federal revenue was dependent upon custom and excise taxation from 1867.

Canada's first federal income tax was also imposed to meet the cost of war in 1917. The public doubled as a relief relief in 1925 when rates were reduced and at that time there was a general feeling the tax would be repealed.

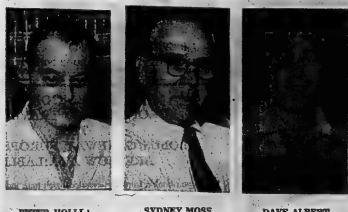
That optimism was short-lived as the deficits of 1932 led to increases and the advent of World War II followed staggering increases in rates and dramatic reductions in exemptions.

Sharply reduced at the end of the war, income tax was raised again in 1950 to meet increased defence spending costs, while the war in Korea resulted in further increases.

The general trend in most countries has been toward a gradual stratification of the income tax — the rate levels being greatly increased in times of war frequently not falling much after the war to pre-war levels.

There is wide acceptance (except among the victims) of the principle that taxpaying ability rises faster than income, and that persons with high income should not only pay more taxes, but a higher percentage of their income in taxes than those with lower incomes.

The important thing about income tax is that it should affect those paying equally. This means consideration of two major principles, the benefit principle and the ability to pay principle.



With the benefit principle, equity demands that those receiving equal benefits should pay the same tax, while taxes on others should be adjusted according to the benefit each receives.

The ability to pay principle insists that people with similar ability to pay should pay the same taxes while those with greater ability to pay should pay more. The controversy regarding progressive tax rates is applicable to this point because it takes more from those with greater ability to pay.

There are claims that it is a difficult system to administer and due to the substantial evasion results giving encouragement to dishonesty.

I don't know if it is dishonest or just unpatriotic, but I certainly suspect those claims, who for a fee make sure that I get all my exemptions.

Are You Ready for Metric System?

PETER HOLLY
A middle-aged employee at White's Butcher Shop, feels, "I'll have to go back to school when they start to use the new system. I don't know very much about it.

"I think it will be good to have the same system all over the world, but it will cost money to change scales like the ones we have in the shop."

SYDNEY MOSS
Syd Moss owns and operates a barber shop, and is originally from England where the metric system has been used for centuries. Moss feels: "It's a question of getting used to. It will take a while for people to understand it, but that's the same with anything new.

"For example," added Moss, "in England 112 pounds is a hundredweight and 14 pounds is a stone."

DAVE ALBERT
"We started learning how to use the metric system in grade nine," commented Dave Albert, a 16-year-old student at Moira Secondary School.

"We're using it quite a bit this year in school, so I think when the time comes it will be easy for people my age to make the transition.

"Anyone older than myself will probably have a lot of trouble."

RITA MURRAY
Mrs. Rita Murray is a nursing student and therefore has all ready become acquainted with the metric system. She says, "It was difficult at first, but it doesn't take very long to catch onto it.

"Once you're used to it; there isn't really much difference between our present system and the metric system. I think when Canada jumps to the metric system there will be a lot of confused Canadians, for a little while anyway."

People and Events

Metrons United Church women met Thursday at the home of Mrs. Hawley McEburn.

The women planned to pack sorting and summer clothing for Northern Ontario.

The Hastings Manor Auxiliary held its regular meeting recently.

A donation of records will be made to the craft room and members were asked to donate materials for quilt making.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Glen Whitehead, administrator of the Manor.

After the meeting, a birthday party was held for residents with Agnes Elliot and Luella Christie pouring tea.

Mrs. Lillian Johnston's home in Marmora, was the setting for a St. Patrick's Tea and bake sale on Friday afternoon, March 15.

After being greeted at the door by Hazel Lavender, President of St. Paul's A.C.W. and Mrs. Johnston, the guests were given a Shamrock memento by Madeline Frost as they purchased tea tickets.

The tea tables were set up in the living room and were decorated with St. Patrick's Day symbols. Visitors were served by Leila Cokden, Elclora Robertson, Betty Trumble and Ruth Kelly.

The bake table, conversed by Teen Cookright and Lizzie Edwards, was completely sold out.

"Where the River Shannon Flows", read by president Grace Thompson, opened the most recent meeting of the Prince Edward Belleville Ladies' Club.

The program, under the direction of Vera Morris, included several readings: The Legend of St. Patrick, The Coming of the Shamrock and Love.

The next meeting will be convened by Annabelle Hardwick and Clara Adams.

Florence Watson, pastel painting instructor at Queen Victoria Community School, was guest speaker at the recent dinner meeting of the Trenton chapter, Business and Professional Women.

The Frankford Squares recently took a mystery bus tour which ended in Trenton at a square dance called by Frankie Nelan.

The group recently donated funds to help retarded children take part in the Olympics for Retarded Children in Winnipeg.

Old and New

New goods — much like the handcrafts and drygoods sold there for well over a century — have been joined by antiques and handcrafts at the Village Store in Halloway recently re-opened by Dianne and Bruce Gerow.

Village Store

Dianne and Bruce Gerow resurrected an old Halloway tradition when they reopened The Village Store in that community north of Belleville last year.

The store, first established as a dry goods shop on the old Master road in 1855, was closed several years ago when the post office was moved to Stirling.

Last April, the Belleville couple and their three children moved to Halloway to reopen the general store with the addition of an antique and handcrafts shop.

Long interested in antiques, the couple saw the building offered for sale in an advertisement.

"We saw it we liked it and we bought it," Mrs. Gerow says.

The couple had never been in business before but wanted to expand their interest in antiques.

Now the store, once a stagecoach stop, boasts refinished furnishings and handcrafts as well as the kind of goods offered for sale for more than a century.

Coach Stop

Now refurbished, this storefront was a familiar stopping place for coach riders on the road to Madoc. The new proprietors, Dianne and Bruce Gerow have retained an aged gas pump along with other memorabilia to keep the village store atmosphere alive.

Working Woman's Shape Up Class

Sharon Airhart

In its program of spring keep fit classes, the YMCA has made provision for men and women to use the Y's facilities to get in shape for summer.

The only people who may not be served by the program are working women: Men have the option of early morning, noon or evening classes but, so far, women who are employed outside their homes during daytime hours can only choose evening classes.

YMCA director Di Diamantides agrees that if there is a large enough response, an early bird class for women could be set up Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

"We're here to meet any need that comes up," he says.

If you're a woman to whom early morning exercise appeals, call Mr. Diamantides at 962-9241 and tell him you're interested.

With a large enough response and a few details worked out, a class can be set up.

It's unlikely that you'll come across one, but watch out for chocolate rabbits manufactured by Regent Chocolate of Quebec. Earlier this month, you may remember, health inspectors visited 400 retail outlets to round up the rabbits which were called off the market by federal health officials after identification of salmonella contamination.

Protection for the consumer is the watchwork of the day but store owners must wonder, sometimes, who's protecting them. The Chicago Sun-Times recently conducted a fascinating little study of human nature in a downtown department store. A reporter worked with a cashier to see how honest customers are.

The cashier gave 18 customers too much change and short changed 10 others.

Of the 10 persons who got too much change, not one person reported it although five seemed to notice the mistake. Of the 10 persons who were short-changed (they were reimbursed at the door), five noticed immediately and complained.

Other typical ripoffs by consumers : the purchase Friday and return Monday of an expensive dress just right for a formal week-end affair; the overwhelming number of just under-age bus riders and movie goers; the amount of degree clothes in lost baggage; the quantity of damaged merchandise subsequently discounted, which reaches checkout counters; the tall-ends of meats returned as unsatisfactory.

All of this, along with shop lifting, is driving up the cost of merchandise for honest consumers.

Why do people do it? One store owner believes its the consumer's feeling of victimization by impersonal business. He'll pocket a candy bar in a supermarket but he'd never do it in the corner store.

He gets a small feeling of satisfaction thinking he's pulled something over on us."

It's March, not May, but if you haven't already ordered seed for your garden, you may be in trouble. One local gardner mailed her seed order in Dominion Seed House about a week ago and received her order back, unopened, Friday. Dominion regretted that a 200 per cent increase in business kept them from filling her order but said that later in April they may be able to supply corn and pea seeds, reports on other seed houses, as they come in, will be published. Meanwhile, buy your seeds locally — soon — or send off your order fast.

Quiete Women

Lynda Salisbury, Police Officer

"I like this aspect of police work better than patrolling in uniform," says Constable Lynda Salisbury of her job in the Belleville Youth Bureau.

"Not that I dislike wearing a uniform," she says. It's just that here I am able to have direct contact with all kinds of people, more tremendous variety and opportunity for involvement. I feel like I'm really able to help people."

Lynda's decision to enter police work came after three years spent studying history at McMaster University, during which she considered being a lawyer.

"The enforcement side of the law appealed more to me eventually," she recalls," and when I saw an advertisement for a police officer in Belleville, that made up my mind." I applied, and moved back here in 1972."

Lynda wanted to return to her home town, where she now lives with her parents and two younger brothers. She joined the force here after a three-month course at the Ontario Police Training College in Aylmer.

At first she accompanied other officers on their various rounds, and went on uniformed patrol duty until this past September when the joined Sergeant Harry McGee in the Youth Bureau.

Her job includes a good deal of paper work throughout the week as she prepares files for appearance in court. She attends court one or two days a week, and also interviews the youthful offenders and their parents.

I explain the court proceedings and the nature of the laws that have been broken, and what the consequences will be.

Another important function we have in the Youth Bureau is to direct people to social agencies that can assist them. Parents and school principals often call for advice and information about where to turn for help.

Linda, although she has a youthful appearance, has found that her role as police officer commands immediate respect, so that being a young police woman has created no difficulties for her.

"All of the force we are all equal members of a team," Linda states. Some people in Belleville seemed surprised to see a girl in uniform at first, but I think now there is complete acceptance.

"I know that this is the right job for me."

Ann Landers

She's 16, Healthy, Afraid

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you won't think this letter is too dumb to print. It took a lot of nerve for me to write it. I'm 16, a girl, and for the last six months I've been terribly afraid that I will get sick and die.

There is no real reason for this, I'm in good health. In fact, I've always been healthy, but I keep thinking I'll catch a terrible disease, something incurable, and die young.

How can I get these hideous thoughts out of my head?—Creepy Louise

Dear Louise: The facts are as follows: The number one cause of death among teenagers is accidents, not illness. So—you can be careful, especially if you drive a car. You can also refuse to drive with show-offs who like to speed.

Eighty years ago the life expectancy for an American female at birth was 36. Today it is 71. So, your chances today are a whole lot better than they were in 1904.

If you stay away from booze and cigarets, eat sensibly, keep your weight under control, and exercise regularly, you should make it well into your seventies. It also helps to pick associates with good blood vessels and a history of long life.

Dear Ann Landers: Since the child abuse rate in the United States has reached epidemic proportions, will you please put in a word to help infants and young children? In every city there are newly formed organizations for parents who beat their kids, often unmercifully, when they get on their nerves.

Parents who do this can now get help without fear of being prosecuted by the law. Thank God we now realize they are sick. These problem parents are often provided with group therapy so they can discuss with other parents their frustrations and anxieties and whatever else is behind the abuse.

Often the child is given therapy, too, while helps him see the parents' side, so he can understand and forgive them for the mindless beatings. Every day I read where some mother or father has burned a child's body with cigarets, or beaten him severely, then told the emergency-room admissions office at the hospital that the child "fell out of the car" or "was knocked down a flight of stairs by the dog." Now there is real help for these children and their mentally-ill parents. Will you please tell them how to get it?—Concerned in Kansas

Dear Concerned: Thank you for giving me the opportunity. The list of organizations that counsel parents who abuse their children can be had by writing to CALM (Child Abuse Listening Meditation, Inc.), Post Office Box 718, Santa Barbara, California 93102.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been going with this nifty redhead for three months. Nancy and I had an understanding from our first date that we weren't going steady. Both of us were free to date others if we wanted to. Well, I haven't wanted to date anybody else but Nancy is seeing a few other guys.

Next month is her 21st birthday. I'm 24 and ready to get married. I'm thinking about going to the jeweler's and buying her a real gold bracelet as sort of an engagement present and having it engraved "From Ted to Nancy with Love." Smart or dumb?—Wigged out

Dear Wigged: If I were you I'd just have it engraved, "From Ted with Love".

Successful Living

Help for Arthritics

Doris Clark

Homemakers are miracle workers. The philosophy of a Visiting Homemakers Association is to help individuals to maintain as high a degree of independence as possible, even if they have a handicap. Often several consultants lend a hand.

I never fail to be amazed at the practical wisdom and deep understanding of some of our homemakers. Here is one story, given to me by the director of the Visiting Homemakers Association in Hamilton.

"Mrs. X was a slim, new individual. — pleasant, very methodical and independent.

"Mrs. X had a steel brace on her back and could not bend, so I (the Visiting Homemaker) placed dishes and utensils within easy reach; a pegboard at the side of the stove and lightweight pots at convenient height. The electric tea kettle was too heavy to lift; it was replaced with a small pot.

"Mrs. X was having difficulty opening drawers. These were sanded and rubbed with graphite to make them slide easily. Plastic dinner dishes were suggested as these are lighter for an arthritic to handle.

"Little things that seem quite insignificant to you and me can cause pain and discomfort for an arthritic. For example, bed covers to allow foot room: I rolled the top corners cornerwise and left the bed open so that when Mrs. X went to bed she could easily roll the covers over her. As Mrs. X had to put a brace on before standing, a chair was placed catty corner at the side of her bed with the brace. The back of the chair was used for support when standing.

"When sitting on the chesterfield it would sag, and it was a chore for Mrs. X to get off the seat and stand, so a large bread board was placed at her back and a metal tray under the cushion till such time as the occupational therapist could get the proper boards.

"The toilet seat was raised. A small wooden chair was sawed to the proper height and placed on a rubber mat in the tub for bathing purposes. A rubber mat was placed on the floor at the side of the tub so Mrs. X would not slip. Her sister made her a bath mitt containing soap and in turn this could be slipped over a bath brush for back washing.

"Large buttons on housecouts and dresses were replaced with round light buttons to slip through buttonholes easier. Ribbon was attached to zippers and the taps in the kitchen were replaced with ones that were easier to turn off.

"A telephone repairman lowered the dial on the phone in some way to make dialing a little easier.

"Tape were attached to chair cushions so the cushion would not slip. Heavy salt and pepper shakers were replaced by lightweight plastic ones and only half filled. Meat was made up in serving portions and frozen; milk cartons were opened and enough was measured out for a couple of days.

"These are only a few of the things that were accomplished while aiding Mrs. X to become an organized human being again, and I'm sure that a good homemaker, by using her God-given senses (eyes, ears, touch), can help make things much easier for a person suffering with that crippling disease, arthritis.

A Homemaker.

Few Babies Available

HALIFAX (CP) — Few babies are available for adoption today because so many unwed mothers are becoming single parents.

Blood Fat, Estrogen

CHICAGO (CP) — Birth control pills and estrogen, often administered to women following the menopause, sometimes cause increases in cholesterol and other fats in the blood, increasing the risk of heart disease, says an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The magazine says a research group from University of California at Los Angeles found three cases of increased blood fats among post-menopausal women receiving estrogen and one in a woman taking oral contraceptives.

The report said all four patients had a mild tendency toward high blood fats before receiving the medications and that the levels returned to normal in each case when they were discontinued.

The research group recommended that patients receiving oral contraceptives and post-menopausal estrogen be checked at six-month intervals for blood-fat level and that patients with a tendency toward elevated blood fats should not be given estrogen.

"And since all we really have to offer to older children under the trend in adoption is leaning that way," says Elizabeth Bissett, co-ordinator of the adoption clearance service for the Nova Scotia department of social services.

However, Miss Bissett stressed in an interview there was no attempt to "persuade" prospective parents to adopt older children or children of any age.

Persuasion, she said, would be contrary to the basic guidelines and principles of adoption.

She was commenting on a story distributed by The Canadian Press which said social workers, government agencies and child-family welfare units are becoming more concerned with persuading prospective parents to adopt older children.

The story also quoted Miss Bissett as saying prospective parents today will take a child even if they don't like the child.

Miss Bissett had actually said parents now are able to consider adopting children who do not look the same and in fact may be of a different race. People will take a child, young or old, even if he or she doesn't look like them, she said.

Each Must Accept Risks To Know God for Ourselves

By DR. GORDON C. SMITH

The home of the eagle is on a pinnacle of rock. There is the nest. There a young bird receives its first lesson in flying. It seems cruel. The mother suddenly scatters her little brood. The eaglet tumbles in terror. But the mother's broad wings are spread underneath.

God is continually scattering our nests, because, beneath each painful experience is his gracious purpose to further equip us to ride storm or crisis or to survive some storm. "Is it at your command that the eagle mounts up and makes his nest on high?" This question is from the classic story of Job, one of the great instances of how God teaches us the facts of life.

Recall that Job had never known anything except wealth, comfort, happiness and success. Here are his own words, "My steps were washed with milk, and the rock poured out for me streams of oil. Then I thought, 'I shall die in my nest, and I shall multiply my days as the sand.'"

But there came a time when a procession of messengers arrived to tell him that every one of his family was dead, except his wife, and he soon wished that she would join their company. Moreover, every source of income reported wiped out. However, the worst affliction of all was the visit of his three friends who spent twenty chapters of his life's story trying to get him to admit what he had sinned or where he had done wrong.

Nonetheless, the hero in his soul never deserted Job. He kept his integrity. He stuck to his belief in God. "I know that I shall be vindicated." One by one the silences of his supposed friends. "And the Lord blessed the latter days of Job, more than his beginning."

The average person has to learn through experience that conventional forms of religion are insufficient in time of trouble. Each of us needs to know God for himself. In the process, we find that risks have to be taken if we are going to avoid sameness and thrill to life's flight.

C. S. Lewis' well deserved title, "apostle to skeptics". He wrote, "Some people feel guilty about their anxieties and regard them as a defect of faith. I don't agree at all. Anxieties are afflictions, not sins. Like all afflictions, they are, if we can take them; our share in the 'Passion' of the world."

In 1953 Lewis was not at all perturbed by the prospect of his own approaching death. When he had been converted from atheism, he did not pause as a watered down version of the Christian religion. "My withers are quite unwrung by the fear that I may be disillusioned by finally by the hope of everlasting life", he wrote in his last publication.

"I believed in God before I believed in heaven".

Note the difference between an eagle and a turkey. Send them on a race. Which lives first? The turkey stumbles and seeks satisfaction from the ground about. The eagle soars. You and I were made for the heights. We were not intended to think only of the moment or the nearby.

The ancient philosophy of the Bible rings true to experience. "Even youths shall faint and be weary, and young men shall fall exhausted: but they who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings like eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint."

Montrealers Staying Away From Church and Synagogue

MONTREAL (CP) — There has been a dramatic decrease in attendance at churches and synagogues in this area in the last decade with few signs of a reversal in the trend.

The Roman Catholic archdiocese of Montreal, for example, is studying a report which found only 30 per cent of Catholics practise the faith, attend mass and receive the sacraments.

The report was completed in October, 1972, and was based on samplings from 68 parishes. It was prepared by Rev. Jean-Pierre Duchesne, a sociologist employed by the archdiocese.

The 30-per-cent figure shows a significant drop from a 1971 survey which indicated 36 per cent of Catholics attended mass regularly. The figure in 1961 was 68 per cent.

The 1971 federal census reported 2,133,180 persons in the area who claim to be affiliated with the Catholic Church.

Father Duchesne also found only 12 per cent of Catholics between the ages of 25 and 35 attend church and receive the sacraments regularly.

While church attendance has been dropping, there have been some early signs of a revival alongside the established structures of the parishes.

Such phenomena as the charismatic renewal and the community movement are beginning to attract younger Catholics who have been estranged from the established church.

Rev. Jacques Grandchisan, an advocate of changing church structures, said that 200 "Christian fraternities" have been formed in Montreal and have become involved in social issues by stressing collective and secular involvement within a Christian framework.

The United Church of Canada reports a general decline in church attendance.

Dr. Ralph Watson, secretary of the Montreal presbytery, said the number of persons who had contact with the church declined by 29,000 in 1971 from 103,000 in 1966.

"People don't feel that it is necessary any more to attend church on a regular basis," he said. "They don't feel the need as greatly as we used to."

Among Anglicans, the 1971 census listed 136,000 persons affiliated with the church, but

"All religions need a moral ambience in which they can thrive. If it's not there, there's nothing much you can do.

"Radicalism of the 1960s seems to be wearing off. There's a new feeling of tolerance and the climate seems to be a little more favorable today."

U.S. Churches Seen Captive to Culture

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — After a month of first-hand observation of American religious life, a group of clergymen from other countries says the U.S. church system is efficient but overly conformed to cultural attitudes.

A "captive to the culture," they put it.

"You are in danger of becoming a state church," said Rev. Anneliz Nuber, a Lutheran pastor from Germany, citing the use of the national flag in churches as a sign of identification with the state.

"A certain distance is necessary to keep the church as church and the government as government."

However, the visiting team of six men and two women, after intensive tour included rural and city congregations, said they were impressed by the magnitude and diversity of religious activity.

"Your church bureaucracy is excellent," commented Waldo Villajando, an Argentine lawyer who also praised "the efficiency of the American churches."

But he and some others said the U.S. institutions sometimes seem too smug and self-concerned. As Villajando put it:

"Too much money is dedicated to keeping up your buildings and fashioning comfortable churches. You pay too much attention to domestic affairs and too little toward outside."

An official of the Mekane Yesus Church in Ethiopia, Berhe Beyene, said he was shocked by the fragmentation of American church people.

"Everyone is segregated from everyone else, the young, the old, the black, the poor, the cities, the rural areas."

The visit by the group, mostly from countries ordinarily regarded as mission areas, was sponsored by the U.S. committee of the Lutheran World Federation and the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

Symposium to Discuss Draft Official Plan

Loyalist College next weekend will provide a forum for an expected 70 people to air their views on Belleville's draft official plan.

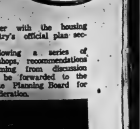
The opportunity, presented during a symposium sponsored by the Community Planning Association of Canada, Ontario division, was billed as by the Loyalist-Belleville Beautiful Society.

Society president David Lintern said Friday the symposium next Saturday may be the first in the Quinte area to deal solely with city planning.

As the initiating group, the society is hopeful the symposium will provide a focal point from which interest can be stimulated in a city maneuver bylaw and the redevelopment of the downtown core.

In these two areas, Dr. Lintern says, Belleville's draft official plan is lacking. However, he stressed that the society is not in opposition to the plan, but wants to consider matters over and above those outlined in the document.

During this symposium, we don't have a specific goal in mind," he said "It's more of a general think session for redevelopment."



In the long term, the society, formed to fight the destruction of St. Agnes Manor two years ago, hopes to see Belleville a better looking city. The society has no vested interest, Dr. Lintern said.

Officials from city hall, city aldermen and members of the Quinte Planning Board have been invited to attend the day-long symposium.

Jean Wells Meredith, former planning consultant with Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates — the firm overseeing preparation of Belleville's official plan—will speak during the session as will Ray Michal, a Loyalist instructor.

Two speakers from the provincial housing ministry will also participate. Robert O'Dell, senior planner with the subdivision section, will speak on the subdivision process. William Balmer, the second speaker, is a senior planner with the housing ministry's official plan section.

Following a series of workshops, recommendations stemming from discussion will be forwarded to the Quinte Planning Board for consideration.

GLENN RICHARDSON

Richardson On Commission

BCI English department head, Glenn Richardson, has been elected to a three-year term on the Planning and Review Commission of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

He polled 234 votes against his fellow candidate's 94 at the annual assembly of the federation in Toronto this week.

PARK recommends committee reorganization to the provincial assembly of Colleges and is responsible for the responsiveness and efficiency of the federation structure. It proposes, when necessary, fundamental changes in the constitution, bylaws and established practices.

The first shares dealings were those in the Dutch East India Co. A company share dating back to 1602 still exists.

The Band Plays On

Under the direction of Monty J. Emmerson, the Centennial Secondary School Senior Concert Band holds a rehearsal outside of the Dixie Motel in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, during its trip to the southern city last week on a concert tour. The band spent six days in the city, playing four concerts and marching in one parade during the 13th annual Canadian-American Days.

Trenton PUC Will Take Over Water Service Construction

TRENTON — Subdividers will no longer be responsible for the construction of water services in their developments — but they will still have to pay for it.

Following a meeting of Trenton's Public Utilities Commission, it was decided that rather than taking chances, all water services would be administered, tendered and managed by the commission.

In the past developers were responsible for installation of electrical services and sanitary sewer lines and the placement of water mains.

This work was inspected by the commission and once the subdivision was completed, the development's water system was turned over to the commission to maintain.

Apparently problems have cropped up through this practice. Mains and their positioning have not met with commission specifications in all cases.

In the scheme supported by the commission this week, before the first basement is dug, the developer will pay for the entire water system. This price will be a combination estimate from commission staff and the result of tender bids.

The developer will pay not only the water system costs but also costs of administration and inspection.

There is no limitation on a developer tendering the the water system on his own subdivision.

According to Mayor Robert Patrick — who spoke in favor of the scheme and the 100 percent payment beforehand — this will leave the responsibility of water systems completely in the hands of the utilities commission.

The commission is now in a position to continuously oversee the projects.

Developers will still be responsible for the placement of electrical services and sanitary sewers.

There was no mention of whether or not the town would consider taking over these areas in a similar fashion to the PUC in its takeover of water mains.

Energy Deadlines Set

Belleville Rotarians heard some familiar statistics on the subject of the energy crisis Monday and were told that while there is no shortage of electrical energy in Ontario, and none is anticipated as far as 1976 at least, it should not be used wantonly but rather wisely and efficiently.

And Jim J. Durand, director of public relations for Ontario Hydro, had this warning: If North Americans were to continue using energy as at present — and assuming a four per cent growth in demand — in 25 years there would be no petroleum; in 34 years no natural gas, and if coal were used to replace them supplies would be exhausted in 78 years.

Speaking of nuclear power, Mr. Durand said Canada had supplies of natural uranium for this purpose to last more than 100 years. He added that fossil fuel replacement sources such as geothermal, solar, wind and tides were long-term and of minor importance.

He believed the construction of a new oil pipeline in Canada would be as important as the building of the railway across Canada.

Mr. Durand said if the energy crisis had been disastrous for developed countries, for the underdeveloped it could be catastrophic. For Canadians, whom he describ-

Library Use

Olive Delaney, Chief Librarian for the Belleville Public Library, reports that for the month of February, the library saw an increase in membership. Of the 363 new members recorded, 112 were non-residents.

During the month 218 non-fiction books and 59 reference books were placed on the shelves. 1,099 people used the reference department, and 827 films were used.

The library received visits from schools during the month and special programs were well attended.

The East Branch reading group began January 30 agreeing to meet every other week to discuss recent titles, such as, I'm Okay, You're Ok.

Registration for the Prehschool Story Hour for the next group is under way. Newcomers will have first chance to participate.

In the future the Community Concert Association and means must be found to further and protect the interests of the community and its teachers, assembly delegates pointed out.

During the dying hours of the assembly, delegates defeated an OSSTF move to oppose the government during the next election. The original "defeat Davis" resolution was passed because it was not properly understood, say the delegates.

By rescinding the resolution, delegates chose to remain on the traditional OSSTF path of political nonalignment, and expressed willingness to support sound educational policies wherever they appear.

Of particular interest to local teachers was the resolution that computation of pensions be based on the best five years of service, rather than on the best seven years. The recommendation will go to the government for debate.

Considerable discontent was expressed on the supernumerary commission. Don Scott, OSSTF commissioner, gained unanimous agreement from the assembly for the resolution that teachers gain complete control over their supernumerary fund.

James Cox, Centennial Secondary School teacher, noted that Conservative Eglinis now invested in accordance with the supernumerary act are a source of frustration to the delegates. Strong feelings were expressed, he said, in favor of investing the money in bonds or stocks on the open market. The Ontario plan compares unfavorably with that in British Columbia, which allows a much more aggressive investment plan on the part of the teacher-contributors.

Is Growing

ed as fortunate because of the country's abundance of resources, it was a matter of how such resources could be shared with the "have-nots."

He quoted an article from The Rotarian in which a writer urged members to play a more positive role in international affairs.

Teachers Oppose Strikes

Hastings County's high school teachers, both from the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation's annual assembly in Toronto, have affirmed their distaste for strikes as a means of settling salary disputes.

Glenn Richardson, BCI English department head, says that in the light of the last round of negotiations in Ontario, it is obvious that "innovative and imaginative" methods of reaching agreements must be sought.

For this season, delegates from District 18 comprising Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington Central is supported a resolution calling on teachers' federations to set up a committee to co-operate with other agencies "to investigate and recommend, before next November, some reasonable alternative to strikes."

The incidence of confrontation must be reduced, and means must be found to further and protect the interests of the community and its teachers, assembly delegates pointed out.

During the dying hours of the assembly, delegates defeated an OSSTF move to oppose the government during the next election. The original "defeat Davis" resolution was passed because it was not properly understood, say the delegates.

Abstracts Hang In Library Show

It's a small mixed show of his work that Bill Smith will be exhibiting at the Quinte Public Library for two weeks — two wooden constructions, two realistic and two abstract paintings.

But it serves his purpose. It shows the range of the artist, he says.

"I starting painting landscapes," he said Friday morning an interest, "I enjoy painting abstracts. Now, I'm getting into using big color constructions."

Maybe they're not art in the established sense of the word, he conveniently, maybe these constructions should be considered environments. He began work in wood constructions last fall.

Bill, who moved to Belleville from Montreal two years ago, has spent only four years with the solid mascara of color he prefers. He doesn't consider himself an artist, rather an "amateur", he says.

In accounting for his relatively recent interest in creating in color, the 36-year-old former New Brunswicker said, "Maybe what got me going was my frequent trips into old Montreal."

The small sampling of his work he has chosen to hang in the library's lower lobby March 25-April 8 is intended to acquaint viewers with a variety of current art forms, he said.

Inclusion of his abstract work is intended to make a statement, he says, in a conservative communite such as Belleville, he'd like to see more room for abstract art is not a passing fad

His landscapes and abstract work, juxtaposed in the show, will better point this out, he says. He comments that abstract art belongs more in the big city.

"It just doesn't go over in the small towns," he said. "People know that there's abstract art, but they're afraid to get into it."

"People in small towns seem to like to relate to art but only if it's of something they know of."

He studied old barns, of the Dead Barn School, as an example.

Motorist Injured

REDNERSVILLE — A Prince Edward County motorist was taken to Belleville General Hospital in shock Friday night following a car collision on the Redneresville Road, a half mile east of here last night.

Injured was Leroy Rackham, 40, of RR 1 Carrying Place.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the motorist received facial cuts and shock. He was treated and released.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $1,000.

Man Charged

MARMORA (Special) — An RR 3 Marmora man has been charged with failing to yield following a two-car collision at the intersection of Highways 7 and 14 Friday afternoon.

Charged is 71-year-old John Hilbert.

The second vehicle was driven by Stittsville resident Leo Geroux.

Damage to the two vehicles was estimated by provincial police at more than $1,000. No serios injury was reported.

Mayor Out

Mayor Robin Jeffrey will not hold court hours in her chambers at City Hall Monday night, as previously scheduled. Because of the necessity of her appearance at public hearing, the mayor has cancelled the regularly scheduled meet-her-people session.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance since Friday morning.

Friday, 9:38 a.m. 144 Bridge St. East, smoke from an on sump pump, damage to pump.

9:16 p.m., corner of Anne and Bridge St. East, propane heater trouble, no damage.

Saturday, 1:58 a.m., M. and M. Restaurant on Front St. West, oil burner upset, closed down burner.

2:16 a.m., Belle Cleaners on Coleman St., ballast in light fixture burnt out, no damage.

Teachers Opt For Soft Line

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

Despite all the apparent resentment at the annual assembly of the Ontario Secondary Teachers' Federation this week in Toronto, the moderates are still in control.

By the time the assembly was wrapped up, a neat compromise had been achieved between the militants and the moderates.

This year's assembly, following hard on the heels of the York teachers' strike, was the most explosive in the federation's history. But by the time the smoke had cleared, the militant minority, most of them from Toronto, Peel county and Windsor, had lost ground.

Although most of the 87 OSSTF members who held elected office are NEP, the majority of the federation's 94,000 members are small-c conservatives. The silent majority from outside the metropolitan areas made its voice heard in an 11th hour move to rescind a resolution to defeat the government of Ontario at the next election.

The resolution was defeated and the war chest set up earlier in the assembly will now be used to back any candidate who makes education his "first priority."

The moderates, which include the delegates from District 19 (Hastiis, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington counties), went to the assembly prepared to oppose the confrontation tactics of the activists.

As NDP'r Glenn Richardson put it, the call to defeat the provincial government was "a sure route to disaster for this federation."

Indications that the "hairies" were not yet in control of OSSTF came early in the assembly, when the call to retire from the boondocs united to elect Jim Forster president for the coming year. Forster, once a fiery radical, is now more at home in committee than last year's president, Don Blackstock, who was seekin re-election. The super-militants, the Teacher Action Caucus group from Toronto, fielded their own candidates. Their strength within the federation can be sued by the support their candidate drew in the presidential ballotin — 39 votes out of a possible 231.

OSSTF's external policy committee, the lobbyin arm of the federation, is headed by Bob Leach, principal elect of North Hastiins Hih School in Bancroft.

He advocated fighting issues, not parties, by placing teachers at active members of every candidate's campaign committee and riding association during the next provincial election, in 1975.

Make no mistake about it, the teachers want changes. If not in the government, at least in its policies. The federation appears to want to turn back the clock to the days when Bill Davis was education minister and the sky was the limit on education spending. They want ceilings raised so high they would, in effect, not exist, and they want the right to strike until they are raised.

Privately, the moderates admit ceilings of some kind are necessary if education is not to bankrupt the province. Although they are opposed to compulsory arbitration to settle contract disputes, they seem bewildered by the idea of a strike.

The coming year and the final draft of the proposed bill on collective bargaining rights for teachers should decide whether the moderates will hold their ground or the militants will take over.

Damage to the car has been estimated at about $200.

Leafs Spoil Sabres' Dream

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Buffalo Sabres probably were hoping Toronto Maple Leafs would have a disastrous West Coast trip.

A defeat to Los Angeles Kings on-ice have been nice, along with a surprise victory by California Golden Seals.

The Leafs, however, spoiled this dream with a 3-2 triumph Friday night over the Seals, following a 1-1 tie with the Kings last Tuesday, to strengthen their hold on the fourth and last playoff berth in the East Division of the National Hockey League.

Toronto, with seven games remaining in regular-season play, has 79 points, nine more than Buffalo which has eight games left. The Leafs' miefit fan the Sabres' playoff hopes if they lose Sunday in Vancouver, and if Buffalo takes a pair of weekend games from New York Islanders and New York Rangers.

The Leafs had little trouble with the cellar-dwelling California Seals.

The game, only one in the NHL, wound up the season's series between the clubs with the Leafs winning four and tying one. For the Seals, eighth and last in the West Division with 35 points, it was their fifth straight defeat and 49th in 78 games.

The Seals, however, are a long way from the record for most losses in one season. The Islanders accomplished that feat last season with 59.

Dave Keon' 23rd goal of the year and 367th in 14 seasons of league play snapped a 2-2 second-period tie and gave the Leafs their win. Keon scored at 18:52 after taking a pass from Bob Neely.

The Leafs led 2-1 after the first period on goals by Garry Monahan, his eighth, with Neely and Keon assisting, and Derek Dupere's fifth. Ivan Boldirev scored in the first period for the Seals.

The Seals tied the score when Stan Gilbertson scored his 16th goal of the year at 2:44 of the second.

The Leafs were without right winger Rick Kehoe, sidelined at least three weeks with a broken bone in his shoulder.

Action resumes tonight with the St. Louis at Montreal, the Rangers in Detroit, Buffalo taking on the Islanders in Uniondale, N.Y., Atlanta visiting Boston, Vancouver playing in Los Angeles, Chicago at Philadelphia and Pittsburgh meeting Minnesota in Bloomington.

Sunday St. Louis is at Philadelphia Sunday, Los Angeles at Vancouver and Toronto at Vancouver in afternoon games. Night action has Montreal at Boston, Buffalo visiting the Rangers, the Islanders in Atlanta, Detroit at Pittsburgh and Minnesota at Chicago.

Six Stroke Lead for Miller

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Johnny Miller, just back from a three-week absence from the game he has dominated this year, put together his second straight four-under-par 67 Friday for a six-stroke lead in the $200,000 Sea Pines Heritage golf tournament.

Miller, winner of three titles and more than $106,000 this season, had a 134 total, eight under par on the two over the Harbour Town Golf Links. 6,655 yards of heavily wooded, reclaimed swampland.

And his leading margin over Allen Miller, no relation, and Lanny Wadkins was by two strokes the biggest 36-hole lead of the year.

Bobby Hull — 100 WHA Goals

Aeros Top Jets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull scored his 100th World Hockey Association goal—and his 49th of the season—Friday night, in a losing cause as Houston Aeros, for the two-goal performances of Gord Labossiere, defeated the Jets 4-2 in Winnipeg.

Gordie Howe, plagued by a painful foot injury, played only the first period as the Aeros demonstrated to a sell-out crowd that well-disciplined positional hockey and accurate passing can easily beat a skating strike.

Meanwhile in Los Angeles, a third period scoring outburst powered Minnesota Fighting Saints to a 5-3 win over Los Angeles Sharks. Wayne Connelly scored two goals for Minnesota.

The wins by Houston and Minnesota put first and second place even further out of reach for the other West Division clubs, but the Jets, by failing to win, missed an opportunity to tie Edmonton Oilers for third place.

The East Division teams, idle last night, will, except for Toronto, come to life tonight. Vancouver will play the Nordiques in Quebec, the Oilers are in Cleveland, and New Jersey is at Chicago.

Sunday's action has Winnipeg at Los Aveles, Chicago at Cleveland, Vancouver at Toronto, Minnesota at Houston and New England at Quebec.

Gordie Howe didn't score but Jean Mark picked up his 36th goal of the year and John Schella added another one to the Houston win. Cal Swenson scored the second Jets goal.

In a between-periods ceremony, Andre Ouellet, postmaster general of Canada, paid tribute to Howe and Hull. The two shook hands at centre ice, then Mr. Ouellet presented them each with a leather "keeping fit" Olympic com memorative postage stamps.

Ted Hampson, Gordon Gallant and Murray Heatley were the other Minnesota scorers, while Marc Tardif and Brian McKendrick scored for the Sharks.

Foreman Confident

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — George Foreman says he's a better fighter now than he was the night he smashed Joe Frazier to the canvas six times and won the world heavyweight boxing title.

"I like to think I've progressed some," Foreman said before working out for his title defence against Ken Norton Tuesday night. I feel that I can do everything a fighter should be able to do in the ring."

Norton, who gained a title shot after winning and losing close fights with Muhammad Ali, countered: "I think I've proved myself. I think anybody should take me seriously."

Foreman is taking Norton seriously.

Bobcats Come On in Third To Shoot Down the Blues

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports staff...

The Belleville Bobcats, at last, have broken through the dome of good fortune that was surrounding Brantons Blues goalie, Barrie Oakes.

Friday night, at the Memorial Arena, the Cats defeated the Blues 9-6 to even their Metro Junior B finals at 2-2.

Belleville came from behind twice, once in the second and once in the third to earn the win.

The third period comeback, however, was the one that told the story of the game and the series as the Bobcats scored five times on a mere eight shots.

For some unknown reason, the Cats seemed to be jinxed when it came to capitalizing in the finals on numerous occasions they have had wide open nets when the flip-flop Blues goalie lay sprawled on the ice. But Oakes, with his four leg clowns, always came up with the puck.

Friday, in the third period, Oakes must have pushed his luck as far as it was going to go.

The five goal performance of the Cats was the greatest number they have scored on Brantons in the period in the series and the eight shots that Belleville took in the third was the least number in any single period in the series.

From the "HOORAH" reaction of the players in the dressing room following the victory, the Cats look like they have regained composure and picked up a lot of momentum.

Belleville did some good forechecking in the third to keep the Blues hemmed in their own end. The Cats also controlled most of the second period, also doing some effective forechecking there.

What the locals added to their game in the third period was good backchecking and hustle. They really moved the puck in the final 20 minutes, especially coming out of their own end.

Brantons found themselves frustrated by the Belleville checking and skating and began making mistakes—sloppy passes were taken and poor defensive work, particularly when they tried to clear the puck.

Coach Moe Hunter scrambled his lines completely for the contest and came up with some fairly successful combinations and players.

The most successful was the Clark Coates—Grant Goegan— Mike Watt" combination.

Coates scored three goals, Watt her a goal and three assists and Goegan had one of each.

The line of Rob Foster, Paul King and Jim Richardson picked up three of the Cats goals, two from Foster and one from Richardson, and each added an assist.

John Sergeant, Kevin Joadwa and Wally Delnard made up the third lines and each picked up a point, Joadwa's a goal.

Belleville's defence weren't idle in the 35 point surge. Tim Yohn and Vern Amey, both had a pair of assists and Dave Taylor one.

The Blues took a 2-0 lead, in the first period with goals from Steve Beasley and Dan Walker before Mark Coates got the Cats on the scoreboard at the 14 minute mark.

Two minutes later, Walker scored his second to put Bramalea ahead 3-1.

With less than two minutes played in the middle period, Belleville had tied the score on tallies from Coates and Richardson.

Bramalea went ahead again at the midway mark of the second as Dean Popiel made it 4-3.

The Cats came back a few minutes later when Foster scored his first of the night.

In the final three minutes of the second the Blues jumped into a 6-4 lead on Dan McKeraghan's and Tom McLeod's slapshots.

Then came the five unanswered goals by Belleville in the third.

At the 43 second mark Goegan scored. Three minutes later Joadwa tallied. At 13:15 it was 7-6 Belleville on Coates' game winner. Mike Watt put the game on ice at 16:02 and with four seconds remaining Rob Foster scored on the Blues open net to wrap the scoring up, 9-6 Bobcats.

Bob Moore picked up the win for the local, playing in his first game since the second one in the Pickering series.

Bruce Clark was reported sick and Jeff Merrill was brought up from the Lion's midgets as the back up.

Pete Crawford, was brought up from the juveniles as Barney Holmes did not dress for the game.

In the first period, both teams played for a two minute span at four aside leaving lots of skating room, a situation of rarity as all four minor penalties were assessed at the 7:31 mark.

The Bobcats played a man short for five consecutive minutes in the second period, but Bramalea was only able to score once.

The Blues had the edge in the shooting department, 36-31, and both teams were assessed four penalties.

The fifth game of the series is Sunday night at 8:15 in the Victoria Park Arena in Bramalea.

The Bobcats Booster Club is sponsoring a bus to the game and tickets are available at McKnight's Variety, Front Street for $3 each.

Wide of the Mark On This Try

Close but not quite is the story in this try by Bramalea forward during Friday night's Metro Junior R Hockey League group final game in Memorial Arena. Belleville Bobcats' defenceman Dave Flesch rushes back to come to the aid of goalie Bob Moore. Cats won the game 9-6 to tie the series 2-2. The teams hook up in the fifth game of the best of seven set Sunday in Bramalea.

Belleville Juniors Led By Pat Hunt

Junior bowlers (ages 13-15) made the top showings of representatives from Belleville Bowl-O-Drome taking part in the 11th annual Provincial Youth Bowling Council Championships at London, March 17.

And Pat Hunt showed the way.

Pat finished in second place in the junior girls' singles with a triple of 689, just 24 pins back of the winner, Anita Tasca of Queensway Bowl, Toronto. Anita recorded a 713 triple with a 297 single accounting for the bulk of that total.

Belleville's entry in the junior girls' team event was ninth with a pinfall of 2702. Waterloo led the way with 2854.

In the junior boys' team competition, Belleville Bowl-O-Drome took fourth place with 3134, 13 pins behind third place Chemong Lanes of Peterborough. Cy Kelly Lanes, Aylmer was first with 3240.

Kelly Munkittrick's 609 triple is supporting a bid to the senior boys' singles which was won by Steve McAdam of Miller's Lanes, Welland with 803.

Belleville Teams Bow Out

Trenton, Nepean in 'A' Final

TRENTON — Defending champion Ottawa Nepean Raiders and host Trenton Quints Inc. frolicked to their winning ways in the Golden Hawk Midget Hockey Tournament here Friday. Each team recorded its fourth win without a setback to qualify for the A series final which was scheduled for 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Still in the hunt for B side honors after Friday's action were Ottawa West and Kingston Jackets. Each had taken just one loss in the double knockout event.

Trenton made it to the final by turning back a budding Picton squad 3-1 while Nepean squashed Oshawa Kiwanis 8-3.

Joe Vajda, Dean Rice and Bill Fox scored the Trenton goals as the latter handed Picton its first defeat.

Ottawa West Golden Knights will be together when Friday wins while advancing to the B title match. Knights edged Brampton 2-1 and North Bay 3-2 before knocking Picton out, 3-0.

The Kingston squad failed to face Ottawa for B honors by putting two Belleville entries, the Yardmen Minors and Lions Midgets on the sidelines before outing Oshawa 4-0.

Kingston topped the Yardmen 3-1 and then defeated Lions 4-3 in a match neither team scored injest on winning.

Richard Ottashen's goal with less than two minutes remaining in regulation time snapped a 3-3 tie and put Lions out of the running.

Howard Keele, David Latour and David Darlington had the other Kingston goals. Rick Barbeau accounted for two Belleville counters with Ron Lawrenson pulling the other.

In other Friday games, Lions nipped Oromocto, New Brunswick 3-2 and North Bay shaded Campbellford 3-2.

Celebrate the return of Spring.
With a new limited edition VW Sun Bug, sporting a dazzling metallic gold finish as bright as its namesake.
It has a sun roof to let in (what else?) sunshine, and the scent of a greening world.
There's a touch of the wild in its mocha brown upholstery. And a touch of the wind in its jaunty racing wheels.
For the touch of your hands, there's a covered steering wheel, special sunburst shift knob and a rosewood-grained dash.
The Sun Bug is as carefree as a Spring morning. (Which it can afford to be since it's covered by VW Owner's Security Blanket.) It gets about 30 miles to a gallon*. And last but not least, when you buy one of these extra-special golden cars, it'll cost you literally hundreds of dollars less than if you tried to make it extra-special yourself.

Gibson a Question Mark

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Will the real Bob Gibson please stand up?

It is the Gibson who breezed through the first nine New York Mets batters in order Friday? Or is it the Gibson who was tagged for eight runs on seven hits, including three-run homers by Dave Schneck and Kenny Ayala and a couple of bunt singles, by Phil Mikan—in the next three innings as the Mets crushed St. Louis Cardinals 10-8 in an exhibition baseball game?

The jury still is out on the Cards' big-time pitching ace for several reasons. One is his age. At last November, Another is the right knee he injured last Aug. 4 which required surgery to remove damaged cartilage.

The hard-throwing right-hander has pitched 16 innings this spring, allowing 15 runs on 17 hits.

In other games, Los Angeles Dodgers downed New York Yankees 14-4, San Diego Padres topped Chicago Cubs 9-6, San Francisco Giants beat Oakland As 5-1, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Cleveland Indians 6-1, Kansas City Royals edged Chicago White Sox 4-2, Pittsburgh Pirates blanked the Royals' B squad 5-0, and Atlanta Braves beat Texas Rangers 4-2.

The Dodgers collected 16 hits and 10 runs off Yankee right-hander Mel Stottlemyre in three innings.

Clarence Gaston hit a three-run homer and Reggie Smith singled home two runs as the Padres broke a six-game losing streak while their wins over the Cubs.

Ed Goodson hit a two-run triple, leading the Giants' 5th Rookie drive in three runs for Oakland.

George Scott's two-run double in the first inning and Bob Uecker's three-run homer in the fifth gave the Brewers a 5-0 lead. Marty Pattin hurled six scoreless innings Monday the Royals beat the White Sox 4-2.

Pittsburgh's Dave Parker cracked his third home run of two days, a two-run shot, as the Pirates beat the Royals' B squad behind the eight-hit pitching of Jerry Reuss and Ken Reitz.

Matt Alexander played in seven games for Atlanta and went hitless in four at-bats. But the Braves edged the Rangers 4-3 on Frank Tepedino's sacrifice fly in the ninth.

Three Florida games—Montreal-Cincinnati, Toronto-Boston and Detroit-Philadelphia—were rained out.

Switzerland's Attinger Gets Friendly Advice

BERN, Switzerland (CP) — the Swedes third because Sweden won the game between the two rinks. As a result, Sweden, skipped by Jari Ulsbee, plays for Canada, skipped by Hec Gervais of St. Albert, Alta.

In the first meeting between Switzerland and the U.S., the home town club won 8-4 with a last-rock takeout and stay by Attinger, 37.

"... I would hope to turn the table today," said Senerchia.

For Attinger to win the world championship he probably will don't pack the world championship trophy away," Somerville told him.

Somerville of Superior, Wisc., champion in 1965, said that going through the first nine games without a loss isn't important.

"There's only one important win in this tournament and that's the last one. Remember last year Harvey Mantha of Canada was 10 and 0. Then he lost the last game and Sweden won the world curling championship."

In the championship, the 18 leading teams from other zones and then the top four teams go into a playoff, the first-place finisher meeting the fourth-place finisher and the second and third teams meeting. The winners advance to a sudden-death final.

In the week-long round-robin, Switzerland was the only undefeated team, finishing with a 9-0 won-lost record, Canada was 7-2, the U.S. and Sweden 6-3, Germany, Denmark and France 4-5, Norway and Scotland 3-7 and Italy 1-8.

The U.S. finished fourth and sided by a steal of three on the first end when Gervais wrecked on a guard while trying to draw one.

Gervais said he is not concerned about who he meets in the final.

"I just want to make sure I get there. If we do get past Sweden then I'll begin to think about the final."

In the ninth round, Canada defeated Switzerland 6-5, Germany 7-1 to eight ends, Switzerland topped Finland Pedersen of Denmark 13-5, Sweden downed four of Norway 6-4, the U.S. whipped Jim Waddell of Scotland 8-3 in eight ends, and Pierre Ducloz of France defeated Renato Ghezze of Italy 13-3.

BLOCKING SHOTS — A WAY TO HELP YOUR GOALIE

No doubt, everyone is familiar with this scene: A puck carrier winds up for a shot, the defenceman fills his lane and the player skates around him and scores a goal.

The defenceman guessed the opponent was going to shoot. Wisely, the puck carrier took a better alternative.

Basically, the first key step in blocking shots is to make sure the shot is coming. We try to teach kids that the best way of blocking shots is to fall on one knee and stretch your stick out in front.

Keep your eyes on the puck because if the man decides to shoot, you might be able to knock the puck away with your stick.

Again, it's very important to play this situation with extreme caution. Try to allow yourself a chance to have a second shot on the puck carrier.

When you're on one knee and the carrier decides to deke, you can get back on your feet much quicker. On a situation where you're sure the man is going to shoot, you might decide to go down on both knees. In this case, keep your arms close to your body so that the attacker faces the largest possible blocking area.

Whether it's blocking on one or two knees, work closely with your goalie because while you're trying to help him, you might also be screening him.

Because of the many consequences, it's difficult to master blocking shots. Yet if you do it properly it will not only help you be a better defenceman but it will also help your goalie. Work on blocking on one and two knees in practices then getting back on your feet. And remember, make sure you've got control of the stick in case you have to sweep a puke check.

THE UNEXPLAINED

by Allen Spraggett

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

Can you make a ghost?

Yes, it sounds nutty. But a group of sane, normal people in Toronto, under the supervision of a distinguished scientist, set out to try to do just that — make a ghost.

They've gotten some remarkable results.

It started in September 1972 when several members of the Toronto Society for Psychical Research were discussing whether a ghost or apparition is something conjured up by the mind of the beholder. If that's so, they speculated, why couldn't a ghost be deliberately conjured up?

There and then, eight persons agreed to meet once a week to spend an hour, possibly more, conjuring up a wholly imaginary ghost they named "Philip."

Before they were through, this mythical phantom was communicating with them in a variety of eerie ways.

If you're going to invent a ghost you might as well make him colorful and Philip was invested by his creators with a romantic aura. They made him an aristocratic Englishman who lived in the mid-1600s, had a beautiful but frigid wife whom he detested, and carried on a mad love affair with a raven-haired gypsy named Margo. When Margo was burned as a witch, Philip, heart-broken, buried himself from the parapet of his castle.

The experiment in ghost-making was monitored by Dr. George Owen, formerly professor of genetics at Cambridge University, now of Toronto, a noted investigator of psychic phenomena. His wife, Iris was a member of the group.

At first the ghost-makers tried to conjure up Philip by meditating, but nothing much happened. They switched to holding old-fashioned seances with everybody sitting around a table, singing loudly to "raise the power," and exhorting their made-up ghost to do something, anything, c'mon Philip, please.

He did!

It started with some funny raps from the table. These were too faint to be heard but were felt as slight pulsations. Soon they grew loud enough to be audible not only to the group but to others, such as Dr. Owen and a psychiatrist who attended some of the sessions. Both these witnesses said they had no doubt that the raps were genuinely "psychic."

Philip answered questions by rapping once for yes and twice for no. Sometimes, for variety, he caused raps to come from the wall or ceiling of the seance room.

Soon it was a custom for everybody at a seance to say goodnight to Philip and get an individual response — a rap that seemed to come from the table precisely under the person's extended hand. (The group used an ordinary plastic-topped, metal-legged card table.) I myself had this peculiar experience at a Philip seance.

The raps were just for starters. Before long the table came alive under Philip's influence and performed dramatic antics.

With some of the group always maintaining at least light finger contact with it, the table pushed in rhythm to music, backed like a broncо, balanced on one leg, flipped completely over so that all four legs pointed straight up, and sometimes whooshed around so fast that the group found themselves scrambling to keep up.

Philip, for so young a ghost, proved to be not in the least bashful. He performed willingly for members of a television filming crew. (The film of Philip's feats is available.)

Comes the Schrodt question: Has the mythical ghost succeeded in retiring all four legs of the table off the floor at the same time?

The answer from one of the group, Iris Owen, is a very tentative yes.

Tentative because, though on one occasion the table was airborne she says it was to a height of only a fraction of an inch. The group wants to get the table floating unequivocally in mid-air. And they appear to be confident they can do it. Or at least, that they can.

"You have to believe implicitly that it's going to happen," explained Mrs. Owen, "before it does happen."

Dr. George Owen, an authority on ghosts, considers that the experiment's results have remarkable implications." They show, he says, that "psychokinesis (or committee" is possible (psychokinesis is the technicia term for mind over matter).

If new group can make a ghost, Dr. Owen said, others can. None of the original group, he notes, claimed to have any special psychic gifts.

One of the ghost-makers, in the journal New Horizons, summed up their unique ongoing experiment: "We've shown that in some manner we don't understand a group of people can create thought-directed force which can be expressed in a physical way."

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, March 24th

Aries (March 21-April 19) Personality conflict sounds today for a situation that provokes a problem between you and a friend. Be the one who apologizes.

(Taurus (April 20 - May 20) Today you can play an important role in helping another get something that's needed. Don't hesitate to go to bat for a pal.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Have faith in your new ideas, or else you'll have no reason for others to believe in what you offer. If you act positively, they'll follow.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Keep your goals to yourself but make them such that they'll later bring credit to you. Others will appreciate why you acted as you did.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Make your out look one of selflessness. Be sure your plans protect those involved with you, as well as yourself.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you can expect benefits from someone you went out on a limb for. An old debt owed you will be repaid.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is not the time to be reluctant about asking advice from one you feel is more experienced. Be talk will be effective.

Scarpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You may have to work a little harder than planned in order to help someone toward whom you feel protective. It will be worth the effort.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your sex appeal is glowing today. Don't be surprised if one who has never noticed you before is very complimentary.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Take a more active role in doing for one in your charge something they've asked of you to tempt on their own.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Yesterday you said all the wrong things. Today you're just the opposite. Get in touch with one you may have unintentionally offended.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) Continue to manage your responsibilities with the competent banker would handle them. Concentrate on facts, not fiction.

To Your Good Health

Cold Develops In 12-48 Hours

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: How long after exposure does it take to get a cold, and after getting her, what point is there no longer danger of giving it to someone else?

My husband started a cold 2½ weeks ago and is seemingly over it, but now I am starting one. I realize I may have gotten it from someone.

What do you recommend for treatment? I am 71.—Mrs. E.W.H.

In most cases a cold develops from 12 to 48 hours after exposure, and as long as the patient sneezes, coughs or has nasal drainage, it is possible to pass it along to someone else.

In your case you probably picked up your cold from some one else who was infected.

Recent studies indicate that the hands are a major source of transmitting cold germs, so if you have a cold, wash your hands often if you are around a person with a cold, do likewise. It isn't a guarantee, of course, but every little precaution helps.

If you have a cold, the bare fact is that you just have to wait to get over it, either in a week or thereabouts. But you can do a few things to make yourself more comfortable.

If you have a fever, go to bed. Fever and aspirin or similar medication will lessen the misery.

And here's a simple trick that, it seems, not very many people know about. Hot compresses on the face—a folded washcloth soaked in water as hot as you can tolerate—held against the face (across the nose and sinuses) affords quite a bit of comfort. Try it. Among other things, it will provide some steamy moisture which soothes the inflamed areas in the nose.

There's still plenty of dispute about vitamin C, but studies at the University of Toronto support the fact that it helps. Anyway, it can't hurt you when you have a cold, and if you take it in the form of orange or tomato juice, the added liquids do their part.

Do not start penicillin or antibiotics at the onset of a cold, because these drugs do not affect viruses, and colds are caused by viruses, not bacteria. If fever persists, or a thick nasal discharge occurs, which indicates the presence of bacteria in addition to the viruses (a "secondary infection"), then what is the time to see your doctor about antibiotics.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I used to weigh 220 pounds but reduced it to 180 pounds. Of course at my top weight I had several chins. I have now been left with surplus skin hanging below my chin. What could be done to correct this short of plastic surgery? If plastic surgery is the only answer, what do you think of it and is it costly?—J.M.R.

Plastic surgery is the only solution. Massage, creams and such efforts cannot help because the skin has been stretched too much.

However, plastic surgery by competent surgeons produces excellent results. Cost varies, but discuss that with your doctor.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I have a glaucoma and take drops four times a day. I have been told that drinking tea and coffee is bad for my eyes as it causes eye pressure to build up. Does this really do us any good? I leave coffee alone altogether? I love it at meals.—Mrs. D.M.

Both tea and coffee contain caffeine which is a stimulant, and this can raise eye pressure, especially if you happen to be sensitive to caffeine. However, there is no harm in a cup of either coffee or tea with your meals if you limit it to no more than one cup a day. More than that can cause adverse eye pressure. There are also decaffeinated coffee preparations.

Dear Dr. Thompson: Last night I heard about a doctor in Mexico who has helped arthritis patients and was wondering if you would tell me something about it. It is some kind of medicine that cannot be purchased in the United States. Can't imagine if his treatment is so wonderful why it isn't used by the medical profession in this country. The doctor's name is Mrs. C.H.

There are not, to the best of my knowledge, any such medications being used in Mexico that are not known here; but what is also known here is that the medications (powerful hormones) largely break such dramatic results only by suppressing them in such quantities that, in a given length of time, they begin to have intolerable side effects.

The advantage of the Mexican "wonder workers" is that the patients feel better and go home and tell everybody about what a wonderful treatment it is.

But when the consequences develop, it's the doctor back home he is saddled with taking over treatment. By that time the patient is in no condition to go back to Mexico—and wouldn't be welcomed at that stage of the game anyway.

Dear Dr. Thomson: What causes a person to become black and blue when bruised or hurt, when a vein is pierced with a needle for medication? Is there something lacking in the system, such as iron? I have been taking an iron supplement but with no avail.—M.H.

In the case of piercing with a needle, the answer is that some bleeding has occurred where the vein was pierced. It may mean that the tourniquet was not removed soon enough, or there was weak spot in the vein at that point.

But delayed clotting also can be a consequence of excessive use of aspirin, or of so-called blood thinners, or deficiency of platelets in the blood (platelets being a type of particle in the blood that is necessary for clotting).

These last three possibilities can apply to excessive general bruising, but will not help much a situation—but you may need a study of your blood to see if that is where the trouble lies.

Sister Mary Ann, Brother-in-law Harold and family.

Opening lead—♥3

By Oswald and James Jacoby

There is an old saying, "Marry in haste, repent at leisure." We don't go along with that at all. The older Jacobys, who married one week after meeting haven't started repenting yet.

However, we can assure bridge players who play bridge that they are likely to spend a lot of valuable time repenting.

We don't know what the record for the play of two aces is, but South must have come close to it in his play of dummy's ace of hearts at trick one and ace of spades at trick two.

The hand looked like a piranha, but West was unlucky enough to show out on that first spade lead and play proved to a sickening half. When play commenced again it was at a snail's pace, but the boat had sailed and South, wound up one trick short.

If South had just stopped to think before leading to trick two he would have noted the possibility of a bad trump break. Suits do break 5-0 almost four per cent of the time.

Then he would have seen a way to guard against it. All he had to do would be to ruff a heart at trick two. Then he would lead a trump to dummy's ace and find out about the bad break.

This wouldn't bother him at all. He would simply ruff dummy's last heart for his fourth trick and still have enough winners in his hand to give him game and rubber.

Arena Fund $14,000

PICTON — The Wellington arena Building Fund has received generous support from local industry.

Wellington reeve Robert Boyce says that more than 300 letters were sent to industries requesting financial assistance for arena reconstruction. Already $2,000 has been received, bringing the building fund total to more than $14,000. One industry alone donated $1000.

Photos Depict Way of Life

Neil Newton's show of some 15 photographs depicting small town life in the Bowmanville area continues at the Corby Public Library through to Saturday this week.

The exhibition, which opened Friday, March 15, records life in the four villages of Hampton, Hayden, Tyrone and Enniskillen. A Toronto expatriate, Newton now an Enniskillen resident, has been working for seven years to capture on film country life before it is gobbled up by the spread of housing subdivisions and superhighways.

Newton's concern has been rewarded by previous exhibitions of his work. The current show is on loan from the Photography Gallery of Bowmanville.

Previously, 25 of his prints were included in a National Film Board exhibition entitled A Way of Life. A touring exhibition of his work was sponsored by the Art Gallery of Ontario.

Love -- Grand or Boring?

The first day of spring was last Thursday, according to the calendar, but the weather man was not recognising the season. But Steve Morris, 19, and Astra Rise Vitols, 17, didn't seem to mind as they sat on a bench rather comfortably in Toronto's High Park accompanied by a Siberian Husky who was monumentally bored by the whole thing but kept the bench private. Records Are Set

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Freakish spring weather brought record seasonal low temperatures in many parts of Ontario overnight after blowing snowstorms caused scores of minor accidents in sudden whiteouts on some provincial highways Sunday.

One whiteout lasting 45 minutes resulted in a series of minor accidents involving about 100 vehicles as visibility dropped to zero on a two-mile stretch of Highway 400 near the southern boundary of Metropolitan Toronto. There were no serious injuries.

Brezhnev Hopes For Pact on Arms

MOSCOW (AP) — United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger today opened talks with Leonid Brezhnev, and the Communist party chief said he is optimistic about prospects for another Soviet-U.S. agreement to limit nuclear arms.

Kissinger hopes during his three days of talks in the Kremlin is on the stage of a new nuclear weapons treaty President Nixon could sign on a visit to Moscow next summer.

Asked by reporters whether he expect to reach another arms agreement with Nixon then, Brezhnev replied: "I take an optimistic view of that. We have made a very good beginning on that process."

He said relations between the two superpowers "are good" but "there is much work to do at this time."

Asked to characterize the situation with regard to East-West detente, he said the European security conference in Geneva is "dragging its feet a little" because "the opponents of detente are introducing petty matters that have no bearing on detente."

Although he was speaking of the Geneva conference, it was assumed that he was referring to the Soviet government's problems with the U.S. Congress over trade and Jewish emigration as well as to the Western demand at the security conference for freer flow of peoples and ideas.

The principal question the U.S. state secretary and the Soviet Communist party chief faced was how to work out a deal limiting developments of missiles carrying multiple warheads (MIRV).

The groundwork was laid in early February when Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko visited Washington, and in talks with the Soviet Ambassador to the United States, Anatoly Dobrynin, who accompanied Kissinger from Washington and worked with him aboard the secretary's air force jet.

Dobrynin at one point in the flight assured reporters he had high hopes for a breakthrough. Senior U.S.officials were more guarded, but they encouraged speculation that Kissinger's trip would be a success.

Kissinger hopes to get the Russians to influence the Syrian government to accept a disengagement agreement with Israel providing for an initial Israeli withdrawal considerably short of Syria's long-range goal—return of all of the Golan Heights territory Israel occupied during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

James Bay Riots Studied

American Unions Blamed by Pepin

Montreal (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa prepared for a top-level meeting today while controversy continued to swirl about the rampage last week which had incapacitated the largest work site in the $1-billion James Bay hydro development project.

Mr. Bourassa said Sunday he was to meet officials of the James Bay Energy Corp., Quebec Provincial Police, justice department and labor minister Jean Cournoyer in his Montreal office.

Mr. Cournoyer said the estimated $1-million outbreak of worker violence was to be condemned but was partially understandable. He cited difficult working conditions in the area, 650 miles northwest of Montreal, far removed from conventional facilities and in the grip of a harsh climate.

Meanwhile, union president Marcel Pepin said the destruction flowed from a "policy" of terrorism aimed at eliminating the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU) from construction sites."

He denied that feuding between the CNTU and Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL), the two unions representing workers at the LG-2 site on La Grande River, was responsible.

The damage was the work of "a handful of individuals in the pay of American unions affiliated to the QFL," he said, reading a prepared statement at a news conference.

The spark that set off the trouble last week has not been determined, but several accounts suggest the demeaning action flared when QFL members refused to work alongside two CNTU members who were newly hired by their construction firm.

Louis Laberge, QFL president, has said the destruction stemmed from poor working and living conditions.

Workers at LG-2 staged a walkout Wednesday during which they occupied administration buildings and seized control of radio-telephone communications. Generators were knocked out with a bulldozer Thursday when fuel tanks were punctured and several hundred gallons of fuel were used to set fire to bunkhouses.

Laurent Hamel, director at the site, has said the damage could be repaired in a month but work may be delayed a year because it must be completed before the spring breakup while the river level is low.

Quebec Provincial Police are reported to be studying photographs of QFL members setting fires, a construction company spokesman said. One man has been arrested in connection with the incident.

Ontario Housing Talks Open

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has set aside $4 million for the next fiscal year to start off the province's new community-sponsored housing program, Housing Minister Stanley Haidasz said today.

He made the statement at the opening of a federal-provincial conference on non-profit, community-sponsored housing programs and said Ontario's program may help level off inflationary housing and rent costs.

Mr. Handleman said the Ontario program designed to assist in the development and management of housing projects by community groups, will offer assistance in four ways:

—It will provide grants of up to 16 per cent of the value of a housing project, to be paid over 15 years, to reduce mortgage payments. In return, the community groups will provide up to 25 per cent of the units for tenants in Ontario's rent-supplement program;

—As a partial or whole investor in the grants, the government is prepared to lease provincial lands, where available, to community groups which cannot find sites at reasonable costs;

—The government will contribute to the rent payments of those in the lower-and moderate-income groups;

—The government will help in the development and management of the housing projects.

Fired Man Relates His Story

MONTREAL (CP) — Louis Dion, a 21-year-old construction worker, says he and a friend were unceremoniously have been the spark that touched off the rampage at a James Bay hydro dam site Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. Dion had been working on the project for about a year, largely as road-construction gangs.

On Friday, March 15, he said, he and his friend were hired by one of the contractors at the site, Spino Construction Co., to do concrete work.

They were installed the next day on the grounds that "we didn't have enough experience."

Monday, they managed to get a job on a road crew of the L.G. mobe Construction Co., but immediately ran into trouble when the other 20 men, all QFL members, "refused to work with us."

The incident grew when the QFL brought in other, unrelated workers, Mr. Dion added, and then staged a wildcat walkout that spread through the camp.

Mark Phillips and Princess Anne

Princess Visits Three Men Hurt While Protecting Her

LONDON (CP) — Princess Anne flew to Germany today to visit a British Army regiment after paying special visits to thank three men shot while attempting to save her from a kidnap attempt outside Buckingham Palace.

Her chauffeur, who also was wounded, was discharged from the hospital Sunday.

The 23-year-old princess also visited the Queen and Prince Philip at Windsor Castle to give them a first-hand account of the kidnap attempt Wednesday.

She spent 10 minutes at Westminster Hospital chatting with her former bodyguard, Inspector James Beaton, 34, wounded three times in the shooting.

"She just said 'Thank you very much indeed,' and we talked about the incident," Beaton said. Englishman Ian Ball had been charged with attempted murder in the attack.

Then Anne went to nearby St. George's Hospital to see journalist Brian McConnell, who was passing in a taxi at the time of the attack, and Constable Michael Hills, who was shot as he ran to her aid.

Hospital authorities reported all three men were in satisfactory condition.

An intense security operation was in effect at London's Heathrow Airport for the princess's departure for West Germany.

Amin to Punish Rebel Soldiers

KAMPALA (AP) — President Idi Amin, Uganda's military strongman, says he will deal severely with soldiers who tried to overthrow him during the weekend.

The aborted coup, which the government radio said was led by the army chief of staff, was broken by loyal forces in bloody fighting Saturday night and early Sunday at several military camps in the Kampala area.

The death toll was not immediately known, but the government said a number of soldiers and civilians were killed.

Residents said Kampala was calm today. Shops were open and troops were off the streets as the city returned to normal.

Radio Uganda said the uprising was led by Brig.-Gen. Charles Arube, and that he killed himself when his attempt failed at dawn Sunday. The radio said Arube ordered a false report that an invading force was trying to kill Amin, and this led to the fighting.

The broadcast said Arube had loyal troops a special commando unit investigate the report and those implicated will be dealt with severely.

Reports said the Malondyo military police headquarters and prison, about four miles from central Kampala, were destroyed in heavy fighting in which tanks took part. Troops from the loyal Mulire Battalion were sent there.

Some sources speculated that the Mulire Battalion had put down an uprising by the military police, but this could not be confirmed.

Malondyo prison was the last home for large numbers of military figures and civilian leaders put to death after Amin's military coup Jan. 25, 1971. Some estimates say 10,000 persons have been tortured or killed in tribal massacres within the military.

The weekend outbreak was the first serious internal challenge to Amin's rule since he ousted President Milton Obote. Amin repelled an invasion by supporters of Obote from neighboring Tanzania in September, 1972.

Uganda has gone rapidly downhill under Amin. He expelled 9,00 Asians with British citizenship in 1972 and gave their businesses over to those skyrocketed and basic commodities such as matches and bananas by inexperienced Africans. Prices short supply. Uganda has changed from a major exporter to a sugar importer.

Golden Jubilee for Airforce

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff reporter

TRENTON — Some 60 years ago, when the thunder of World War I filled much of Europe, the thought of a Canadian air corps was less than welcoming.

Sam Hughes, then defence minister, had the idea of a Canadian air contingent.

In a whirlwind move he set up a provisional air command, promoted the unit's captain and gave him $5,000 to purchase the first of the country's air fleet.

The money crossed the border to the United States and the single aircraft was dismantled and shipped to Belleville's Sallsbury Plain.

The plans never left the ground but settled into the muddy field until it was finally demolished for scrap.

Yet, from this faltering start, the Canadian Air Force would include Royal in its title by 1924 and eventually gain world prominence.

This coming weekend, CFB Trenton, one of Canada's oldest air stations, will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Events begin Friday evening with a dance in Number Nine hangar with all past and present armed forces personnel and members of the civilian community invited.

Trenton's Sing Out group will entertain during the evening designed as a chance to talk about the air force's new old acquaintances and start new ones.

A parade will be held on the south side parade square immediately in front of the administration buildings beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday.

After a church start, by its second world war peak, the RCAF numbered 250,000 men and women operating 48 squadrons at home and abroad.

With major war efforts ended and reduced demand for training air crews — a major Trenton role — peacetime applications were sought for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Canadian military contingents retain their wartime status but the airforce, possibly more than the army or navy, has taken on a real world-wide peace and aid role.

Canadian planes are in the vanguard of the United Nations buys, peace keeping spots.

Trapped Man 'Cut' from Car on 401

BRIGHTON — Trenton township volunteer firemen for an hour struggled to free a motorist trapped in his car on Highway 401 near here today.

William Bradshaw, 26, of Toronto was westbound on the highway when his car veered across the median and crashed head on into a transport truck, police said.

Fire, emergency vehicles were called to the accident scene — one and a half miles west of the Wooller Road — at 7.15 a.m. It took them more than an hour to free police, to remove the roof and the steering column and shred metal away from the driver.

Almost immediately after his arrival at Trenton Memorial Hospital, Bradshaw was placed back on an ambulance and taken to Kingston General Hospital.

A spokesman for the hospital termed the injuries "very serious". Bradshaw suffered head, facial and right side injuries.

His car was completely demolished say police and fairly heavy damage was done to the front end of the transport. The transport driver was unhurt.

Trenton Man Dies in Crash At Newcastle

TRENTON — An RR 1 Carrying Place man was killed in a single-car highway accident near Newcastle Saturday.

He was 23-year-old Guy Christopher Wade.

He is survived by his wife, the former Joanne Hyatt, and by his daughter, Alice Ann.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wells and is also survived by his sister Laura who lives at home with her parents.

Funeral service will be held at Trenton Funeral Home, here Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.

Rev. Michael Caswell will officiate the service with burial in St. George's cemetery.

The Art Teacher

H.W. Curtis has been passing along his knowledge of art to Quinte-area adult students for some time.

Last weekend, public had an opportunity to view the results of his instruction at art show in Keats public school at Ameliasburgh.

People's Art on Show

Adult Students

AMELIASBURGH — Keats Public School in Ameliasburgh housed its second annual art exhibition Sunday.

Members of H. W. Curtis's adult night art classes presented 140 oil paintings for public view.

Adult night classes, under local boards of education are taught in Trenton, Frankford and at Keats in Ameliasburgh, by Mr. Curtis.

The paintings on display were a variety of scenics and still life. Along with the oil paintings a number of handmade crafts were on show in the exhibit room.

Mr. Curtis is a resident of Bayside. He began studying oil painting at Trenton High School and has been active in its practice for 30 years.

He, Curtis still considers painting a part-time even though he is kept quite busy by it. "I find it gives me a lot of happiness in being able to give a little of myself to other people," he says.

The adult art classes consist of teenagers, young marrieds and elderly people. Even though there is a great age difference among some of them they find the evenings working together enjoyable.

Mr. Curtis feels that oil painting should be taught in Senior Citizen Homes as it is an activity that they would also give the aged an opportunity to create and become actively productive.

The art classes plan another exhibit next year but are not sure of the location. Students feel it should be as successful as this year's show since more people are becoming active in oil painting.

Deputy Leader Here Tuesday

The deputy leader of the Ontario Liberal Party, Donald Deacon will be guest speaker at the annual meeting of Quinte Riding Liberal Men's Club at 8 p.m. at Sidney Township Hall.

The meeting was called by the president, Jack Bush, and the agenda calls for election of officers and ratification of the constitution.

He Collects Anything

By DEBRA S. HOOK
Staff Correspondent

Every community has its museum or historical site, But few have someone like Willis Metcalfe, a man with a museum in his own home.

Willis Metcalfe was born in Athol and has spent the majority of his life in Prince Edward County. Now living in Black Creek, he owns a tourist resort.

In his spare time, he is active in the South Marysburgh Marine Society, the Prince Edward Historical Society, and researching and collecting information on the county.

Some people collect coins, others stamps. Many collect antiques. Willis is a collector's collector — he collects everything.

He began his own personal collection in 1925 and has not stopped adding since. He was living in Michigan when he collected his first relic, a World War I German trench helmet. He then began collecting arrowheads. Today he has a collection that can only be described as a cross-section of all types of early Canadiana and historical artifacts.

Describing his hobby, Willis says: "There are a lot of train buffs, coin collectors, and others, but I can't think of one who has the same interest in collecting that I do." published his first book about local mariners. In 1968, he published a second book, Canvas and Steam on Quinte.

Willis has accumulated his collection of well over 1,000 pieces by personal searching, donations from friends and picking up relics on trips. He has never gone to an auction sale to purchase anything for his collection.

He has relics from all types of ships. He also is a collector of information and pictures of county mariners and their vessels.

In 1965, Willis wrote and published a booklet entitled Watchmen of the Western Gap. Since then he has obtained information on more than 100 other shipwrecks and marine legends.

Many people are encouraging him to write a third book. However, publishing costs have risen immensely and he is hesitant about another endeavour such as this.

Willis Metcalfe has only one other hobby, collecting pictures of county and marine events.

He has not sold any of his collection and does not intend to, as many of his pieces were personal gifts. He has never thought of touring his collection in exhibition.

His main concern is to contribute to preserving part of the history of Prince Edward County.

Spring Was Last Week

TWEED (Special) — Spring has bypassed the Quinte area, with temperatures plummeting to 10 below zero Sunday night in Ibe Tweed district. Low in Belleville was six above.

Spring officially began last Wednesday.

Ministry of Natural Resources here today reported lakes north of Highway 7 will still carry a snowpack, but those south of the highway will support pedestrians only.

Snowmobiling is fair to poor because the trails are bare in spots and rough. Cross-country skiing is good.

Snow on the ground in Tweed is 8.6 inches, in Plevna and Ban Echo 14.6 inches.

Con artists prey on the senior citizen

Each year, senior citizens lose thousands of dollars to con artists and unethical merchants selling everything from hearing aids and glasses to home repairs and magazines.

These con artists and unethical merchants regard the senior citizen as a favorite target.

Although there are many laws designed to protect you, your best protection is your own awareness of them. Several knowledge of the gyps and the gimmicks used by these fly-by-night salesmen. As a senior citizen, you must also be aware of the many buying check-lists available which will help you spend your savings wisely and help you avoid the many common pitfalls.

Hold on to your savings

Phoney Bank Inspector

Be constantly on guard against men posing as bank inspectors. Their usual ploy is to telephone you and ask your help in apprehending a bank thief. They will ask you to take money out of your account, and hand it over to one of these so-called "inspectors". Remember, no bank will ever call you and ask that you take money out of your account to help catch a supposed thief.

When this happens, call the police and the bank immediately. Do not withdraw money from your account.

Work-at-home Employment Schemes

Be wary of companies that may advertise home employment schemes in which you must buy a knitting machine or some other equipment with the promise that the company will purchase the finished articles if they meet certain standards. One such scheme involves home weaving looms. You are told you can make hundreds of dollars a month in your spare time by purchasing a machine. Your products, no matter how good, may never meet the company standards. Of course, all the company was interested in was selling the loom in the first place.

Hearing Aids and Glasses

If you have a hearing or sight problem, always consult with your family doctor. He will refer you to a specialist to determine whether a hearing aid or glasses will help with your particular problem.

Buy only from reputable dealers who will guarantee their work and provide proper fittings.

Money Saving Tips

- Always ask for identification when dealing with a door-to-door salesman. He should have a company card. If in doubt, ask him to return, then check with the Consumer Protection Bureau. An honest salesman won't mind this precaution.
- Know the implications. A contract is a legal document.
- Never sign a blank contract or sheet of paper. Always read and understand the small print. If in doubt check with the Bureau or your lawyer.
- Be familiar with brand name goods and costs so you can compare merchandise.
- Always deal with known, respected and established companies.
- Always demand a written receipt for goods purchased.
- Make sure you understand and know exactly the total cost of your purchase. Add up those monthly charges. Remember, the law protects but it doesn't guarantee the quality of merchandise, its price or the integrity of the salesman.
- Compare price quotations with those of other firms.
- Learn to say NO if you're not interested in buying a product or service from a salesman.
- Never sign a document just to get rid of a salesman.
- Never pay cash to a door-to-door salesman. Make your cheque or money order payable to the firm.
- Before signing any contract, make sure the name and address of the firm is included.
- Be wary of "life-time" guarantees. Always understand exactly what the guarantee means.

Questions to ask when buying

1. Do I really need and want this article? Do I need it now?
2. Is it within my budget? Is the price what I thought I would pay, or is it suspiciously low?
3. Does the product appear to be good value for my money?
4. Is this a standard item or do I have a choice? Have I made the best choice for my needs?
5. Is the the product well-made?
6. Is it the right size for my needs?
7. Can I get good service and replacement parts when necessary?
8. Can the article be used right away? (Are there any additional purchases that must be made?)
9. Can I avoid spending money on a new article by repairing an old article that will do the same job?

Just How Fortunate?

Canadians are constantly being told from public platforms how "fortunate" they are.

It is true that this country is stable, wealthy, and materially abundant. But do we have to be so smug and superior about it?

Even our smugness and superiority do not sit too well. If they did, how do we explain such props as auto stickers and Maple Leaf flags proclaiming "I am a proud Canadian?"

Are we really so insecure that we need these things, even allowing that as vehicles of nationalistic expression they are better than bombs and bullets which are the norm in less peaceful lands.

But really, wouldn't it be better if we ceased in effect looking down our noses at others, the Americans included, and tried to do something to upgrade the Canadian image where possible.

Is there no poverty in Canada? Are there not areas of housing and evidence of neglect — of children, of the aged, of the needy — that might be remedied,

Pollution? The carelessness of the little-people? The scruffy aspect of some of our cities? The manner in which some of our native peoples are forced to live, amid poverty, hunger and disease? Do none of these things concern those who remind us how fortunate we are.

The material wealth that does extend to a good many Canadians also has among less desirable connotations. It has led to a society which works too hard on the one hand, breaking down the health of some, and burns around on the other, living off the (unearned) bounty of those who do work. It has resulted in a nerve-wracked sedentary citizenry on one side, and on the other, a weak, dispirited and sloppy generation growing up with little in the way of motivation or challenge.

Here, an adult generation whose physical fitness and appreciation of anything other than the gimmicky aspects of leisure is questionable, and there, a youth cult without purpose or much in the way of hope for the future.

It may be no coincidence that in the Communist world's program of subversion, or "rules of revolution" formulated more than half-a-century ago, and which appeared on this page recently by way of a warning to an apathetic citizenry, include as its first concept the corruption of the young.

Canadians, and we would recommend this in particular to our political representatives, should read the letters that appear in The Globe and Mail, on a regular basis, from the ultra - wing academics who seem to populate the faculties of our universities in increasing numbers. A lot of it is pure political gobbledegook, but there is much in it also that suggests that democratic freedom and free speech do not enter much into their thinking.

Canadians fortunate? Yes, in a superficial way for the moment, but in the long-term . . . well, that may be another matter.

Security Issue

It would be wrong to suppose that the attack on Princess Anne and her husband is one that could not be repeated in Britain, whether the intended victim is Royalty or some other important personage.

Even though this sort of thing — and the use of guns in particular — is not in the British civilian tradition — the wonder is that the country has not had far more fatal immunity from incidents of this gravity on home soil.

And this, because in any society there are those who for one misguided reason or another, or because of mental instability, may be counted upon to perpetrate the kind of murderous assault as was witnessed near Buckingham Palace last week. The record of assassination of members of European Royalty, not to mention one or two less serious incidents in Britain itself, over the past 100 years is warning enough of the kind of isolated act of terror that could occur at any time.

Additional security for the Royal family is now an inevitable consequence, and this will include the visit of Princess Margaret and her husband The Earl of Snowdon to Manitoba in May. A key to official thinking though, apart from the fact the Royal family does not want security to be overdone, is the fact it may be relaxed again in the next few months.

Jobs Shunned So Plant Hired Scots Workers

Alf Hales' Revelations on the Unemployment Rip-Off

By RICHARD JACKSON.

OTTAWA — When Manpower Minister Andrew Gets ground to those changes in the Unemployment Insurance program that Prime Minister Trudeau promised in the Throne Speech, conservative MP Alfred Hales has a horror story to tell.

A horror, that is, for the taxpayer.

Mr. Hales has a special interest in the UIC reform promised by the Prime Minister.

For two reasons, one being that his years of training as chairman of Parliament's Public Accounts Committee has made him hypersensitive to bureaucratic incompetence, indifference and inefficiency in the administration of welfare programs on one hand, and the resulting massive ripoff of the taxpayers on the other.

And for the second reason that he has compiled a personal investigation of fraudulent UIC and welfare practices in his home city of Guelph and Central Ontario constituency of Wellington.

In Guelph, a medium-sized (population 65,000) city of small industry, in a riding that is 60 per cent manufacturing and 40 per cent agricultural, the last manpower count placed the unemployed at 2,500.

And as in so many other cities and towns, despite the increasing number of jobless drawing UIC "pogey," employers are besieging the Manpower offices for staff.

Among the small plants that have not been able to hire enough even semi-skilled labor has been a textile factory.

With the filling of an importuning contract at stake, the management was so desperate for workers it imported a few hands from Scotland where some people are still anxious enough to work that they will even come to a new country to get the job.

Among the few showing up for $5 jobs the textile plant listed as open with the Manpower office was a young Canadian of 23.

Last summer he had landed a job in July at $3.50 an hour on a construction job that lasted through to December.

Then, when it ran out, he had gone on Unemployment Insurance and drawn welfare from the city of Guelph, too.

Apparently bored with doing nothing but living on "pogey" and city welfare, he had taken part of the job available at the textile plant at $3.25 an hour.

And worked one day.

Then he quit. Alf Hales discovered upon investigation, because of the $125 a week gross pay he could earn by working a week than he had been drawing from the UIC.

And, of course, there were the city welfare cheques, too, on top of "pogey", so why work and fall so far behind financially.

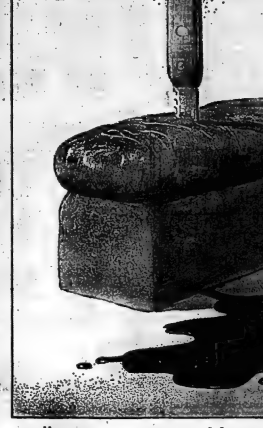
Following up the case, Alf Hales found an almost total lack of communication between the UIC, Manpower and the city welfare offices.

The result: Gross overpayment of undeserved and unearned benefits to the job quitter.

On December 30th he drew a UIC cheque for $115 — another for $186 on January 6th, a third for a further $188 on January 27.

At the same time, Alf Hales established, this expert in the finely developed art of "ripping off" the taxpayer, he collected $80 in city of Guelph welfare on January and additional $364 in February.

Then, to really ice his welfare cake, on February 25, the UIC issued him another cheque for $201 in "unemployment" benefits.



Actually, the job-quitter could not really be classed as "unemployed," laments Alf Hales, "because he has been busy working at welfare as a profitable no-work career."

How did this ripoff artist chisel the taxpayers for $1,077 when the job-quitter he was not entitled to a dime.

Manpower did not bother to fill in the UIC on the case and both federal offices neglected to tell the Guelph welfare office about it.

But how come, after three months of this kind of negligence, the UIC issued still another — a fourth benefit cheque, this for $203 — to this "pogey" expert?

They told me," reported Alf Hales, in astonishment, "that they couldn't get it out of the computer."

Iraqi Civil War Jeopardizes Settlement in the Middle East

By KEVIN DOYLE

London (CP) — While the Soviet Union, France, oil states Kurdish leaders which anxiously, the fierce Kurdish tribesmen of northern Iraq have sent their women and children to the hills and prepare to farm for a full-scale civil war.

Their action marks the end of four years of uneasy peace between the warlike Kurds and the Iraqi government and threatens to upset the fragile power balance around the Arab states of the Middle East.

It leaves the future of multi-billion-dollar Western investments in the oil-rich region in doubt and places the Soviet Union in the position of being committed to supporting both sides without having any clear idea which will be the victor.

The restless Kurds, who inhabit the wild country where the frontiers of Iran, Iran and Turkey meet in peaks and craggy ravines, have for centuries been a constant source of disruption with their demands for independence.

Now the Iraqi government, intent on a final showdown, is massing three army divisions of 48,000 men with tanks and helicopters to take on a 20,000-strong Kurdish guerrilla force led by Mulla Mustafa Barzani.

An ultimatum has been handed to Mustafa, giving him until March 30 to surrender and accept his Government's offer of autonomy for the country's 2.3 million Kurds, a quarter of the total population.

But observers say surrender for 70-year-old Mustafa is out of the question and even the chance of a compromise settlement seems doubtful.

Mustafa, a bet-wing rebel leader, has already opened up old antagonisms between Iraq and his fellow neighbors in Iran where he is seeking military assistance.

The Shah of Iran is the strongest rival of the Baathist regime in Iraq for influence throughout the oil-producing Persian Gulf. He has assisted the Kurds several times in the past in order to embarrass and weaken the Iraqi leader, Ahmed Hassan Al-Bakr.

In the 1970 settlement with the Kurds, Al-Bakr promised a large measure of autonomy, representation in the cabinet and a Kurdish vice-president.

Mustafa's says most of these pledges have since been abandoned. He now sees the only solution as full autonomy for the northern region with links only to the Iraq republic. Virtually nobody in Kurdistan can be prevented from achieving his aim.

Observers believe the success of the rebellion will depend a good deal on how much outside assistance the Kurds obtain from the Soviet Union and Iran.

If Iran decides to support the revolution, it seems likely Saudi Arabia, its close ally, would follow suit. But both may wish to avoid any move which would appear to damage the new image of Arab unity which has developed since last year's war with Israel.

Many experts say one of the few reasons for optimism is that the Soviet Union, which has helped both sides at various times, may avoid giving support to either this time and devote itself instead to working behind the scenes to achieve some form of peaceful settlement.

Call For Permanent Voters' List

By KEN POLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Politicians are reputed to love election campaigns, but more than a few are unhappy with the machinery itself and feel it's long overdue for change.

Ten of more than 150 private members' bills, either introduced in the Commons or scheduled for introduction, are evidence of this dissatisfaction.

The latest, introduced Thursday by Liberal backbencher Judd Buchanan, is designed to establish a permanent voters list.

Mr. Buchanan (London West) says a permanent list, instead of the present system of enumeration before every election, would permit shorter and cheaper campaigns.

"We were all impressed by the rapidity of the recent British election, which was called, contested and decided within a 20-day period," he said Thursday.

"This was accomplished because Great Britain has a permanent voters list."

The Canadian system takes about 60 days from the day the election is called until voting day.

There was some comment following introduction of the bill that Mr. Buchanan apparently failed to consider the relative stability of British voters who may not move around as much as Canadians.

"If you're on the list in Upper Wellington Boot," a Liberal source said, "the only place you can vote is in Upper Wellington Boot until the next revision."

The bill says a permanent list would be compiled somewhat by voting lists. Voters also would be entered by a canvass carried out by census takers.

In Britain, where between one-fifth and one-quarter of the population moves annually, voters to an entirely different region—the British system might cause problems, as was demonstrated in the October, 1935, general election.

The British system was implemented here in 1934 and enumeration was done in May and June of 1935. The election, just four months later, found many voters far from where they had been enumerated.

So, in 1937, Parliament voted unanimously to return to the old system, the present system.

In Australia, which has a permanent list, the situation is similar to that existing in Britain, with a revised list closed Feb. 15. It applies for the rest of the year.

In Canada, where between one-fifth and one-quarter of the population moves annually, voters to an entirely different region—the British system might cause problems, as was demonstrated in the October, 1935, general election.

Enumeration takes a major bite of the cost of a federal election, which averages about $10 million. But the opportunity is something Canada will have to put up with until someone has a workable solution.

Health Minister Under Gun

By DON O'HEARN ..

TORONTO — No. Monty, no! Dr. Morton Shulman was called for the scalp of new Health minister Frank Miller before Miller had been in office more than a few weeks.

He said Miller was a fine man and all that, but he simply didn't know the health problems of the day.

And to back this up the doctor mentioned a number of secondary problems, including the position of physiotherapists and an alleged pollution problem in Belleville.

The NDP doctor is making a mistake, a common one, in taking the wrong concept of what the function of a cabinet minister is or should be.

A good minister should get to know his department and its many facets.

But this essentially is secondary.

The prime function of a minister is to handle broad policy and a top-flight man will realize this and not get tied down with details.

In the case of Miller his first obligation is to see that the public gets good health service.

To advise the government on how the best service can be provided within the limits of the funds available.

To see that there are doctors available, to negotiate that fees are not too high and to consider policy on similar matters.

On secondary matters, such as the controversy over denturists, he should seek expert advice on policy, but the broad policies should come from him on everything.

Above all he should not be a general manager or an office manager taking care of every detail.

These are matters for the civil service.

Miller has been in office only a very short time later. Sir John A. Macdonald's archenemy in politics, Brown helped his coalition government for critical Charlottetown and Quebec conferences before Confederation, only to resign in 1865. The newspaper he founded, The Globe, was the most influential of its time.

Strike at Union Carbide Plant

Editor
The Intelligencer:

The numerous accusations and false stories being circulated about the striking United Rubber Workers at the Union Carbide Plant in Belleville has prompted me to respond.

We are certainly grateful for the support and kindness that your staff has reported the facts, and for this we say, thank you.

We are, the average working men, who like many thousands workers in our city, support families and local functions, and are subject to the same every day challenges with no special privileges, except what is concerned with earning a living.

We are faced with one problem which has caused us some concern, that being this is the first time that the United Rubber Workers have had to strike in support of a outside settlement.

Contrary to what many may think, many hours of thought enter into a decision of this importance. We do not feel that this situation is in any way similar to as humorous, but rather a sincere and final step to achieve what we know is a necessary increase in our wage agreement.

We have made a few minor mistakes which can probably be attributed to the fact that for most of us on picket duty, this is a first. The errors made however, were in scheduling of crews and inexperience, but have overcome these obstacles which could be found on any picket level with shifts operating harmoniously.

We are aware that strike action takes its toll in the form of tension which is felt by both parties being involved; management have feelings as well as the average worker and I feel sure that the several men who are now losing their pays confines on a twenty-four hour basis are concerned about what is happening as are the union members on the picket lines.

The policy of the United Rubber Workers does not include violence as a method of demonstration. We have tried to keep within the law as our many consultations with Chief Cruckle and the Belleville Police Department will confirm.

We have admitted many vehicles and occupants through our picket lines on a voluntary basis. Three doctors, a chief, engineers from the boiler house, ambulance drivers, plant chemists (manager, negotiator and some department supervisors) vendors of goods, emergency vehicles, C.P.R. train on service crews had passed through (personnel).

We have also been granted some liberties by bbe company without any conditions being demanded.

The many supporters who have contacted us in the past few days have been appreciated. Many merchants have been very generous in support of our needs, local union support crews have evidence every day last week and many individual supporters who have come to our aid has added to our morale of security to our morale.

We also assure everyone people that someone from our organization will contact you and convey the feeling of appreciation of our brotherhood.

Sincerely yours.

Executive Appointment by UCS

Editor:
The Intelligencer:

Your editorial captioned "U.C.S. future" drew my attention.

It appears the editorialist is interested that the city needs a professional director at a salary of $18,500, plus and finds no thing wrong that this individual should be from outside the Belleville area.

I am confused, as the same editorialist, on July 26, 1973 under the caption of U.C.S. Developments wrote in respect to the appointment of a U.C.S. professional director. "Could the job not be done on a voluntary basis, or at least by a more qualified local person?"

The U.C.S. and council met in secret to place their seal of approval on this latest import from out of town. The intelligencer editorial column does not appear able to make up it's mind - one way or another.

Myself and many others in Belleville view this latest appointment as an insult and unwarranted imposition on the taxpayers. The U.C.S. has proved it doesn't need on executive director — it needs a good swift kick where it counts — to point it in the right direction.

CLARENCE E. YOUNG
Editor's Note: Circumstances change with the passage of time. The editorial addressed itself to the situation obtaining at the time of the appointment of a new executive director. It addressed itself also to prospects for the future, and not to the situation as it was last summer.

A point by point primer on how to lose your driver's licence.

It's actually quite simple.

All you do is accumulate fifteen demerit points and lose your licence for thirty days. Do it again and lose your licence for six months.

In this province, it definitely pays a driver to score a big fat zero. Ontario's demerit point system is designed to convince the poor driver to drive properly. Drivers who do not improve are then taken from the road because they're a menace to pedestrians and to other drivers.

But the system is not at all unjust. It's aimed at telling the driver where he's gone wrong and giving him plenty of time to correct his faults.

For instance: When you've accumulated six points, you'll be notified and urged to improve your driving.

When you've got nine, you'll probably be asked to attend a private interview and re-do your driving test.

At fifteen points, you'll lose your licence for thirty days and drop back to seven points. Get fifteen again and you won't drive for six months.

However, your record won't be indelibly marked. If you drive for two years without a traffic conviction your points are erased and your slate is clean.

How Demerit Points Accumulate:

7 points	Failing to remain at scene of an accident (Highway Traffic Act).
6 points	Careless driving. Racing.	Exceeding speed limit by 30 m.p.h. or more.
5 points	Driver of bus failing to stop at unprotected railway crossings.
4 points	Exceeding the speed limit by 20 to 29 m.p.h. Failing to stop for school bus. Following too closely.
3 points	Exceeding speed limit by 11 to 19 m.p.h. Driving through, around or under railway crossing barrier. Failing to yield right of way. Failing to obey a stop sign, signal light or railway crossing signal.	Failing to obey directions of police officer. Failing to report an accident to a police officer. Improper passing. Crowding driver's seat. Wrong way on one-way street or highway.
2 points	Failing to lower headlamp beam. Improper opening of vehicle door. Prohibited turns. Towing of persons on toboggans, bicycles, skis, etc. prohibited.	Failing to obey signs other than those mentioned above. Pedestrian cross-over. Failing to share road. Improper right turn. Improper left turn. Failing to signal. Unnecessary slow driving.

The whole point is to score nothing, keep your record clean and drive happily ever after.

Carol Brooks, a busy teacher and mother, often starts supper before she leaves for work. In her Working Woman's Dinner, for example, she prepares the vegetables in the morning, sets the oven timer and forgets dinner until she arrives home to put together a very quick skillet main dish. A grade two teacher at Bayside Elementary School, Mrs. Brooks lives with husband Wayne, board of education co-ordinator for out-of-school learning, and son Ken, 3, on Glen Miller Road. Sewing and ceramics are her hobbies.

Working Woman's Dinner

Potatoes: Clean, peel and slice ¾ inch thick enough potatoes for your family. Roll in oil and shake in a bag of breading like Shake and Bake. Place on cookie sheet in oven.

Carrots: Clean large carrots, leaving whole. Wrap as many potatoes as you need for your family in a pile in aluminum foil after dotting with butter and sprinkling with brown sugar. Set in oven. Set oven to bake for one hour at 350.

Hamburger Stroganoff: one pound ground beef; three slices bacon, diced; ½ cup chopped onion; ½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. paprika; dash pepper; condensed cream of mushroom soup; one envelope dill and chives chip dip; ¾ cup milk.

Books By And About Women

A WOMAN IN A MAN'S WORLD

By THERESE F. Casgrain

Mme. Casgrain is one of Canada's foremost feminists who has spent her remarkable career in the thick of the fight for humanitarian cuases.

She was one of the leaders in the long fight to secure the vote for Quebec women; which she didn't win until 1930.

In 1946 she joined the CCF — a rather radical step.

Madame Casgrain gave seemingly inexhaustible energy and time to such movements of reform as co-operative's rights, civil liberties, and the struggle for peace.

However, her book is light, enjoyable reading, with an emphasis on family and on children.

Appointed to the Senate in 1970, Mme. Casgrain has had much to say and an active part to play in 50 years of political life in Canada.

Her autobiography is required reading for anyone interested in the role of women in Canada.

The book is available in the Corby Library.

'Men Get Christ, Women Get Mary'

NEW YORK (AP) — The religious spokesman for a national women's group says some women might be put off by Pope Paul's attempt to modernize the image of the Virgin Mary.

In the fourth document on Mary he has issued in his 19 years as the Roman Catholic pontiff, Pope Paul describes her as "the new woman" who took an active role in the early church.

The document, issued Friday at the Vatican, says that to "the modern woman anxious to participate with decision-making power in the affairs of the community, Mary will appear not as a mother exclusively concerned with her own 'divine Son but rather as a woman who did not hesitate to proclaim that God vindicates the weak and oppressed. . . .

"Mary, the new woman, consists of 165 boxes containing stands at the side of Christ, the 25,000 documents relating to new Man."

Columnist Ends Renowned Career

VANCOUVER (CP) — For more than 45 years Evelyn Caldwell has delighted, astounded and sometimes infuriated the thousands of British Columbians who followed her itinerant and varied newspaper career as consumer advocate, reporter and columnist.

Last month, Penny Wise, as she was known to her readers, retired after more than 7,442 Shopping Guide columns in nearly 30 years with Vancouver Sun.

In her time she covered everything from police courts, city hall and provincial politics to Grace Kelly's Monaco wedding and Queen Elizabeth's coronation—which she covered by watching it all in the newsreels.

She was known for her courage, candor, spontaneity, independence—and quick temper.

Journalist and author Pierre Berton, a close friend and former colleague on the old Vancouver News-Herald, once described her as the only living reporter to keep her job after twice breaking a cardinal rule in journalism: Do Not Throw a Gluepot or Rye Whisky Bottle at Your City Editor.

Once, angered by what she considered excessive editing of her copy, she chased a young city editor into the men's washroom, and when he bolted the door, climbed over the transom and got him with her pot of glue.

She could do all the things good reporters should do, including, as Mr. Berton once said, "stealing pictures of murdered men from their mother's top bureau drawer."

In her years as the Sun's Penny Wise, Evelyn Caldwell crusaded against the marketing and advertising factions who "are largely responsible for confusing women when they do their shopping, with their everlasting cheating, their everlasting games, contests and frills that keep prices up."

Without naming names, she let her readers know what were good buys and what were bad. But she could be just as hard on the lazy consumer as on the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers.

Her Feminine Fighting Forces of B.C.—7,000, letter-writing women—became a strong influence in the advertising war against high prices and inferior quality. Their efforts led to the lifting of the provincial ban on whipping topping and over 1,000 of the fighting forces wrote letters to Ottawa in protest the ban on margarine.

But Penny Wise was just as likely to be found in some farflung corner of the world. She travelled about 250,000 miles in being her readers descriptions of everywhere from Paris to Moscow to Fiji.

In 1957 she was assigned to do a 4 feature-story on a new Norwegian freighter in Vancouver Harbor. The next her city editor heard from her was a dispatch from Oslo. The freighter's captain had invited her to go along for the ride, by way of Panama and Trinidad, and nothing could be more natural than for Miss Caldwell to take him up on his offer.

Her fondest memories are of her 1961 visit to the combat zone of Korea, where Canadian troops welcomed her uproariously.

"They just gawked all the way. I felt like the Queen. I hooked a bloody mess with the dust in my hair and wearing those awful khaki things, but they'd that lipstick and wave and wave and wave."

One of her columns began: "I guess I'm just a silly old softie because I've been crying steadily ever since I stood on the dock at Pusan and watched thousands of Canadian soldiers file onto Korean soil."

In Tokyo, on her way home, Miss Caldwell heard that she'd missed a party for her by the supply echelon of the Princess Pats. She flew back to the war zone, bringing a box of fresh strawberries and a pair of black panties.

"They had about one strawberry each and sat around eating it and looking at me. The poor things! I could have been Rita Hayworth and, God, I wish I had been."

Last Column

Evelyn Caldwell known to her readers as Penny Wise, writes the last of her more than 7,442 shopping columns for the Vancouver Sun before retiring. She put in more than 45 years as reporter, consumer advocate and columnist. (CP Photo).

Successful Living

Bachelor, 55, Reluctant

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I'm 55 and still a bachelor. For the last seven years I have been keeping company with a single woman and when I visit in her city it stay with her. She also has talked me into an engagement ring.

I still have feeling for the woman but there are times when I wish I could break away. She seems possessive yet I hate to hurt her. When we go dancing she is jealous of other women and tells me what women I should dance with or whether I should drink.

Do you think I'd be a heel if I suddenly decided to dissolve the partnership?

Just A Mixed-Up Kid.

Dear Kid (of 55): If your Engagement Ring Gift is holding the reins tight now, what happens when the legality possesses you? You may be reluctant to take action — but a reluctant bridegroom would be even worse!

I suggest you insist on a period of, say, six months of not seeing each other. This will help you to examine your true feelings. If you find you do, after all need her and love her, your relationship would have to be on a 50-50 basis.

Neither one dominates; she works to make you happy just as much as you work to make her happy otherwise it's no go - and the sooner you cut the ties-that-bind, the better. You'll be a heel if you don't.

Dear Doris: Please send "For That Spare Tire - A Special Massage". My problem is not a real spare tire but a bump of flesh around my navel.

Also, do you have any solution for knees that bulge on females? My legs are slightly skinny but except for these knobby knees are not too bad in shape. the bump seems to be largely muscle [illegible] when the leg is in any other position but straight.

Hopeful.

Dear Hopeful: I guess that tummy bump is the shape our so-called spare tire takes most of the time. I hope the massage will help you.

Perhaps that other exercise leaflet of ours, "Be Figure Perfect", would tackle the knee bulge. I expect you are talking about a sort of knock-kneed condition, except that the bulge may be just caused by a little excess flesh. I gather the bones of the legs themselves are slim and straight.

Ann Landers

Aging Beauty Attracts Daughter's Boyfriend

Dear Ann: I'm 37; the mother of a beautiful daughter who comes by her looks naturally. (I was a finalist in a national beauty contest in the late '50s). We look more like sisters than mother and daughter. Like many other women, I do my housework in the nude. When the weather is pleasant I slip out for a skimpy-dip in our secluded, private pool. My husband takes frequent business trips but when he's home he often joins me.

Our daughter has a handsome 22-year-old boyfriend. In spite of Rick's tender age, I find myself attracted to him. He has always treated me with respect and I've kept my infatuation well concealed.

Last week I was enjoying a moon swim when Rick suddenly appeared at the side of the pool. I was speechless with embarrassment. To make me feel "at ease," he calmly disrobed and joined me. Rick is built like a greek god and we cavorted playfully in reckless abandon. It ended when he kissed me in a way that made my head twirl.

Now Rick wants me to be his "Mrs. Robinson," arguing that many middle-aged women have young lovers. I'm tempted, but scared to death. If my daughter found out she'd be furious.

I have a 33-year-old divorced neighbor who would be crazy about Rick. I've thought of introducing them to get him off my trail. In the meantime I'm having nightmares. I haven't been skinny-dipping since. This letter is no phony from Yale. It's a real problem, and I need help in—Marfa Comely

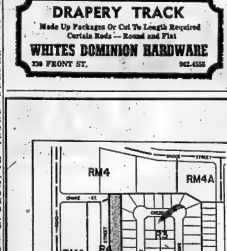
Dear Marfa: Inform Rick that he is not welcome to drop around your pool unlovited. When he comes to see your daughter, get legit, Ma. And don't pretend you fib to anybody. I'll bet this kid already knows several middle-aged women. Let's hope Rick doesn't have a loose lip or you could be in for the hassle of your life.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think of the recent research project which revealed that men who smoke pipes are viewed by women as "sexier, superior intellects, more mature, sincere, attractive, stable and masculine?" This survey was conducted by a local psychology institute. Can a pipe give a man all those enviable qualities?—Bay Area A•• Fan

Dear Bay: A pipe can't give a man any of those enviable qualities. The survey merely said women view men who smoke pipes as "sexier, superior intellects, etc."

Did you know the research project was commissioned by a pipe manufacturer in Burlingame, California?

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column for 20 years and you are a quack. My diagnosis is based on a detailed computerized analysis. You have produced only 79 original answers since 1953. Since you write seven days a week, this means you give only one honest-to-goodness reply every 93 days.



The other 92 days you sneak by with "seek professional help" or "see your clergyman" or "you Yale guys make me sick. Knock it off." You are a phony.—Disgusted

Dear C.O.: I've been writing this column for 18 years, not 20. Among your other "gifts" are you also a clairvoyant? You have to be to see me coming two years before I appeared.

House-painter Wins Big Sweeps Prize

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

At 10 a.m. Saturday George Perreira, 36, of Toronto took a break from his house painting job to listen to the news on the radio. That's when he learned he was one of four Canadians to win $115,000 each in the Irish Sweepstakes.

"I never won anything in my life before," said the father of two little girls. "I don't believe it."

The man, who came from Italy 17 years ago and thinks "Canada is the best place in the world," wants to buy some land out in the country with his winnings but he said he won't quit his house painting job.

"I've been working all my life and I guess I'll keep on working."

Also winning $115,000 first-prize money for holding tickets on Quixair, a longshot in the Irish Sweepstakes, were Lincoln Handicap at Doncaster, England, were Austin Lindsay of Bible Hill, N.S., Fernie Brown of Crofton, B.C., and Florence Sharpe of Toronto.

Mr. Lindsay, 47, a boiler room worker at Nova Scotia Agricultural College for 22 years, found the win "a bit hard to believe."

Informed by a reporter that he had won, Mr. Lindsay told his family plans "maybe to change the furniture in the house" and "debating on a trip," otherwise, life will go on as usual.

The Lindsays have six children ranging in age from 11 to 23, and two grandchildren.

Mrs. Brown said she has no definite plans for the money.

Six Canadians, including four from Ontario, won $46,000 on second-place Somerway and nine won $23,000 on third-place Anak Malaysia.

Ministers Accused Of Interference

KINGSTON (CP) — East Mc Kewen, recve of Kingston Township, says about six members of the provincial cabinet, including Claude Bennett, and about five civil servants are deliberately interfering in town-

Friday Mr. Bennett, the minister of industry and tourism, and Donald Irvine, special adviser on municipal affairs, both threatened to force him out of politics.

He said that at a meeting last year concerning the hunting powers of the township's zoning committee of adjustment, Mr. Bennett and Mr. Irvine "waved their pencils at me and said, 'We aren't finished with you.'"

Mr. McEwen said, "I clearly took that as a threat that they would interfere with the township's business."

Earlier Friday Mr. McEwen said the cabinet interfered, with the Ontario Municipal Board's dealing with the township in reversing a board decision allowing the township to construct a $3-million water treatment plant.

Mr. McEwen said the cabinet had acted on appeal by four township ratepayers, one of whom was James Bennett, brother of the cabinet minister.

ship business in an attempt to publicly discredit him.

Mr. McEwen, who ran in the last provincial election as an independent candidate when he failed to gain the Progressive Conservative nomination, said

Crisis in Housing Said One of Price

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's new housing minister, Sidney Handleman, says the province is facing a "housing price crisis," not a crisis or actual shortage in the supply of housing.

Mr. Handleman, 53, said in a recent interview his ministry intends to fight the "price" crisis with a housing-action program to be announced in about two weeks.

A graduate of the London School of Economics who spent 20 years as a tariff economist and consultant to multinational corporations, Mr. Handleman said one of his main targets in his new job will be to deal with land speculation.

"Land is just turning over—people are shuffling paper, and every time you move the paper there's a profit to somebody," he said. "And no development is going up, just paper being shuffled.

"Well, I don't look at that as just a housing problem—it's inflation and some degree of gambling.

"I suppose my success will be measured by the number of members who lose," he said.

His ministry's aim will be to increase the supply of houses and thereby depress the cost, he said. Investors would soon get the idea that land is not the best money-maker.

"A lot of this speculative boom is psychology," he said. "People say you can't lose by buying land—and they've been right.

"What we would like to do is at least start throwing out the idea among the people who are speculating: 'Hey, maybe this guy is going to put an end to this.'"

Investigation at Millhaven Sought by Toronto Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto lawyer Anthony Bazos called for an independent committee to investigate the Millhaven maximum security penitentiary after visiting his prison near Kingston during the weekend.

Mr. Bazos said in an interview Saturday he returned from the penitentiary "a shaken man" because of the tense atmosphere there.

"They're in for big trouble at Millhaven," he said. "It could be as bad as the Kingston riots of 1971 if it's not stopped right now.

"They've hired guards who are rough, tough and hard as nails and the guards are running the prison right now."

"That's what started the trouble," he added. "It's going to take an independent body to solve it."

Mr. Bazos went to the prison to visit a client, James McDougall, who has charged three guards with beating him, kicking him and burning his face with lighted cigarettes.

Earlier this week, Solicitor General Warren Allmand said he was used to percival attacks on guards, who nevertheless have been attacked with

Boyle Says He Fears Only God

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — W. J. (Tony) Boyle, former president of the United Mine Workers Union who once testified "I a afraid only of Almighty God, goes on trial here today, charged with ordering the assassination of a union rival more than four years ago.

Boyle, 72, who attempted suicide last fall, faces three counts of murder in the shootings of Joseph (Jock) Yablonski, his wife Margaret and daughter, Charlotte on Dec. 31, 1969.

Eight persons have confessed or have been convicted in the killings.

More than 100 prosecution witnesses are ready to testify against the ailing Boyle, including two men who allegedly were present when the murder conspiracy was hatched.

The prosecution says the plot began in June, 1969, when Boyle was embroiled in a bitter battle with Yablonski for control of the 200,000-member union he wrested from the late John L. Lewis.

Boyle won re-election by a 10-1 margin, but Yablonski charged fraud. Three weeks later Yablonski was dead.

Eight People Die As Tavern Set Afire

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A 34-year-old man was charged Sunday with eight counts of murder in a tavern fire bombing that killed eight persons and injured 10others.

Earnest James Burton, 34, was arraigned on charges of murder, arson, 10 counts of attempted murder and other charges. He was held without bail and preliminary hearing was set for April 1.

The fire began Saturday in the Cahoose bar when a man opened the front door, poured gasoline from a five-gallon can on the floor and threw a match that ignited it, fire officials said.

Police refused to discuss any possible motives, but other sources said there had been an altercation earlier at the bar.

The 18 persons inside were trapped because a back door had been boarded up from the inside, said the district attorney.

Eight persons died and 10 were injured, six critically. A fireman and policeman were injured in the rescue attempt.

The boarding of the rear door is being investigated as a possible violation of the state fire safety code.

Joudwa Delivers

All-out Effort Gives Cats Edge

By MIKE BRADSHAW

BRAMALEA — Friday night the Belleville 'Bobcats put it together in the third period to take a 9-6 victory over the Bramalea Blues.

Sunday night, the Cats not only put it together in the first, second and third, but also in the fourth and fifth periods to defeat the Blues 4-3 and take a 2-2 lead in the best of seven Metro Junior B final series.

The two teams battled their way through three periods of regulation play, and finished no farther ahead than when the game had started.

After the first 60 minutes the score was deadlocked at 3-3. The game then went into 10 more minutes of regulation play and at the end of that time the score was still tied.

The fifth period was played under sudden death regulations, meaning the first team to score would win. After five minutes of sudden death, the Bobcats tallied to take a well deserved 4-3 victory.

Kevin Joudwa was the fifth period hero, batting in his own rebound. Joudwa took the puck in the Bramalea end, skated in front of the net and slammed a shot at the Blues goalie, Barrie Oakes. The Blues' netminder made the initial save so Joudwa slammed at the rebound. The puck bounced off the pad of Oakes and into the air, Joudwa took a swipe with his stick and knocked the puck over Oakes into the net for the winning tally.

"That is one guy we can't figure out," said the Bramalea management, "every time he plays against us he plays well. Coates we can cover, Richardson we can cover, but Joudwa is the most dangerous man on the ice against us. We just don't figure out how to cover him. He'll kill us every time."

The Bobcats came up with an excellent team effort to win and despite the fact that they were down 2-1 at one point they were definitely in control for the entire duration of the game, except for flurries by the defensive efforts of the Cats.

Belleville's goal both ways in the extra long game doing some good forechecking to boot.

The Blues went ahead 2-1, 54 seconds later when Dean Hartwell combined with Beasley and McKeraghan.

Only two goals were scored in the second period, both by the Bobcats. At 5:39 Dave Taylor on a playbut from the blueline after getting the puck from Coates.

Bramalea tied things back up at 3-3 on a goal by Dan Walker. Ted Bonham drew the assist.

The Blues then played with a man advantage for five minutes, but couldn't mount any attack against the Cats' defenders.

The teams went through the fourth period scorelessly and in the fifth at the five minute mark Joudwa scored to win the game.

There were 10 penalties handed out, six to the Blues. Both teams were guilty of minor misconducts amidst the other infractions.

The Bobcats now outshot the home team 54-36.

Tuesday at 8.30 p.m. Belleville will host the Blues at the Memorial Arena in the ninth game of the series.

they played a man short for five straight minutes and did not only find they kill off the major penalty successfully, but on two occasions as most scored.

Another factor demonstrating their togetherness was that during the five minute penalty, goalie Bob Moore did not have to stop a single shot. The Blues lengthy power play turned into more of a popgun plays.

Bramalea was obviously fired up for the game, but not fired up enough to combine with Belleville's defence and strong backchecking by the forwards. The Blues were constantly limited to the effectiveness of their offensive rushes by the defensive efforts of the Cats.

Although he made the grab on this Belleville shot, with Bobcat forward Wally Blues' goaltender Barry Oakes couldn't stop the Cats for the whole night, giving up four goals, including one to Kevin Joudwa in the second overtime period to give the Cats their third win in the best of seven Metro Junior B final series. Belleville's Jeff Merrill Named Top Goalie

Nepean Repeat Winner at Trenton

TRENTON — Quinte Nepean Raiders made it two Trenton Midget Hockey Tournament championships in a row here on the weekend.

Raiders, winners of the top honors last year when the event was still under the sponsorship of the Trenton Lions Club, repeated in this, the first year of the Golden Hawk Tournament as presented by the Trenton Minor Hockey Association in conjunction with the town's Parks and Recreation Committee.

Raiders scored a 3-2 overtime win over Ottawa West Golden Knights in the grand championship match after shading Trenton Quinte Ice Products 2-1 in the A final.

The Golden knights qualified for the grand final by whipping Kingston Township Majors 2-1 in the B semi-final and then romping past Trenton 7-1 in the match-up for the title on the consolation side.

Gary Langill was the Nepean hero in the defeat of Ottawa West in the winner takes all contest between A and B winners. His goal in sudden death overtime came on a three-way move with Danny Dodds and Ron Davidson.

Tim Higgins took care of both Golden Knights' counters, opening the game's scoring with the only tally of the first period and forcing the overtime when his third period counter made it a 2-2 tie.

Gilles Parent and Dodds shot the other Nepean goals. Dodds was in on all his team's scoring plays.

The host Trenton team gave everything it had while extending Nepean before dropping a 2-1 decision for the A title.

Raiders scored once in each of the first two periods and managed to hang on desperately after Trenton closed the gap with the third period's only goal.

Relegated to the B side after accepting its first defeat of the tournament, Trenton appeared to have nothing left with which to give Ottawa West an argument in the consolation final.

Seven players shared the Golden Knights' goals in the team's convincing 7-1 win.

Higgins, Tim Stanley, Bud Coughler, Barry Hills, David Behm, Chris Jodoin and Frank Paravan connected for the markers.

Trenton's lone reply was supplied by Dean Rice.

Goals by Bobby Smith, Steve Shovler and Paravan carried the Knights past Kingston Township in the B semi-final. Kingston's goal —scored by Richard Otenhof, —

—...while Lions' Jeff Merrill was judged the top goalie in the tournament. Merrill recorded a goals against average of 2.50, allowing 15 goals in six games.

North Bay Bruce Construction players took home trophies for most valuable forward and defencemen. Dale Hewitt took the honors for forwards while Brent Tremblay topped the defencemen.

Nepean's Danny Dodds was selected as the tournament's most valuable player and his teammate Ron Davidson took the most gentlemanly player award.

Hockey Basics School Gets Seal of Approval

The Belleville Basic Hockey School has closed out its first year of operation.

The name of the school was derived from the fact that the institution's philosophy was to teach the boys the basics of hockey so that they would properly be able to develop the skills of the game.

"If a hockey player doesn't have skating ability or doesn't have manoeuverability with his stick," explained chief instructor, Lionel Dockrill, "then he has to do things like hook and trip to be successful to keep up with the skilful players."

"There are so many boys," added Dockrill, "that can't develop the necessary skills of a hockey player because they don't have the basics of the game. So we stripped the game to its bare necessities and started from there."

The 12 week course culminated Friday with a scrimmage. The first which has been allowed over the entire semester.

Successful?

"Look out there," piloted Dockrill, "those are the kids that literally walked out on the ice on their ankles when the course started."

The chief instructor was referring to the nine and 10-year-old boys who not only skating the Dick Ellis ice surface, but doing so in moderate degrees of finesse.

Probably the people who really notice any difference in students at the school would be the boys' parents.

Bill Coates said, 'My son has learned more at this school than he has in the three years he's played hockey. He really knows how to react to the puck since he's been in this course." For Dockrill and this school 100 per cent. He's an excellent

Checking in with 19 points were the husband and wife team of Larry and Gloria Dawson.

Finishing with 28 points, good enough for third place was another husband and wife team. Lauren Kennedy drove the third place finishing car, with husband Jim the navigator.

Raiders Still Alive

NEWMARKET (Special) — Trenton Raiders ducked a knockout punch Sunday night and as a result, are still alive in their Ontario Minor Hockey Association Bantam AA semi-final series with Newmarket.

Needing only one win to wrap up the best of five set in straight games, Newmarket had the visitors on the ropes but couldn't put Raiders away.

The home team opened a 4-1 lead going into the final 20 minutes, or regulation time but Raiders fought back to square it with three late counters and the teams battled through a scoreless 10-minutes overtime period.

Sam Salerian's goal with 46 seconds to play in the third period gave Trenton goalie Greg Howard out for an extra attacker, capped the Raiders' comeback.

Tom Koppman and Dave Campbell had the other third period goals for the Trenton squad.

Ian MacDonald took care of all three Newmarket goals, kicking in the hat-trick in the second period. Until the late going, Trenton's Campbell was the only marksman for the visitors.

Saturday night in Trenton, Newmarket made it 2-0 in games with a 3-2 win in overtime. Jamie McCoun fired the winner with 51 seconds left in the five minute session.

Ben Lewsey had wiped out a 2-1 Newmarket lead with a Trenton goal late in the third period to force the overtime. Newmarket and Glenn Cutting were the other scorers for Newmarket. Campbell had Raiders first goal of the game.

Valiquette, Adduono Finish in Deadlock

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game between Toronto Marlboros and Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds Sunday was what most would class a nothing game unless you happen to be one of the series' leading goal scorers and fighting for the scoring championship.

Tight Race In South

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The battle for first place in the North Division is just about settled, which is a little different than the South Division of the Eastern Hockey League.

Rochester Americans tied Binghamton Saturday night, while Providence Reds, second in the North, lost 7-4 to Hershey.

The Americans now have 92 points with six regular-season games remaining. The Reds have 86 with six left.

In the South, the Clippers moved into a tie for first place with Baltimore Bays, both with 87 points. Cincinnati Swords are a point behind in third place following their 9-2 triumph over Richmond Robins.

In the other Sunday game, New Haven Nighthawks beat Springfield Kings 4-2.

Saturday's results were: Boston 6, Jacksonville 3; Richmond 8, Hershey 5; and Rochester 7, Springfield 1.

Americans 1 Clippers 1

The Clippers took a 1-0 lead in the first period when Bob Rivard scored on a power play from the point.

Then the Americans tied it 50 seconds later when Bob Eliatti scored.

Hornets Rebound

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brian Shortreed scored two goals both Saturday and Sunday nights to lead Cambridge Hornets to their first two victories in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A semi-final series against Orillia Terriers.

Orillia took the first three games of the series, but Cambridge came back with a 4-3 win at Cambridge Saturday night and a 6-1 victory in Orillia Sunday.

In the only other playoff game, Barrie Flyers downed Brantford Foresters 4-2 Sunday to win their best-of-seven semi-final series 4-1.

At Orillia, John Beechey, Ron Ellis, Steve Bway, and Dennis Kraemer scored the other Hornets goals.

Ray Dupont and Gary Milroy scored for Orillia.

Draveurs in Playoffs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trois-Rivieres Draveurs clinched their fourth straight playoff spot in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League's East Division Sunday night with a 6-5 overtime win over Cornwall Royals in one of five games played.

Elsewhere, Hull - Fetsiwki downed Laval Nationals 9-3, Sherbrooke Blazers defeated Quebec Remparts 6-4, Drummondville Rangers scored a 6-3 win over Shawinigan Dynamos and Montreal Juniors outscored Sherbrooke Beavers 5-1.

Alain Daigle's second goal of the game at 01 of the overtime period gave the Draveurs their win over the West-Division champion Royals.

Cornwall defencemen Bob Murray earned a game misconduct after the goal was scored and was charged after referee Pierre LaFleur. Murray was disputing a penalty call to teammate John Duncan which led to the game-winning goal.

Other goalscorers: Guy Dupuis, Guy Briere and Jean Beaulieu scored for Trois-Rivieres with Marc Brassau, Gary MacGregor, Allan Wagar, Kevin Tracy and Murray replying for Cornwall.

U.S. Skip Bud Somerville Proves It

The Important Game Is the Last One

BERN, Switzerland (CP) — Bud Somerville says there is only one important game in the world curling championship: the last one.

The Superior, Wis., skip won that game Saturday for the world title after finishing the round-robin section of the 15-country tournament with a 12-1 record.

"It doesn't matter what your record is in the round-robin; there's only one game you have to win and that's the last one," he said before the semi-finals.

After his win Saturday he told reporters that his rink's record coming into the championship was 10 wins and one loss.

"We lost more here than we did all year, but those three don't mean a thing now."

The U.S. team, including lead Bob Nichols, second Ron Ahlness and third Bob Nichols, thumped Sweden 11-4 in a final that wasn't in doubt after the fourth end when Somerville cracked a stone to make the score 5-0.

Sands Not Waiting For Regular Season

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California catcher Charlie Sands is violating Yogi Berra's old theory: There are only so many hits in your bat so why waste them during spring training?

Sands cracked his second pinch homer Saturday, a three-run shot that lifted the Angels to a 4-3 victory over Milwaukee Brewers. Sunday, he walloped a grand-slam home run and a double as the Angels trounced the Brewers 15-6.

It was his fourth home run of the training season, giving him 12 runs batted in and a .615 batting average.

It's a far cry from 1967 when Sands spent the entire season in the minors.

He did in the King Roman fight in Tokyo.

The dispute spilled over into the various hotel lobbies, cancelling a scheduled workout by Foreman.

But most observers expected some sort of a compromise prior to today's official weigh-in.

Canadians Win In Track Meet

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) — Canada won both relay events Saturday, one because Bermuda was disqualified for the men's race, to defeat its opponent 119-85 in a dual junior track meet.

Ann Mackie and Linda Hall-Bigelow of Canada and Debbie Mitchell of Toronto and Bev Cox of Vancouver took the women's 1,600-metre relay in three minutes, 49.4 seconds. Bermuda was second in 4:01.4.

In the men's 1,600-metre race, Earl Bigelow of Halifax, Bill Bauer of Saskatoon and Glenn Bogue and Bill Kennedy, both of Toronto, had a time of 3:18.3. The Bermuda team was disqualified for a faulty handoff during the first exchange of the baton.

Canada won three women's events. Doreen Jones of Edmonton finished first in the discus with a toss of 119 feet, a personal best; Miss Halverson took the 800-metre race in 2:10.3 and Donna Summerland of Toronto won the long jump with a leap of 18-6.

Tinker Robinson of Vancouver was second in the 200-metre race, 24.7, and Joanne McTaggart of Saskatoon was third in the same event, 25.2. The winning time was 24.5.

Miss Mitchell wound up second in the 800-metre event with a time of 2:10.4 and Anne Bryan of Toronto was second in the long jump, 18-5.

Mark Randall of Ottawa took the men's 800-metre race in 1:54.5 with Allan Bakker of Vancouver second in 1:57.3. Bakker likely would have finished first, but he fell early in the race.

Robert Pierpoint of Montreal won the high jump with a leap of 6-6, the same height as Daniel St. Hilaire of Montreal. Pierpoint was awarded first because he made the height on his second attempt, while Hilaire did it on his third.

Peter Richardson of Fredericton, N.B., won the 3,000-metre race in 8:35.6.

Bigelow was second in the men's 200-metre race with a time of 22.3 and Kennedy placed third in 22.8. Winning time was 22.2.

Bruno Paoletto of Montreal took second in the men's discus with a toss of 138-4. The winning distance was 141-6.

In the triple jump, Richard Lecombe of Montreal was second with a leap of 46-4½, just behind the winning mark of 46-5½. Richard Rock of Toronto was fourth with a leap of 46-1½.

With two rocks in the house and last rock, Somerville had one stone about two feet in front of the rings. Gambling on making the game out of reach, he clipped the side of the front stone to carry it into the house along with his own rock.

It looked all over, but he missed, rolling with a steal of two on the next end.

Jan Ullsten, skip of the Swedish rink, had trouble with his draws and seemed to have difficulty reading the fast ice.

His front end—lead Bengt Bredin, second Lars Grahn and third Tom Berggren—was well off, apparently having a letdown after knocking Canada out with an 8-7 win over Hec Gervais in the semi-final.

Nevertheless, the Swedes were pleased about getting to the final. The rink has played in only one other competition together.

"I didn't expect them to get this far," said Kjell Oscarius, 1972 world champion from Sweden. "Now I think they and all Swedish curlers are pleased with this showing."

Last year, Harvey Maxinko of Regina was undefeated going into the final. When he lost there was some criticism of the format of the tournament sponsored by Air Canada.

Curling experts said that the system whereby a team could have a 10-1 record and still not be champions wasn't fair. This year the Swiss found themselves in the same position as Maxinko, losing only once, and lost the final.

In a curling Federation meeting today, however, that he didn't U.S.A.

Miller Not Ready To Challenge Jack

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Johnny Miller has won four golf tournaments this year and $149,166, a record for this stage of the season, but the U.S. Open champion isn't ready to challenge Jack Nicklaus as the games' premier performer.

"Maybe when I win 10 more major titles and he's 45, maybe then I'll say I'm better than he is," Miller, 26, said after his victory Sunday in the $300,000 Heritage Classic.

Miller, the leader all the way, coasted with a one-under-par 70 and won the $40,000 first prize by three strokes on the 6,655-yard Harbour Town Golf Links.

Gibby Gilbert was second with a three-under 69 for 279 followed by Richard Crawford 70—280, Tim Ellis 69—281, Lanny Thompson 70—282, and Tom Weiskopf, Homero Blancas and Jeff Floyd tied at 283. Weiskopf slipped to a 72, Blancas had a 67 and Floyd had a 65, matching the course record.

Arnold Palmer and Gary Player tied at 287. Palmer with a last-round 73, Player with 70.

Nicklaus and Lee Trevino didn't compete.

A nude man and woman streaked through a sand trap on the 16th while Miller was striding down the fairway. He gave the laughing pair only a glance as they disappeared into a grove of cypress trees.

Miller's 72 third round Saturday included a hole in one.

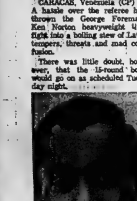
Pre-fight Problems But Bout Will Go On

CARACAS, Venezuela (CP) — A battle over the referee has thrown the George Foreman-Ken Norton heavyweight title fight into a boiling stew of faint-tempers, threats and mad confusion.

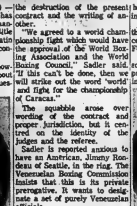
There was little doubt, however, that the 15-round bout would go on as scheduled Tuesday night.

The squabble arose over wording of the contract and proper jurisdiction, but it centred on the identity of the Judges and the referee.

Sadler is reported anxious to have an American, Jimmy Rondeau of Seattle, in the ring. The Venezuelan Boxing Commission insists that this is its private prerogative. It wants to designate a set of purely Venezuelan officials.



Sadler argued that this was against the agreement which he said specified that jurisdiction would be in the hands of the Venezuelans but all rules would have to be approved by the two world governing bodies, WBA and WBC.



The WBA backed the Venezuelan commission, a WBA affiliate. But Raymond Velasquez, head of the rival WBC, balked.

"Each of the three bodies — the WBA, WBC and the commission — should pick one official," he said, supporting the Foreman camp.

A WBA spokesman grumbled: "Sadler wants his own referee, the referee he his man can hold and his his opponent when he's down the destruction of the present contract and the writing of an other."

"We agreed to a world championship fight which would have the approval of the World Boxing Association and the World Boxing Council," Sadler said. "If this can't be done, then we will strike out the word 'World' and fight for the championship of Caracas."

KEN NORTON

GEORGE FOREMAN

Dick Sadler, Foreman's fiery Rtile trainer, showed up at a scheduled afternoon meeting Sadler but almost immediately stalked out again.

An executive of the World Boxing Association said Sadler would be fined. Another official threatened to vacate Foreman's title. Sadler called it hurried a news conference and called

If that dispute is settled, another is waiting in the wings. The challenger was popping mad at the announcement that Foreman already has signed to fight Muhammad Ali in Zaire this fall for purses of $5 million each.

The disclosure Sunday by Hank Schwartz, vice-president of Video Techniques Inc. of New York, that negotiations were completed a few days ago for the Foreman-Ali fight, sparked a confrontation between Schwartz and Bob Biron, one of Norton's four co-managers.

Biron told Schwartz in a meeting at Polideo Arena that the announcement two days before the fight was a discourtesy to Norton, in effect robbing light of his title chances.

Schwartz responded to Biron what he had told reporters earlier: That Video Techniques had good relations with Norton's camp and if he should beat Foreman, "we would like to make a deal for him to defend against Ali in Kinshasa."

This did not seem to appease Biron. He told Schwartz Norton would be interested only "if the money is right."

Two Slain At Windsor

WINDSOR (CP) — Police said two persons were slain in separate incidents Saturday. A 32-year-old woman is a stabbing and a male cab driver who was beaten to death.

A man has been arrested in connection with the death of Susan Caughan, who was stabbed during an argument.

Early Sunday, the body of the cab driver was found in a field. He had been reported missing Saturday after his cab was found abandoned.

Police identified the man as James Hickey, 32. They said he died as a result of blows to the head.

Baboon Free

MONTREAL (CP) — A baboon got away from his Park Safari African contortions Saturday, leading police, firemen and other would-be captors on a hectic chase through the downtown area before being brought down.

The year-old male took leave from a camping display at downtown Place Bonaventure, scampering down city streets to a perch on the roof of a nearby building.

His pursuers joined him and the runaway baboon ostracized them back to the street, where he was subdued with a tranquilizer gun by a park worker.

Fear Shortage

DETROIT (AP) — United States anti-pollution standards that will force most 1975-model cars to use unleaded gasoline may hurt auto sales, U.S. automakers say.

Their main concern is whether sufficient unleaded gas will be available. All General Motors, Ford and possibly Chrysler cars will be affected.

The tougher emission standards will require dealers to sell only unleaded gas for cars with platinum catalytic converters.

Beaupre Dies

MONTREAL (CP) — T. N. Beaupre, 57, chairman and president of Dentar Ltd., died here Sunday after a lengthy illness.

Three Drown

SUDBURY (CP) — Joseph Henry, 43, Jacqueline McColeman, 20, and Robert Lemieux, 25, all of Sudbury, were drowned Saturday when the snowmobiles they were riding went through ice on the French River, about 40 miles south of here.

Girl Abducted

EAST PALATICA, Fla. (AP) — A six-year-old girl was abducted from her bed before dawn Saturday, raped and left on a railway track where a freight train hurled over her body without touching her, police said. Charged with rape and false imprisonment was Jackie Gentry, 17, of East Palatka, authorities said.

Talks Held

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Officials of the Newfoundland government and Brinco met during the weekend at Premier Frank Moores home in an apparent effort to find an alternative to a government-legislated takeover of the company.

There was no immediate comment on the talks.

Chou Critical

PEKING (Reuter) — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai acclaimed the Soviet Union and the United States Sunday night of trying to dominate the world and accused China's conviction that both are doomed to fall.

He spoke at a state banquet in Peking's Great Hall of the People in honor of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, who arrived earlier Sunday for a state visit.

Secretary Finds Cheque For $2,803,914 and 75 Cents

NEW YORK (AP) — A 24-year-old secretary found a cheque in a Wall Street parking lot and immediately began spending it—in her mind.

"I decided to give some to the ASPCA, some to cancer, buy a house, give some to people, and put on concerts . . . where kids would only have to pay $3 to cover costs instead of $12 like you have to pay now," said Helene Michel.

But she called the payee, J. J. Kenny, a brokerage, and some one came round to pick up the cheque. A spokesman for Schroder Trust, the bank on which the cheque was drawn, said it had been dropped by a Kenny messenger.

No, she couldn't have cashed it, since it was payable to a company," he said, "but to lose a cheque that large kind of shakes people up."

The cheque was for $2,803,914 and 75 cents." Mrs. Michel said. The reward $25. CNTU.

Munro Favors Probe Of Railway Pensions

WINNIPEG (CP) — Federal Labor Minister John Munro reiterated Sunday he is in favor of a complete inquiry into rail-way pensions.

However, the minister told a national meeting of Canadian National Railways locomotive engineers their pension plan is already better than the public service plan. He said this is because the pension plans for both major railways are based on the best five years of service, while the public service plan is based on the best six.

Mr. Munro said he felt both the rail unions and the major railways, CNR and CPR, produced valid suggestions in last year's contract negotiations on pensions.

Blaming misunderstanding of the complicated pension system, the minister suggested all railway employees "rely on information from their unions and not on rumors that may well be misleading."

During last year's negotiations, for the first time pensions became the subject of bargaining industry-wide.

Mr. Munro said real complications developed because of differences between the CN and CP Rail pensions, and the efforts to bring them into line and improve on them at the same time.

The rail workers, represented by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, have expressed dissatisfaction with the current pension plan because it lacks an escalation clause and survivor benefits are too low.

Poppies Grown

ISTANBUL (AP) — Turkey has resumed opium poppy cultivation, breaking a three-year ban imposed at the insistence of the United States, an Istanbul newspaper reports. The Turkey government maintains that the current crop will be confined to preserving high-quality poppy stock for medical use.

Mummy Found

SAN JUAN (Reuter) — A man's mummified body estimated to be about 4,000 years old has been found in perfect condition by an archeological expedition in the Calingasta zone near this west Argentine city, San Juan University said Sunday.

Trawler Sinks

PORT DOVER, Ont. (CP) — Two Port Dover brothers were presumed drowned Sunday when their fishing trawler capsized and sank in 10-foot waves on wind-blown Lake Erie as another vessel looked on helplessly.

Missing are Dale Perry, 29, and his brother Wayne, 30, commercial fishermen trawling for smelt in the 45-foot log Aleida II, out of this town about 10 miles southeast of Simcoe.

Honesty Not Enough

LONDON (AP) — Honesty and being good at arithmetic are no longer enough to land a job in a British bank clerk.

Young men today also need to be immaculately groomed, says Barclays Bank, one of Britain's largest.

And to help young clerks look their best, the bank is teaching its newly-hired employees 18 to 24 years old everything from how to wave their hair to methods of avoiding dandruff.

The beauty course is part of a five-day training session for cashiers about to face the public for the first time. They are shown how to shampoo and blow dry their hair and to look after their skin, particularly after "handling all that dirty money."

They are even urged to buy shirts the same color as their eyes.

The bank says it is all part of presenting the right bank image.

What do Barclays' competitors say?

A spokesman for Lloyd's bank says: "We don't have a course like this because we don't need it—we don't have scruffy clerks."

Fight Inflation

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's three major labor federations agreed Saturday to form a common front to fight inflation, but the effort appeared shattered by failure to reach an agreement on a one-day general strike for May.

The Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU) governing council adopted a resolution calling for a one-day mass walkout May 1 if the government has not acted by then to take concrete steps to protect workers from the effects of inflation.

The CNTU sent couriers to the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) and Quebec Teachers Corp. (QTC) councils—meeting nearby—informing them of their decision.

But the QFL and QTC were not ready to go as far as the CNTU.

In these days of soaring costs it's good to know that . . .

Kennedy Thinks Curbs Reasonable

TORONTO (CP) — United States Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said Sunday if he were a political leader in Canada he would consider controls on the influx of U.S. investment "completely understandable."

Speaking in a television interview, he said business interest in the U.S. should not be threatened because Canadians want to "rule their own destiny."

Senator Kennedy said he understands Canada's concern over energy resources and the possibility that Canadians may have to place "restrictions on what they are going to export.

"I think that is a very natural type of emotion and one which we in the United States ought to understand and not feel threatened," he said.

The senator, appearing on CFTO-TV here in a program taped in Washington, said he opposed suggestions in the U.S. Senate in January that retaliation might be taken against Canada because of Canada's increased oil export tax. He is satisfied that talk of retaliation has diminished, he added.

Nevertheless, Canadian oil and gas will still be in demand in the U.S. despite the U.S. policy of self-sufficiency in energy sources, he said.

Asked whether controls should be placed on U.S. capital coming into Canada, he replied:

"If I were a political figure in the north, in Canada, I think that would be completely understandable," but he added that some persons in the U.S. would consider such controls a hostile act.

On the question of draft evaders now in Canada, Senator Kennedy said he always has felt they should be given amnesty and the U.S. should stop its "policy of recrimination."

Picketing

BRAMPTON (CP) — spokesman for the United Steelworkers of America said Sunday Brampton Aluminum Products Ltd. will be picketed today by workers laid off at a Toronto plant.

The spokesman said the workers are protesting the closing of the Toronto plant of Trailwind Products Division of Indal Products of Canada, which also owns the Brampton company.

Preaches From Roof

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Rev. Stephen Thornton climbed to the roof of his church Sunday and delivered his sermon.

"My gestures this morning will be weird because I'm not used to preaching under these circumstances," the 23-year-old minister told about 150 parishioners.

Thornton had promised the offbeat service as an incentive for his congregation to enroll Sunday school ranks to 125 at the Ocean View Church of Christ.

"It was difficult to decide what to preach about since I do not usually preach from the rooftop," Thornton said. He decided on a sermon based on the Bible story in which the Apostle Peter addressed multitudes from a rooftop.

His congregation gave him a musical sendoff—a chorus of Nearer My God to Thee.

Pre-budget Spree Staged by Britons

LONDON (CP) — Britain went on a spending spree during the weekend, hoping to beat tax increases expected in the Labor government's first budget since resuming power early this month.

Department stores, discount houses, jewelers and liquor stores all reported a roaring Saturday trade. A London liquor group reported sales up by 50 per cent. A big store chain said radio and TV sales were up more than 70 per cent.

The buyers were clearly expecting an austerity package from Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, in his budget speech Tuesday. Healey's task is to push exports up, contain inflation, cope with the increased oil import bill and restore overseas confidence in the pound.

He is pledged to ease direct taxation on the lower-paid, increase old-age pensions from the present £8 ($18.80) a week level to £10 ($23.50) and curb real estate speculators whose soaring profits have made them the target of all politicians.

Heavy taxes on higher incomes, luxury goods and capital gains are expected in the budget.

Higher duties on wine, liquor and tobacco—already heavily taxed—curbs on windfall profits through property development and new imports on business are widely predicted.

But a wealth tax threatened in the Labor party's election manifesto is expected to be deferred.

The new minister in speeches as "shadow" chancellor, promised a redistribution of wealth calculated to make the rich howl with pain, but most observers agree that lack of time for detailed studies will force Healey to delay his proposed new taxes on incomes above £20,000 until autumn.

Share values on the London Stock Exchange have dropped by millions of dollars recently in expectation of Labor moves.

Economists have urged Healey to produce a neutral budget designed to avoid a recession.

Oyster Spats Prepared

Scallop shells laden with oyster spats are prepared for rafts that will be placed in cool waters of the Bras d'Or Lakes and around the coast of Cape Breton Island. The rafts are owned by oyster farm co-operatives. Oyster farms are one of several areas of interest being fostered by the Cape Breton Development Corp. (CP Photo)

Oyster, Sheep, Trout Farms Among Plans in Cape Breton

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Sheep farms, oyster farms and trout farms all produce commodities that are highly valued by consumers.

They are some areas of interest to the Cape Breton Development Corp. (Devco), a special kind of investor in new jobs to help the economy of the island portion of Nova Scotia.

Devco is a federal Crown corporation, established in 1968 to aid the ailing economy of Cape Breton.

With Devco, this island that was once dependent on coal mining and steel making now has an agency concerned with developing other readily available resources.

Coal is still very much a part of the economy of this island but Devco wants to see other areas of potential developed as well.

With scenery Cape Breton says is unrivalled in Canada, a historic background centred at the old French fortress in Louisbourg, the Alexander Graham Bell Museum at Baddeck and the coal mining history evident in communities once busy with activity, for tourist development is extensive.

Devco also wants to see Cape Bretoners become involved in small industry and agriculture.

Devco's primary production department was established to enable Cape Bretoners to take advantage of farming opportunities not only for local consumption but also for lucrative export markets.

A flourishing sheep industry has been stabilized and hopes to expand significantly in the future.

David Newton, the head of the department, said the basic point of Devco's interest in sheep is to provide technical assistance to farmers interested in producing them.

Production of sheep in Nova Scotia is less than half the consumption of 50,000 a year and that fact alone bothers Mr. Newton.

He noted there were as many as 100,000 sheep on the island only a century ago and that while the numbers had declined, the export of the sheep was still high.

Devco has bought a farm where some 250 head are raised and uses it as a training centre for sheep farmers and provides information to any farmers who want it.

In addition, the Cape Breton Sheep Producers Association works in co-ordinate available information to help farmers, increase their herds and production.

Devco established a small tannery to experiment with methods for processing hides of the sheep as a side industry.

The wool is not of sufficient quality to warrant much work in development, Mr. Newton said.

There is the potential of the Bras d'Or Lakes for oyster production.

For years oysters had been harvested from the lake that spills Cape Breton in two, but the methods used were those of hunters rather than farmers.

The problem was that the technology and the needed capital were not available.

Devco has been able to foster an interest in oyster farming by encouraging the development of co-operatives and today there are more than 300 members in 12 such groups.

It is hoped that more than 15,000 bushels of the delicacy will be marketable by 1975.

The corporation hopes to see its own role diminished as the groups running the co-operatives gain experience.

The oyster farms have led to experiments that led the corporation to believe trout farming would be another potential for development.

Devco researchers were so impressed with two years of scientific enterprise that this year the corporation plans to open a hatchery where trout will be farmed.

Trout will be raised in hatchery conditions and then transferred in stages to increasing salt water conditions until they can be kept in cages in the Bras d'Or Lakes.

Devco is also a leading agency that has financed several other secondary industries including mineral exploration, fish processing and manufacturing.

The corporation is involved in tourism, ecology, education, surveys real estate, and community development schemes.

To help provide reasons for tourists to remain in Cape Breton longer than they normally do, Devco introduced a comprehensive development program in 1972 to improve information services on the island.

Tourist literature was produced and information booths were built in strategic locations.

In 1973 the corporation opened a short rail line and used an old locomotive and passenger cars to provide tourists with a tour of the industrial area of Cape Breton.

And there is the involvement with the Highland Heights Inn at Iona, the centre of the Bras d'Or system.

The facility is the first commercial development in the area and Devco officials hope it will be the forerunner of many others.

Restaurants and accommodation for tourists are also part of the tourism development program.

The corporation gives scholarships to deserving students, and has provided summer employment for students in a number of areas.

East Coast Seal Hunt Dwindles

HALIFAX (CP) — The annual hunt for seals off Canada's east coast is under way but decreasing participation by landsmen, sealers who operate from land bases, and the virtual disappearance of big ships have reduced it to a token industry.

The hunt officially began March 7 in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and off Labrador with the main activity by Canadians confined to ice floes around the Magdalen Islands and off Newfoundland's northeast coast.

For the first time in more than 100 years, no large Newfoundland vessel was sent to the ice; last year only one made the trip to the Front, the name given to an area of the Labrador Sea where breeding seals drift by the coast on the spring ice.

The day the hunt began, two vessels set out from Halifax. They will share, if their luck is good, the quota of 60,000 animals set by the federal government. In 1973, five Canadian ships managed to take only 23,000 seals.

A fleet of Norwegian vessels is expected on the Front but their numbers are not known. The sealers have been agreed to take only 60,000 seals.

None of the big ships will hunt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where the quota is 30,000 seals. The Gulf is reserved for landsmen and hunters operating from vessels 65 feet in length or under.

The hunters are after the young harp seals—pups 10 days or younger—that are prized for their soft white pelt and must be taken within 10 days of birth because the whiteness dulls each day afterwards and their dingy shade of grey is unwanted by furriers.

Each hunter—about 1,300 are licensed to hunt from the Magdalen Islands—pays a nominal fee of $1 for the right to continue a tradition and business that made a handful of men wealthy but has left a bare living to the actual hunters.

Owners of small vessels pay $5 for the right to send their small wooden craft into the leads or opening in the ice before dropping the hunters, or bawlers, on the bobbing pans.

The larger ships cost their owners a fee based on a ton: after acquisition (then confiscation) of a portion of the ship's weight.

Besides being under the constant watch of federal fisheries officers whose job is to see that quotas are not exceeded and that the seals are killed according to regulations, the hunt is under constant criticism from conservationists.

This year, as in previous years, the most vociferous opponent of the hunt is in the gulf area pressing his case against the sealers.

Brian Davies, executive director of the International Fund for Animal Welfare, began his campaign eight years ago after seeing pictures of seal pups, allegedly being skinned alive.

Mr. Davis at first confined his protest to press releases and a filmin of alleged brutality by hunters.

But in the last two years he has promoted visits to the gulf area by tourists to coordinate anti-hunt activities.

Saskatchewan's Kim Thorson Quietly Grabs Federal Aid

REGINA (CP) — While other provincial politicians hit the headlines regularly with blasts against Ottawa and each other, Saskatchewan's industry minister rarely emerges except to announce completion of yet another agreement to bring federal money into the province.

At 42, Kim Thorson has developed a special talent for steering development proposals through the bureaucratic and political nests of federal-provincial relations.

He has occasionally suffered a pikperrydal—when many months of much-publicized negotiations to set up a Romanian tractor plant fell through. But offsetting those have been days like the recent one when he announced that the area eligible for federal regional incentive grants will be extended to cover all Saskatchewan.

Setbacks can hardly dismay one who at 34 became Canada's youngest member of a legislature, was spoken of as next premier of Saskatchewan, then met electoral defeat at 38 and all but disappeared from the provincial political scene for the next 11 years.

During those 11 years, he developed a pragmatic, low-key style that has been his hallmark since returning to the legislature in November, 1971, and becoming minister of industry and commerce a month later.

He has learned what kind of approach has the best chance of warming the frigid heart of Ottawa bureaucrats:

"Harsh words or slamming the table, I think, are not likely to get us far.

"But well-developed proposals with all of the implications analysed and presented in order to be capable of being managed—and the dollar figures nicely attached—I think can result in some very worthwhile assistance coming to Saskatchewan."

In an interview, he pointed out the equality of economic opportunity as the most important problem of Confederation.

"Unless there is some equality and justice in that sense, I don't think there is any great value in Canadian unity.

"I'm quite happy to see all kinds of diversity in language and religion. That's fine.

"But all kinds of diversity in economic conditions is not fine. It's not acceptable."

Despite increasing federal involvement in regional development, he said Ottawa is not yet ready to make it a national objective to slow down the population and economic growth of central Canada in order to help the slower-growing underdeveloped provinces.

If regional growth rates are to be changed, he said, the federal government must be willing to take the political flak.

But "it's still part of the gospel of the Liberal party that the least government is the best government" in economic issues.

His criticism comes not on ideological grounds, but on pragmatic ones.

In Saskatchewan, he has been accused by various groups of being too friendly to the federal Liberals and insufficiently socialist.

He freely admits to being "ecumenically hung up about philosophies."

His style is cost-benefit analysis, not what he describes as the "missionary zeal" of doctrinaire people who "can't consider alternative methods of reaching goals."

"I think of myself as a pragmatist and I try to analyze a situation in as real terms as possible. . . .

"People who are more philosophical in their approach are less concerned with those things I deal on to measure objectively. They are more concerned with subjective things."

If the objective analysis shows a specific opportunity can best be exploited by a profit-seeking private company, he said, that approach should not be ruled out on ideological grounds.

In his first major legislature speech after being appointed minister, he said flatly "we expect our businessmen to make a profit."

That statement—heresy to some New Democrats—still is quoted against him, but not what he said in the next breath:

"Let me say also to the businessmen that while we expect them to want to make a profit we also expect them to play the game according to certain rules so that when he hires people a businessman will pay reasonable, maintain proper labor standards. He should not expect to make profit by exploiting the people who work for him."

The record seems clear "those people who are looking for a free ride, for concessions or opportunities for a quick buck without making a contribution to our long term goals need not come to Saskatchewan."

While increasing incentive grants to businesses, Mr. Thorson played a major role in helping extend government ownership and control of the provincial economy. The controversial potash legislation to control oil profits came while he was also minister of mineral resources, a portfolio since taken over by former finance minister Elwood Cowley.

He sees no point in arguments about the merits of absolute socialism and absolute free enterprise, calling such arguments sterile.

He once told a group of oilmen "when people use those terms, whether they be spokesmen for the left or the right, their main purpose is to arouse emotions and obscure issues."

"I do not see such terms in my discussions."

Despite that rational, pragmatic approach, his first appearance in the legislature was a realistic prologue of fiery T. C. Douglas.

Mr. Thorson came almost straight from university to the legislature, winning the Prince Albert seat in 1956. He had grown up on a farm at Macoun, 17 miles from Estevan, obtained a bachelor of science degree in agriculture, travelled one summer in Europe and West Africa on a scholarship, returned for graduate work in economics and then worked in 1955 for the provincial economic advisory and planning board.

During the four-year legislature term, he was approached by some NDP MLAs as a possible successor to Premier Douglas.

When the results of the 1960 elections were in, the premier said "I feel particularly badly about Kim Thorson (being defeated) because he is a young man and undoubtedly had a brilliant public career ahead of him."

"But he still is quite young and I have no doubt that he will yet make an outstanding contribution to the political life of Saskatchewan."

In his legislature speech, the 34-year-old Thorson had described his concept of democracy as the need for "respect for human personality" and "economic power to be regarded as a public trust to be used for the general benefit and not for the creation of special privileges at others' expense."

Defeat, he went back to university for a law degree, set up practice in Estevan and developed a farm to bring a family and participating in local organizations.

He did not run again until Ross Brown had regained the seat for the NDP, only to die a few months later and necessitate a byelection.

Friends urged him to run. "I could have said no but it would have been letting a lot of people down."

His active community involvement paid off when Liberal Leader Dave Steuart spoke to a local rally and cast aspersions on Mr. Thorson's personal stability. That, Mr. Thorson says, cost the Liberals votes.

"I hope I'm not being immodest but you can't get away with that in Estevan. You can't say things like that to Estevan people. Rational and sound credible."

With All Hell for Basement, Medicine Hat Is Now Booming

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — For a city that has had "all hell for a basement" for the past 70 years, Medicine Hat has been a quiet place.

But things are beginning to hum in what used to be a contented stop for travellers on the Trans-Canada Highway, with the petrochemical industry scrambling for a piece on the vast reserves of natural gas beneath the southern Alberta community.

The natural gas—discovered in the 1890s by drowned Indian-turned Kipling's "all hell for a basement"—has been the only little else for Medicine Hat, which now is mainly dreary farm centre. The gas was not all that attractive in a time of abundant energy resources.

Then came the energy crisis, which made seven Medicine Hats' slow-revealed natural gas a precious commodity. Suddenly the petrochemical industry suddenly decided that Medicine Hat was an ideal location.

The boom has reached the stage of putting the city in actually talking about controlling growth. Officials have decided not to sell any more city-owned gas as a petrochemical feedstock and are studying alternatives to gas-fired electricity generation.

An acute labor shortage has developed and Alderman Ted Grimm, chairman of city council's utilities committee, the community in such areas as construction, trucking, food, transportation and services.

"A lot of small businesses did not continue," said Mr. Beaubien. "To many French-Canadians, business was not what it means to an end, not an end in itself."

They took as much as possible out of business as a profession, a good life for themselves and "they were a lot." But they missed less preoccupation than the English-language milieu with spending money, management succession" independent of the oldest.

Mr. Beaubien took a degree at Master of Business Administration at Laval, where he met Nan-bowes O'Connell of Boston, whom he made his wife.

Though the oldest son, he left the electrical business founded by his father and entered as a management consultant throughout Canada. He founded a distribution company, operating 120 trucks in Quebec and Ontario, and sold it in 1965.

"I was in the midst of buying another company when the Expo offer came," said the man who was to supervise a part of it that was to be saved to the Order of Canada for his work on the world exposition.

"They told me they needed a crazy French-Canadian for the job," Mr. Beaubien recalled, moustache slanting in a mischievous grin.

The Expo adventure continued into that Canada's two cultural mainstreams can do great things if they manage to preserve the confidence to work together.

"I agree that sounds corny, but I really mean it," said Mr. Beaubien. Expo was a great success because it brought the best of the two traditions together.

"In fact, I think we have already done more in our country than Expo did in many areas where else, regardless of the problems that exist between the two groups. We are a heck of a lot closer than England is to France, if one can make that comparison."

Mr. Beaubien said he admires Mr. Desmarais and his partner Paul Desmarais, Jean Parisien, as French-Canadians practising an aggressive economic role.

He is also grateful to them for being "more open with me" during a period when his financial backing for the Trudeau purchase faded because of a published report said he was acting as a "front" for Desmarais interests. He left the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

"They personally have to lay the payments," said Mr. Beaubien. "They let me make a little bit." He admires what people say, they have nothing to do with my personal decisions. They have no directive to the board. There is no way they can get involved."

Mr. Beaubien said one branch of the partners' Rock Demers, an experienced businessman, is executive vice-president to help rebuild the company, which had been shaken by personality differences.

But two of the properties had been in the family.

"Today Telemedia has turned around every one of those properties and made them profitable," said Mr. Beaubien. "It has been a hard time, but we have become an international force in the broadcasting community. We've formed a network and we've established our own news service."

Besides CFAC, the properties are CKLT and CKDS and CKVL in Montreal, CJSS-TV, Rimouski, CJBR-TV, Rimouski, CJSN, Trois-Rivieres; and CKCH, Hull-Ottawa. Staff totals 825.

"I don't think one man can control information today," Mr. Beaubien said in reply to questions. "There is no way I could go into the news room of one of those stations and tell anybody what should be said or pushed."

Expo's Boss TV Executive

MONTREAL (CP) — The executive with the Gallic goatee looks, most the and subdued businessman suit dressed in from the round table where he was sketching the future of his empire.

"You catch me in the middle of my 10-year plan," was the smiling greeting of Philippe de Gaspe Beaubien, president of the board chairman of Telemedia (Quebec) Ltd., a 25-million dollar communications empire of eight French-language radio and television stations headed by Hull-Ottawa station and Rimouski.

Mr. Beaubien is one of a crop of new men in Quebec's media ownership ranks and he came to the field after four years as operations director—vice-president of Expo 67, a family heritage of 300 years in business that has been the subject of many trails since student days.

His temperament, I am never completely relaxed," said Mr. Beaubien, moving from the table to the desk in Montreal's CFAC, which he controls with the other French-language radio station in the world, Quebec City's 15th anniversary last year.

President of the 365-member Canadian Association of Broadcasters, the slim executive told an interviewer of his sense of responsibility as an interpreter of attitudes between French and English linguistic groups.

Chairman of the Sports Council of Canada and president of Sports Participation 2001, he is active in the program to persuade spectators to get off their behinds and their butts" and look lively for a change.

He keeps fit himself by hiking some four miles from his home to CFAC every day and tries to take part in weekend sports with his three school children.

The Harvard-educated scion of a distinguished family — "I'm proud of a renegade" — broke with French-Canadian nationalism over the family business and launching out on several ventures of his own.

He described Telemedia as "a very successful business operation purchased for $19 million a decade ago and a future from Paul Desmarais, chairman of the conglomerate Power Corp. and the company moved into the communications industry in a big way in the late 1960s.
